Musicians Look for the Silver Lining

By JOSEPH N. WEBER

President of the American Federation of Musicians

(Reprinted from THE METRONOME:)

D ROFESSIONAL music is in higher favor with the American public today than ever before, and yet the rofessional musician was never in worse light economically. This paradox inubitably exists and, strangely enough, only partially due to the depression. or should it be laid to the sinister achinations of any particular group. It simply the result of a combination of roumstances, badly ensnarled to the detriment of the entire field of amuseent enterprise.

Evidence abounds that the public in rge cities and small is clamoring for lesh-and-blood entertainment and iswithin the limits of currently deplenshed pocketbooks—willing to pay for it. The reaction against purely mechanical theatre fare has set in earlier and with even greater force than even we partisan exponents of living entertainment antici-

I am not offering haphazard observations. I can substantiate what I say. The peak of musical employment in theatres was reached in 1928. About two years later it reached its lowest ebb when employment in this quarter had receded to 23 per cent of the peak. Recently the employment of orchestra musicians, exclusive of organists, has increased until it now amounts to nearly 50 per cent of the 1928 peak.

Theatre operators have restored pit rchestras in many cities and the present trend is toward living music and stage presentations or vaudeville.

Here, then, is where the paradox is evealed. With music trickling back into the theatre, even though only half the lost ground has been regained, enough progress in this direction has been made to justify some optimism, or so it would appear. In truth, however, musical employment conditions remain about as bad s ever. The reason at that point is the depression. Employment outside of the theatre is still on the down grade. Dance talls, clubs, restaurants, private and ublic parties and celebrations—all the uman activities for which music is customarily engaged-have felt the cold grasp of hard times.

And with all the public preference for living music, progress in regaining the theatre jobs continues slow. Wherever canned music has been substituted for living music an obstable in the form of money-tied-up has been raised gainst restoration of employment. Canned music has not yet been perfected to the point where it can be turned on ad off like a water tap or electric lights; expensive equipment is necessary for its production. Theatres everywhere have been compelled to install this equipment for talkie projection. Exhibtors were assured in the beginning of the talkie wave that their savings on musicalone would enable payment for sound equipment and increased rental for talkie films. Royalties must be paid on this equipment on all talkies shown and this adds to the exhibitor's overhead. So, there are today many hundreds of theatre operators who recognize the handwriting on the wall, but still feel that they cannot afford living music.

The great chain theatre owners, who are also producers of pictures, are acceding to their patrons' desire for living music in many cities. They are offering about 60 per cent more flesh-and-blood entertainment than they did two years One large vaudeville and picture company found a creditable profit in its vaudeville division last year, while the picture end lost heavily. Financial problems are interfering seriously with showmanship policies in these big concerns, which control a great number of the more representative of the 9,000 theatres in the United States. They are compelled to move slowly, even while they recognize that the policy of dehumanized programs is alienating patronage.

As is generally known, there has been a tremendous dislocation of interests in the theatrical field. Actors, musicians, stage hands, not to mention those who derive their living through booking, arranging, directing and exploiting vaudeville, have suffered grievously. Even the song writers and publishers, who were once shown the promised land of theme songs and musical revue pictures, have lived to see their business sink to new low levels as "sound" (musical) pictures died aborning.

That the public would not easily be divorced from its preference for seeing and hearing performers in the flesh became apparent to informed observers many months ago. Among the manifestations of the public's choice was the sudden popularity of the "tab" show in small towns. These barnstorming groups, of little or no real significance to the theatrical industry, served as straws to show the way the wind was blowing, Throughout the prairie states, towns which had seen no flesh-and-blood shows since the demise of the road show, have welcomed shabby little companiescomedian, straight man, ingenue and six chorus girls-with attendance astounding to the local picture exhibitor. In one rural shopping center an abandoned picture theatre was taken by a dramatic stock company which gave a show for twenty-five cents and packed in the country folk from miles around. Even the old-time "medicine show" has enjoyed a revival in amusement-starved districts. Of course, the true answer to the question of what the public wants is found in stage presentations and vaudeville, or at least in a musical program. The increase in these offerings has been most exceptional when it is considered that the depression has made progress most difficult in any business.

In New York the returning popularity of vaudeville is being demonstrated by the success of the recently inaugurated Lou Holtz show in Warner Brothers' Hollywood Theatre in competition with the Palace Theatre. For the first time in eighteen years Broadway boasts of two first-grade two-a-day vaudeville theatres. Other interests are known to be observing progress of the Hollywood venture, ready to establish similar houses in the metropolitan area if it is shown that the public disposition has been accurately gauged.

Turning from music's economic problem, which of necessity rests in part on theatrical demand, to the artistic side, heartening developments are taking place in many directions. Typical of the reawakened interest in music as a cultural force was the formation of a symphony orchestra of fifty pieces in Macon, Ga., population 53,829, and its reception by a crowd that filled that city's municipal auditorium. W. T. Anderson, publisher of the Macon Telegraph, wrote of this venture:

"The size of Thursday night's audience was a great surprise, and clearly indicated that despite radio and victrola music, there is still an appreciation and demand for that which comes from musicians upon whom we look and with whom we feel as they produce the magnificent harmonies that stir men's souls, from the delicate violin note to the mighty crescendo of the ensemble that sends the blood rushing to the cheeks and finger tips, reaching out and welding audience and performers in one mass of sympathy, thrill and enjoy-

"We have no possible patrons with sufficient wealth to underwrite the work. But possibly that is an advantage. By everybody participating ever so little and developing a loyalty and determination this organization can be made of Macon and by Macon-permanent, a wonderful asset."

