P.D. Notebook

(by Eric Norberg, KEX-Portland)

One of the major reasons why radio programming has seemed to be something less than an exact science has been the phenomenon of stations that do a lot of things wrong succeeding, and some doing everything right and still failing. A lot of second-guessing goes on to try to explain these, but the explanations do not help us to predict future cases. I did my first programming more or less by the seat of my pants, coming up with occasionally unorthodox ideas because they seemed "right", but leaving me unable to explain more fully what I was doing.

I've devoted a lot of thought since to trying to understand why it worked - why any radio format works or does not - so that I could more flexibly and intelligently program in the future. I came up with a "philosophy of radio" that seems to provide a plausible explanation for all programming successes and failures I've attempted to apply it to so far, and I thought I'd share it with you.

It deals with the role radio plays in the life of the listener. I believe the role is that of a "cultural lens"...providing a means by which an individual relates to the culture of which he or she is a part, on an individual level. Spoken content is a literal reflection of the society; music is a metaphor for it. (And that may better define the exact way in which oldies work - a quite different effect than current records; far more than simply "familiarity" is at work when they are being successfully programmed.) All-news stations, and their news/features mix, have a very direct effect - like a newspaper. Music stations have a less direct, more metaphorical and mood-inducing effect - more like a magazine.

Contemporary music stations reflect the pop culture in all its diversity and rapid change. Top 40 stations reflect it from the viewpoint of those who are creating the pop culture - the youth (which is why they have always had considerable appeal to adults, too, who like to feel they are not being left behind by the direction of society); the DJ's reflect this attitude. Adult contemporary stations mirror the pop culture, but from the standpoint of the receptive observer rather than the creator (and that explains why with virtually the same music as the top 40 station, A/C stations have considerably different demographics).

Country music stations represent an adult viewpoint, people-oriented, and with an emphasis on more-traditional values - the pop culture through a filter. Progressive rock and successive similar formats present the pop culture through a more eclectic point of view - for young adults who are part of it but like to feel, as they mature, that they transcend it. Ethnic stations reinforce cultural identity for the groups they serve.

Top 40 stations are more song-oriented, since artists are identified with what they produce and thus tend to represent a fixed (and always rapidly receding) point in time in the development of the culture. Adult formats are more inclined to be artist-oriented. The artist is as important as the song in the cultural echo that an "oldie" represents, however.

A station can correctly reflect its chosen cultural viewpoint and still fail, if it does not appear to reflect the status of that viewpoint in its own community. News, particularly local news, is very useful in accomplishing this - but DJ content has to be relevant to the community as well as the culture to be most effective.

This philosophy of radio has been very helpful to me in developing not only formats but individual programming elements as well. It's simple, easy to apply, and it seems to work.

FREE BOOZE

Last Thursday (26), KONO-San Antonio, presented what it called "The World's Biggest Dallas Cowboys Party". Listeners were invited to view the telecast of the Cowboys-Vikings game at one of four clubs, with KONO picking up the tabs for all the refreshments. (Too bad the Cowboys didn't win, to make the happiness complete.)

Albums of the Week

WALK

From Mt. Vernon, Washington, Jim Alan reports that three staffers from KBRC joined the Walk-a-Thon in the wet and cold - raised over $10,000.

SEARCH

In Yuba City, California, KOBQ completed its most involved promotion ever - "The Last Great Search For Dr. Livingston". Clues to different sketches were given out on the air, and the holder of the one matching the original "Doctor" won an all expense 8 days in Hawaii.

SAD LOSS

Kansas City mourns the recent death of KCMO sportscaster Bruce Rice, one of the city's most loved personalities.

TALL TOWER

Bill McCown, PD of WANS (AM/FM)- Anderson, S.C. writes us that the FCC has approved the construction of a new 1,000 foot tower for the FM facility.

AWARD

For its news coverage of the capture of David Berkowitz, "Son of Sam" suspect, WNBC-New York received the state's A.P. Broadcasters' Association first place award.

Gary Taylor's Personal Picks

FIRE-Pointer Sisters (Planet) The combustible talent of the Pointers and Perry is the spark that ignites this Bruce Springsteen composition.

DANCING IN THE CITY-Marshall Hain (Harvest) Intriguing drum work, relatable lyrics and a strong production highlight this unknown (what or who is a Marshall Hain?) record.

Our resident vinyl experts are totally in the dark about the artist, and that's a first.