Considering that even the largest cities have seldom supported symphonic music without subsidies the undertaking of Macon is quite remarkable, and evidence from other sources in other cities leads me to believe that the spirit of Macon accurately reflects the aspirations and hopes of music lovers throughout the

That music has shown strength in the face of the most devastating attack under which any art ever labored is a cause for rejoicing among music lovers, but we must not make the mistake of assuming that the crisis is past. The resistance against elimination of living music by substitution of canned music has been carried on by those who love music, by the masses who thrill to jazz as well as the classes who prefer more substantial en-This resistance must be continued if the ground gained is not to be lost again. The prime enemy of living music is the low cost of canned music. Demand for the real thing must continue.

It is one of the anomalies of modern civilization that the public can be led in the most extraordinary fashion by skillfully directed mass appeals. Thus we have seen the American citizen give up wheat cakes and biscuits for breakfast in favor of patent cereal foods; we have seen the lowly cigarette emerge from disrepute to respectability and to favor of men and women in all walks. One could go on interminably listing instances in which the miracle of advertising has guided and molded public taste. Fashions. habits of thought and cultural trends are in large measure directed by advertising and publicity. Whether this is a good thing or bad need not concern us here, for we are dealing with a very practical

The grave danger in the canned music menace, which came with the advent of talkies, was early recognized by the Executive Board of the American Federation of Musicians as lying in the powerful exploitation facilities of the motion picture business. Even though millions of Americans knew that they preferred living music to the canned variety it appeared inevitable that they, along with other indifferent millions, would be swept into acceptance of mechanical music if they remained inarticulate in their opposition.

Consider for a moment the hullabaloo that accompanied exploitation of early "sound" pictures. It was promised that the most elaborate musical shows would soon play to the most remote villages simultaneously with their appearance on Broadway, grand opera and symphony concerts were to be made as readily available to the hill folk of Arkansas as to residents of New York and Chicago. Music was henceforth to be a screen contribution of equal importance with the drama. The Hollywood hegira of song writers, singers, vocal instructors, orchestra conductors and famous jazz bands set in. Mr. Arthur Bodanzky, in an excess of enthusiasm, predicted in the Saturday Evening Post that grand opera would soon find its major outlet in the films, which would be a fine thing, he explained, because beautiful film favorites could be photographed in the parts while over-obese but gifted tenors and augular but sweet-voiced sopranos could supply the vocalizing offstage.

Much was made of canned music in movie advertising in those days and musical celebrities, who must have known better, loudly proclaimed that the screening and recording of famous artists would lift the nation overnight into rare cultural heights-and at very little expense. The natural consequence of this phenomenon-that all but a few musical artists and musicians would be forever

"The Moving Finger Writes" About Labor Events

LABORERS FORM UNION-A new local union to be known as the Building Laborers and Hod Carriers' Local has been chartered at Dubuque, Iowa, with Scott Persfield as president. The organiration was perfected through efforts of the Dubuque Trades and Labor Congress.

GERMAN LIVING COST HIGEST IN EUROPE-The cost of living in Germany at the close of 1931 was relatively higher than in any other European country, according to a report from United States Consul John H. Bruins, Hamburg.

With 1931 taken as 100, the index of the cost of living in Germany at the close of the year, according to official statistics, amounted to 133. The index figures for other European countries were: Norway, 125; Great Britain, 120; Italy, 117; France, 115, and Austria, 108.

OPPOSITION TO LEWIS REAF-FIRMED - Opposition to International President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers of America was reaffirmed on February 27 by the Illinois district of the organization in voting to continue enforcement of an injunction restraining him from interferring in Illinois union activities.

Delegates to the International Union convention in Indianapolis in February had asked the injunction be lifted, but the district scale convention defeated the proposition without a roll call.

TO STUDY EFFECTS OF HEAT ON WORKERS-Scientific study of the effects of heat on workers at Hoover Dam will be made this summer by Harvard University scientists, the Bureau of Reclamation, Department of the Interior, announces. Commissioner Mead of the bureau in approving the study said exhaustion, prostrations and death from the excessive heat have raised many problems for the protection of the workers. The temperature at times reaches 128 degrees.

FLORENCE KELLEY MEMORIAL NIGHT-A memorial service in honor of the late Mrs. Florence Kelley, one of the first members of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. will be held at the Washington Conference of the N. A. A. C. P. next May 17 to 22. Mrs. Kelley was one of the group of American liberals who in 1909 signed the Lincoln's Birthday call which brought a conference that eventuated in the formation of the N. A. A. C. P. During the entire history of the association Mrs. Kelley was one of its most active supporters.

COLLECTS PHOTOS OF LOCOMO-TIVES-Eugene Miller of Petersburg, Ind., is said to possess one of the finest collections of locomotive pictures in existence. Miller's collection contains 2,000 pictures, many of them photographed by himself. He traveled more than 10,000 miles to gather them.

COAL-MINE FATALITIES IN JAN-UARY-Accidents in the coal mines of the United States during January caused the death of 90 men, according to reports received from State mine inspectors by the United States Bureau of Mines, Department of Commerce. This was a 50 per cent reduction from the number reported for January last year.

CANADIAN EMPLOYMENT INDEX.

-The index of employment in Canada for February stood at 89.7, or about 30 percent below the peak of 127.8 attained in August, 1929. If part-time was allowed for, the volume of employment would show a greater shrinkage than 30 per cent. The last report on unemployment by the trade unions showed 21.1 per cent of members out of work.

Musicians Look for the Silver Lining

estopped from practising or developing their talent-was passed over lightly with the observation that nothing could prevent the progress of mechanical invention, so any untoward by-products of the great improvement would have to be borne.

k was pretty obvious to an informed observer that this giant-throated ballyhoo would sweep living music into obscurity, at least for a time, unless something was done to make the friends of music articu-The American Federation of Musicians decided to fight fire with fire, so to speak. Its challenge to the cannedmusic proposal was made in the loudest voice available, to wit: advertising. Our copy, warning in the simplest terms against sublimation of mechanical music, was inserted in more than 800 daily newspapers and a dozen magazines of national circulation and ran at intervals over a period of two years at a cost of nearly one million dollars. It served its purpose well. Realizing the limitation on argument in advertisements, we contented ourselves with reiterating under striking illustrations the proposal that canned music lacked the vital spark of living music, that its substitution for the genuine art was a cultural menace and that its acceptance by the public would destroy the future of the art. More than 3,000,000 persons in the United States and Canada responded to the advertised invitation to join the Music Defense League.

A few weeks ago the "Inquiring Reporter" of a New York newspaper interviewed eight persons, selected at random in the street, on the question of whether they thought orchestras should be restored in theatres. Seven of the eight were emphatically of the opinion that they should be restored.

I think all interested observers will accept the statement that the public does want living music restored to theatres.

It is far from my purpose to contend that our advertising campaign alone convinced the American public of the superiority of living music over canned music. My claim is merely that the challenge emblazoned in this campaign defined theissue and enabled the public to take sides. If canned music exploitation had gone unchallenged, true lovers of music might have chafed at the fallacy, but it is only logical to believe that the general public would have accepted the situation, apathetically at first and later with apparent appreciation until at last the uninformed would have cheered it as a boon to the masses. Does that seem farfetched? Well, consider that such eminent authorities as Mr. Walter Damrosch and Mr. Bodanzky, not to mention hundreds of artists with covetous eves on fat Hollywood contracts, did hail it as being just that thing. Promotion of such endorsements flagged as our campaign got under way pointing out the absurdity and, in fact, all exploitation of canned music as a superior product, was dropped.

One unexpected and valuable form of public sympathy for living music has lately been uncovered in connection with the Federation's promotion of a Living Music Day in cities throughout the country. It is the position taken by merchants and other business men toward the dehumanization of the theatre. They feel that the reduced drawing power of theatres, operating on the purely mechanical policy, is hurting their business by reason of the diminished traffic into the shopping (and theatre) district.

We have been astonished as well as pleased with the way the Living Music Day idea has caught on. Briefly, it is a plan whereby the local musicians' union supplies bands and orchestras free to play concerts in leading stores on a given date, the newspaper publishes a Living Music Day supplement to publicize the event and merchants advertise the concerts in that supplement. Out of 600 newspapers to whom the suggestion was mailed, 250 have announced willingness to cop-operate, 25 cities have held Living Music Days and 50 more are completing

As I have said before, plenty of evidence is available to show that the general public of the United States and Canada wants living music, and these signs are very hopeful, indeed. However, there can be no let down in the efforts of music lovers to keep alive this spirit and promote its spread.

LABOR ASKS RIGHTS FOR STATION WCFL

Demands for a cleared channel for radio broadcasting station WCFL, owned and operated by the Chicago Federation of Labor, were voiced by E. N. Nockels, manager of the station and secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor; Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, and others, at a hearing before the Senate Interstate Commerce Commission at Washington. A large delegation of representatives of A. F. of L. and railroad labor representatives attended.

The hearing was held on the Hatfield bill to force the Federal Radio Commission to grant a clear channel license to WCFL. Witnesses charged that the radio commission showed "distinct prejudice" against organized labor in its refusal to grant clear channel to the labor station.

"Our rights and claims have been wholly ignored," Woll told the Senate committee. "The Radio Commission's indicate distinct Therefore, we have been forced to carry our fight to Congress.'

Labor Takes Lead in Many Places in Great Task of Finding Jobs For Million Unemployed

With the battle cry, "Back to the pay rolls," in the war against depression being conducted by the American Legion, American Federation of Labor, Association of National Advertisers and Legion Auxiliary, workers are beginning to "get a break," statistics at the headquarters of the campaign, Hotel Biltmore, New York City, show.

When the campaign entered its fifth week of the colossal drive, approximately 240,000 jobless had been placed on a wage-earning basis, representing 1,329 communities in 44 States.

Organized labor over the country has been heart and soul in the work of finding a million jobs for a million workers, and local unions and central bodies are strongly represented on various committees and in many instances are taking the lead in the work. In San Francisco, the Central Labor Union and the Legionorganized the ciay and the first day collected $39,000 as part of a fund to pay wages for "made" work for the unemployed.

Union's Legal Standing

Up to 1926 trade unions had no legal standing in India. The act of 1926 recognized them as lawful organizations and permitted their registration as such on condition that they furnish audited accounts and that a majority of their officers are actual workers. By registering themselves, unions and their members attain immunity to a certain extent from civil suits and criminal prosecutions, but the greatest benefit is the legal recognition of their validity. Unions are most numerous among transport, government, printing and textile employees. By 1929 there were eightyseven registered unions having 183,000

The Norris-La Guardia Injunction Relief Measure

RGANIZED Labor and its friends regard the passage of the Norris- La Guardia injunction relief measure by the Congress of the United States with feelings of pleasure and satisfaction.

Its passage represents the culmination of years of effort and persistent appeal for the enactment of this character of legislative relief.

As a result of the enactment of this legislation the word freedom will take on new meaning and the Bill of Rights will have added significance for all classes of

No longer will it be possible for corporations to take advantage of the economic necessity of working people by requiring them to sign the "Yellow Dog" contract in order to secure an opportunity to earn a living.

This form of contract, always regarded as un-American by Organized Labor, is rendered null and void and is legally declared to be contrary to public policy.

While it has always been assumed that working people had the right to join a Labor Union the "Yellow Dog" contract has served as a weapon in the hands of corporations opposed to Union Labor to force many workers, against their will, to sign away this right.

This made the "Yellow Dog" contract highly objectionable to Labor and deeply offensive to sound public opinion.

This injunction relief bill also gives legal recognition to the right to organize into Trade Unions and the freedom of association on the part of working people.

This section of the bill will prohibit equity courts from issuing injunctions restraining labor from exercising the right to unite for mutual helpfulness, selfprotection and collective bargaining.

It reiterates and reaffirms the right of Labor to enjoy free assemblage, freedom of the press and to unite for the purpose of securing redress from economic oppression and injustice.

Labor regards the passage of the Norris-La Guardia Bill as a great achievement.

It believes that through the protection which this measure will afford Labor can mobilize its economic strength so that it may be privileged to deal with powerful corporations and large employers of labor upon more equitable terms.

The one outstanding legal right which this bill clearly and definitely establishes is the right of Labor to organize and to function in a normal, logical way.

The Lame Ducks in Flight

E have come a long way since the first effort to secure legislation to abolish the so-called lame duck Congress.

A constitutional amendment now is before the States. Virginia was first to ratify.

Probably the States will hurry action as rapidly as

With ratification of this amendment, Congress will become a more responsive instrument. The old lame duck sessions, between election time and March 4, will be no more. Presidents will not hold over until the March following their election.

Labor has from the first supported this democratic proposal.

Labor is for every measure that brings government closer to the people.

Labor will naturally work for ratification of this measure in eyery State.

An Issue of Fact

THE matter of direct relief for the unemployed, by congressional action, is being debated as though it were a matter of phrases.

The discussion turns continually on whether or not this action will constitute a "dole.

Comfortable old gentlemen sitting on cushioned chairs may not be able to conceive it in any other form.

But the issue, as faced by the millions of Americans including those who, for the present, are able to secure a food supply—is an issue of facts.

It has become a notorious thing that the gentlemen who represented President Hoover before the Senate Committee, Mr. Walter Gifford, of the President's Unemployment Commission, admitted that he had no data on which to base his conclusion that there was no need for Federal relief.

But-is it a fact:

That children in Maryland schools are fainting in their seats from lack of food?

If that is true, the local and state relief systems have broken down there. And the statement was made directly before the Senate committee by a Maryland superintendent of schools.

Much attention is being paid to "budget balance."

Is it not about time to learn that budget balances after all may be facilitated in the long run by a balancing of the human factors?

How can a national budget be balanced, when the nation's children faint from hunger?

President Hoover has signed the Norris-LaGuardia anti-injunction bill, which Organized Labor regards as its new charter of liberty. Under the terms of the law "yellow dog contracts" are abolished, a curb placed upon injunction judges, and defendants in contempt of court suits are given the right to trial by jury and a new judge, other than the one issuing the injunction. There will, no doubt, be a judicial assault on the bill. In this connection, labor has not forgotten the famous Clayton Act, many of whose provisions favorable to the workers were knocked out by Supreme Court decisions.

Tax Liquor, Messrs. Congressmen

ONGRESS is looking for more revenue. A sales tax measure has been written.

As always, the sales tax will hit the small buyer hardest.

The poor carry the load.

Meanwhile a great liquor business waits to be legalized and taxed.

Here is an industry, necessary to public appetite and to public order, waiting to contribute generously to the cost of government.

Government, all full of monkey business, fears to approach this goodly source of wealth.

If government continues to ignore liquor, the rum runners, bootleggers, racketeers and gangsters will be exceedingly glad-and maybe they will find a way to contribute to the campaign funds of their "dry" friends.

Out Beyond the Surf --

Where thought, unhastened by necessity or trepida. tion, sometimes penetrates to truth. Here, where the shallows throw no spray, let us ponder and enjoy the lessons of the art and the work and play of life.

"If we could only be sure of a living-"

Well, you can be, when you make up your mind to be satisfied with "a living."

The Ford rate of yearly wages at Detroit was said to be $1,720 in 1929.

The average wages in American industry in 1929 was $1,322.

Cotton-mill workers wages averaged $753 in 1929, Cotton growers averaged about $300 a year, when cotton was 18 cents a pound.

They live-don't they?

The Ford Company of London wanted to know what

They asked the International Labor Office to tell

The "Office" began with the Detroit standard. Then they tried to find out what wages the Detroit standard would call for elsewhere. When you are in Rome, "do as the Romans do." But these people tried to find out something else.

How could a Turk in Istanbul live like a Detroiter in

Yes-they seem to have a Ford factory in Istanbul,

The Ford Company has fourteen European factories. The lowest wage paid is at Antwerp, Belgium.

It is equivalent to 26 cents an hour. In order to enable the Antwerper to live as he would probably want to live on the Detroit standard, they would have to double his wages.

But he would not get a house with a bathroom in it, if you paid him the money.

At least, that is what the Belgian Labor Office says.

At the Ford plant in Genoa, Italy, the standard of wages is equal to 27 cents per hour.

At Barcelona, Spain, it is equal to 33 cents per hour. And in Paris, the Ford wages are equal to 29 cents per hour, or $2.32 per day.

It would have to be raised to about $5.50 per day to make the Detroit standard of living possible for the Paris worker-

That does not mean living like a Detroiter. It means, as nearly as we can get at it-live as he would like to live, as the Detroit worker has,

Giving the Paris worker the same degree of liberty to

But all these people live-they live! Could not you live on those wages-if they do?

If something does not happen to this old world pretty

Well, we may begin to find out how really to live on

There has been a lot of talk about the "high standard of living" in America.

The indications are, that just now the bankers think it has been too high.

Let us go "down stairs" for a few minutes. Take a look at how the rest of the world lives. Going down!

We've seen the Italian, the Spanish, and the Turkish

Going down to India-

Yes-you could.

Where in 1882 the annual per capita income was 27 rupees, equal to $9.00.

In 1900 it had risen to 30 rupees per capita, or $10.00. And by 1923 it had climbed to 53 rupees, or $17.66 per capita. Do you want to go on down to China?

Now you know why Gandhi cuts his garments as he

If he dressed any other way, the people of India would be suspicious of him.

Could you "live" in India-on any wage?

Now Is Organizing Time

HAT a time to organize unions! Now as never before workers need the protection of trade unionism. Employers, sometimes stricken with greed, sometimes palsied with fear, seize upon any pretext to join the fight to cut wages. Cutting wages increases the intensity of despair among the masses. The employing world has gone foolish with the idea that wage-cutting helps. It helps only the pocketbook of employers. Organize unions as the one way to drive sanity into the industrial order.

OVER FEDERATION FIELD

(By Chauncey A. Weaver)

John Philip Sousa, the most outstanding figure in the modern musical world, has made his last contribution to the harmonies of earth. And yet, being dead, he will continue to speak through creative works possessed of the elements of life having the attribute of permanence.

The various press associations carried comparatively full accounts or reviews of the great musician's career, but we have felt that a more detailed resume of the final days would be appreciated by most readers of the International Musician.

Secretary E. A. Gicker, of Local No. 135, made quick and helpful response for information in the way of clippings from the Reading press.

The occasion of Bandmaster Sousa's visit to Reading was the eightieth anniversary concert of the Ringgold Band. which was scheduled for the Park Theatre on Sunday afternoon, March 6. He arrived and conducted the rehearsal the preceding day. In the evening he was guest of honor at a banquet which was attended by prominent representatives of the city's official, professional and community life. He apparently enjoyed the festivities and made a humorous response to the many fine things which the postprandial speakers said about him. He retired to his room in the Abraham Lincoln Hotel. His secretary called about half an hour after midnight, when it was discovered that he was breathing with great difficulty. Medical aid was promptly summoned, but the end had come. The silver-tipped baton, whose graceful gyrations had led, directed and inspired men in all parts world, had fallen from a nerveless hand.

Mr. Sousa was seventy-seven years and four months old on the day of his death. He was a native of Washington, D. C. He was the son of a Portuguese father and a Bavarian mother. The father was a trombone player and identified with the leading bands of his day. The boy early attracted attention as a violinist and organized a dance orchestra. To prevent his joining a circus band the father arranged for the boy's enlistment as an apprentice musician in the Marine Corps at the age of 13.

At the age of 19 young Sousa was first violin player in the Ford Theatre orchestra-the house made famous as the scene of the assassination of President Lincoln. In 1880 he was invited to locate in Washington and take charge of the Marine With this organization he remained for twelve years and then proceeded to crystallize into actuality a long cherished dream—that of having his own band. The event marked the advent of "Sousa and His Band" before the musicloving world-a record which is certainly without parallel for the wide international territory covered, for the enthusiasm engendered, and for its success as a financial venture.

To thousands of music lovers in every nation, Sousa was the "March King." The Sousa swing or rhythm was a characteristic which defied imitation and helped to emphasize the individuality of the composer. His creative talent, however, was not confined to march writing. He had several brilliant successes in the realm of light opera production. Indeed, the list of Sousa compositions included nine operas, a symphonic production based on General Lew Wallace's "Ben Hur," ten suites, some forty-eight songs, six sets of waltzes, one hundred and forty-two marches, and other miscellaneous works.

It will be interesting to many to know that Mr. Sousa was the author of several books-among them being "The Fifth String," "Pipetown Sandy," and "The Transit of Venus.'

Sousa had the happily distinctive quality of geniality. He loved to please. No matter how small the audience happened to be as the result of sudden storm or other accident-he always played the expected program. He would invariably tickets and have come to hear. Why disappoint them?"

He did notable work at the Great Lakes Naval Training School during the World War period, and whether in war or in peace he respected the national traditions and through the medium of his creative works rendered high service in broadening the scope and spirit of American

The story of the final rites over the departed March King was kindly forwarded to us by Executive Officer A. C. Hayden as reported by the Washington Post:

The roll of muffled drums, a low command, eight snow-white horses moved slowly through the gates of the United States Marine Barracks. Behind them was the caisson on which a flag-draped casket, bore the mortal remains of America's premier bandmaster.

Along city streets as citizens with bared heads stood in solemn reverence. Congressional Cemetery—the sound of taps—John Philip Sousa, at the end of his last march, was peacefully laid in his final resting place.

High officials of the Government, officers of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps, civilians—men, women and children, gathered in the bandroom at the Marine Barracks yesterday as funeral rites of the Episcopal Church were administered for a famous son of the Nation's Capital.

Nation's Capital.

The Rev. Edward Gabler and Sidney K. Evans, chief of the Navy chaplains, conducted the services. At the front sat four women, heavily velled, and softly crying. They were Sousa's widow, two daughters and a relative. His son, who came here from the West Coast, sat nearby.

Soft strains of marches, composed by the great musician himself, and played by the Marine Band which he once directed, floated through the hall. Every seat was filled. The Gridiron Quartet, J. F. M. Bowie, Fred East, William F. Raymond and Charles T. Tittmann, sang "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," and "Abide With Me." Sousa was a member of the club for years.

At the conclusion of the services the

At the conclusion of the services the scores of mourning admirers silently filed from the temporary chapel, formed a long procession, and accompanied the body to Congressional Cemetery.

Congressional Cemetery.

As the casket was borne from the hall the Marine Band played "Nearer, My God, to Thee." Marines and bluejackets formed a guard of honor on either side of the black caisson, the gates of the barracks were thrown open and to the slow time of "El Capitan," one of Sousa's famous marches, the cortege began to move.

Crowds of persons

Crowds of persons, sometimes curious but always reverent, lined the streets along the march to the cemetery. Brief services at the grave, conducted by Masonic orders to which the bandmaster at one time belonged, and the casket was lowered into the frozen earth.

The band dispersed, the crowds melted away into the growing dusk—the greatest of American march composers was alone—save for the sextons, who gently covered the open grave, leaving the world only a memory of a beloved character.

The Washington Evening Star page

ditorial tribute as follows:

The news of the death of John Philip Sousa came as a severe shock to the people of Washington, for he was one of them, a Washingtonian by birth and by long service here. Though for a number of years he had been engaged in a wider field and made his home elsewhere, he remained in point of close association one of the "home folks" of the Capital. It was hoped that when he ceased his active work as conductor he would return to spend his remaining years at the scenes of his boyhood and of his early success as bandmaster.

Sousa became more than a national figure. He was virtually international. His name was known throughout the world, for his work as both band leader and as composer. His marches were played in every land. He was, preminently, the "march king," even as Strauss was the "waltz king,"

A "Sousa march" was invariably to be heard wherever people were in parade, the was peculiarly the master of the rhythm that lifts the spirits. He became leader of the band of the Marine Corps at the age of twenty-five, and during the twelve years of his leadership he made that organization famous. In 1892 occurred the death of Patrick Glimore, whose musical organization had gained wide fame, and the suggestion was made to Sousa by a friend that he was the best qualified of American bandsmen to succeed to that gifted leader. He organized his own band and began a career that won immediate recognition. Washington followed his fortunes with the interest due to his close local association and took pride in his success.

John Philip Sousa, gifted with exceptional ability beyond the mere wielding of the baton in direction of a group of musicians, might have made a great name for himself in the composition of larger works than marching tunes. He wrote several light operas which would undoubtedly have succeeded but for the fact that at the time difficulties arose to prevent their acceptance and presentation, due to the rivalries of the then leading exponents of that form of entertainment. His disappointment in that respect caused him to devote himself particularly to the composition of marches, and it was perhaps by reason of that fact that he gained his worldwide reputation in that field of musical creation, he was velcome at every gathering and as a dinner speaker he was in demand. His career was a proof of the hypothesis that a man best succeeds who develops his natural talents and pursues the course in which they are steadfastly applied.

We close this review with a beautiful tribute written by Edwin Fairfax Naulty, which was also a contribution to the Washington Post:

Sousa dead?

Never! Not while the living strains of his martial music can fill the pulsing air with the joy of life and living.

Sousa dead?

No! His body may rest peacefully in the loving bosom of Mother Earth, but his spirit will live with "The Stars and Stripes Forever!"

In the grace and splendor of his joy-ful work; in the loving memories of mankind; in the gratitude of uplifted souls; in the throbbing march of myriad men. Sousa lives!

Greet him not with a dirge of doubt and dread, but speed him on his immortal way, a vital and a gallant friend to man, with the glorious and inspiring strains of a march triumphant! Sousa lives!

On Sunday afternoon, March 20, the band and chanters of Des Moines Za Ga Zig Temple, Order of the Mystic Shrine, rendered a public program in tribute to the memory of John Philip Sousa. The band program was made up exclusively of Sousa compositions and played under the direction of Dr. A. Paul Atkins. Oliver Scott led the chanters in a specially adapted vocal arrangement of "Stars and Stripes Forever." Chauncey A. Weaver delivered the formal eulogy. An audience of four thousand people were in attendance.

We are in receipt of an interesting announcement of a public recital by the "Old-Timers' Concert Band" (combined ages of members fifteen hundred years)all members of the American Federation of Musicians, given at Newark, N. J., on Wednesday afternoon, March 2, 1932under the direction of Theodore J. Vincentz, long known as the musical director of Vincentz Concert Band. The program was made up of numbers reminiscent of other days, which have stood the tests of time, and which are still cordially received by the average audience. The idea of the concert was unique and, we doubt not, thoroughly enjoyable.

Government by injunction has at last been officially strangled by passage of the Norris bill, which aims to curb the power of Federal courts in circumventing labor organizations in their efforts to better the living conditions of their membership. The new law seems to sound the death-knell of the yellow-dog contract system. The bill has received the Presidential signature. Organized labor has travelled a long road and been compelled to overcome many obstacles. At last Congress has felt the urge of an enlightened public opinion upon this issue. Let us hope that a new deal and a square deal for organized labor-beyond anything hitherto known-shall henceforth be the order of the day.

"Monster Military Band Contest" is the caption to a blue and red ink poster, large enough to nearly cover the side of the City Hall, advertising a concert for Sunday afternoon, April 10th, for the benefit of the Musicians' Relief Fund. Mechanics' Hall, Boston, is the place. Boston bands are eliminated from the contest. Five hundred musicians will play under the direction of "Roxy." Admission only 25 cents to hear the best bands from all over New England. We hope a tidal-wave of gold will inundate the relief-fund treasury.

We are in receipt of a special edition of "Truth," published at Elkhart, Indiana, forwarded by President W. B. Hooper of Local No. 192, which is a fine example of what a newspaper can do in the way of exploiting the merits of "Living Music Day." Every page features some branch of music. Special articles are written by writers who "know their stuff." "Every Child for Music and Music for Every Child" is one of the popular slogans used. Another interesting article traces the growth and development of music throughout the United States. When one thinks of the uncounted carloads of musical instruments which have been shipped out of Elkhart, possibly it is not surprising that the "Living Music Idea" should be accorded cordial support. We hope, however, that the Elkhart spirit may permeate a wide range of territory.

The Literary Digest poll on the liquor question shows both wet and dry-largely depending upon the affiliations of the interpreter. Nevertheless and notwithstanding, we would like to see the issue submitted squarely to the voting masses, on a special nation-wide election day, for the purpose of finding out the exact sentiments of the American people on a question which is going to hover over us until some decisive expression has been obtained.

The exasperating failure to find the Lindbergh baby is one more illustration of the folly illustrated in the ancient saying that it is a futile performance to try to hunt ducks with a brass band. Far less publicity exploitation might have brought happier results.

No high-wire or trapeze performance was ever capable of imparting more thrills than the budget-balancing operation now going on at Washington.

Two Ways to Select Drums Wisely

THERE are two sure ways of getting the best drummers' equipment. First, if you are an expert drummer and competent to pass judgment on an instrument yourself-call at music dealers' stores where well known drums are sold and ask to try out the new models. Test them for brilliance of tone, for quickness of response, for perfect balance and ease of playing. You'll know at once, of course, which drum is best for you.

Second-if you are not an expertthere is no more satisfactory way to choose than to follow the lead of the outstanding artists in the pro-fessional world. Play the same drum that they play if you want to dupli-cate their success.

No matter which method you follow your choice will be a Leedy. Leedy Drums sell themselves to those who know and their record of professional endorsement is over-

When Words Fall

Son-"What does the word 'chauffeur' mean?

Father—"That is the name given to the driver of a motor-car."

Son (after a moment's thought)-"That was not the name you gave to the driver of the car that nearly ran over you yesterday."-Wall Street Journal.

Worth Telling Again

George Ade tells this story on himself. He was sitting with a little girl of eight. She looked up from her book of fairytales and said:

"Does m-i-r-a-g-e spell marriage, Mr. Ade?"

"Yes, my child," was all he found to answer.-Wall Street Journal.

Bridge of Sighs

"Think of the golden moments you have wasted playing bridge," said the serious friend.

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne, regretfully, "beesides a lot of silver coin and paper currency."-Washington Star.

Biding His Time

They had new neighbors and the wife was much interested in them. In a few days she reported:

"They seem a most devoted couple, They seem a most devoted couple, John. He kisses her every time he goes out, and even waves kisses to her from the sidewalk. Why don't you do that?"

"Why don't I?" replied John. "Good heavens, I don't even know her yet."

As the Worker Sees His World

Summary and Digest of Important Events Here and Abroad.

The Baltimore, Md., board of estimate has appropriated $50,000 for emergency relief to care for families of the unemployed.

A movement to put the city of Milwaukee into the banking business has been started by the advisory committee of Mayor Daniel W. Hoan, Socialist.

All ship lines in the Atlantic service have agreed to cut passenger rates approximately twenty per cent beginning in April.

A city-wide employment campaign in Marion, Ohio, went over the mark set, 50,000 work hours being the goal, but the total reaching more than 75,000.

Governor White of Ohio has announced he will call an extraordinary session of the Ohio Legislature to enact emergency relief measures for the unemployed.

Italy's unemployed at the end of February totaled 1,147,000, a new high, an increase of 96,000 in a month. Onefourth of the total received government aid.

Thousands of persons lined the streets of Paris and paid tribute to Aristide Briand, the friend of peace, as the famous French statesman's funeral was held on March 12

The Pennsylvania Railroad has announced a reduction of 10 per cent in all pensions paid by the company, except where the decrease would result in a payment of less than $50 a month.

Members of New York Typographical Union No. 6 have voted in a referendum to continue unemployment relief which has amounted to more than $3,000,000 in the last eighteen months.

Judge Benjamin N. Cardozo of New York was sworn in as a member of the Supreme Court on March 14 to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of Oliver Wendell Holmes

American exports from January to February gained 3.4 per cent, while imports dropped to the lowest figure since February, 1915, the Department of Commerce

SHORT STORIES ON WEALTH

By IRVING FISHER

Professor of Economics, Yale University

CONSERVATION

We come now to the subject of conservation of natural resources. Under the Roosevelt Conservation Commission there were four subdivisions: forests, soils, minerals and waters.

The point of view of the conservationist is a long-time point of view. Private initiative is always apt to be shortsighted. You can't depend on private initiative altogether. The average man who owns a forest and who is hard up will cut it down even though he may be sorry for it later. Of course, a far-sighted self-interest will sometimes lead to preserving a forest. The owner may say, "I will make more money if I wait, and cultivate." But it is always a big temptation to cut and, unfortunately, through our foolish forest tax laws, we encourage early cutting. We put a penalty on waiting, because we tax a man before he gets any results.

It is a case of confusing capital and income-where we tax a man when there is no income. Ideally taxes should be levied on a forest when there is a cut and not until then-but the Government doesn't like to wait, so it assesses the property and charges a property tax.

But the problem of waiting can often be solved by an equalization fund by which part of a State, such as a county, where forests are allowed to grow without being taxed, is "carried" by the State as a whole, the State being repaid later when the forest is cut and taxed. It is a matter of financing or tiding over. But forestry is an example of the need of far-sightedness, and where the individual hasn't got the far-sighted view it ought to be put into him by education, or he ought, in the interest of the general public, to be prevented from destroying the forest.

In this, as in many other ways, selfinterest leads sometimes to disaster. It reacts on the soils also; the preservation of soil by growth of some kind-either forests or crops or grass-is necessary. Soils will wash away if there is no growth.

If there is a forest, or crops, or grass, or plants of any kind, the water seeps through the soil slowly, but if there is a plowed field on a slope you may, if you are not careful, lose all the arable value there by the wash. The late Professor Shaler of Harvard in his book "Man and the Earth," said that one torrential storm on a plowed field will do as much damage as 1,000 years without the plowing. Plowing, by taking away this vegetation, makes it very easily hurt by the rain. It is stated that in China there are great spaces which have become practically desert through devastation or deforestation and the failure to conserve.

Of course, there are various ways of treating the soil surface to help thatterracing, planting, holding flood waters by dams, etc. Largely through Mr. Pinchot and President Roosevelt we have developed big projects of conservation of the soil in all these and other ways.

The minerals are different from the forests and the soils, in that minerals are not replaced. Forests are replaceable. Forestry conservation consists very largely in seeing that replacement is equal to the consumption. Likewise soils are replaceable, and the same thought applies to soil conservation-but minerals are not. Quarries and mines simply take the product away once for all. When a mine is mined, that is the end of it.

Therefore the problem of mineral conservation consists of three parts: first, be sure that there is as little waste as possible in the process of mining or quarrying; second, to see that the mining and quarrying is not too rapid-that you leave something for future generations-do not eat it up faster than you need it; and third, that substitutes are sought and found.

We are using up our petroleum fast, and our natural gas still faster, our coal less fast, and iron still less fast; but sooner or later, of course, we shall use them all up, and the question arises, what are we going to do then? We should be preparing all the time for that rainy day in the history of civilization.

For instance, oil, it is supposed, can be gotten from shales, if we once find a cheap process. This and many others are technical problems constantly arising, and specialists are working on them all the time. So, although it looks as though we are going to be absolutely without fuel in future centuries it may not be so at all.

Unlike forests, soils and minerals, water is automatically renewed. Nature seems to take care of that unaided. Rainfall and evaporation go on in a circle. None is used up. So in this case it isn't a question of making a balance of inflow and outflow, but a question of utilization.

Forestry conservation and water conservation fit into each other, because the forest makes the water flow more uniformly. If you take away the forest, rain runs off instantly. It may make a torrent and do damage, instead of being harnessed up and doing good. The problem of water conservation is the problem of fitting it in with forest conservation and soil conservation and connecting it up with electric transmission so as best to utilize every part of it. Probably, ultimately we shall get from our water power in this country a tremendously large system of "giant power," connected together by electricity. The problem of water power is already one of the great political problems affecting New York State and many other regions.

It Takes Patience

The dear old lady stood on the cliff watching the revolving beacon on the lighthouse.

"How very patient those sailors are!" she exclaimed. "The wind has blown out that light a dozen times at least, and they still keep on lighting it again.'

Spirit of Accommodation

The motorist whose car had suddenly come to a standstill quickly diagnosed the trouble, and then applied at a neighboring cottage for assistance.

"Pardon me," he said to the old lady who answered the knock. "Do you by chance have any lubricating oil?"

The old lady shook her head. "Any oil will do," said the motorist, hopefully. "Castor oil, if you have any."

"I ain't got it," said the old lady, regretfully, "but I could fix you up with a dose of salts."-Ex.

Why Dad Blushed

Father criticized the sermon, mother disliked the blunders of the organist, and the eldest daughter thought the choir's singing atrocious.

The subject had to be dropped when the small boy of the family, with the schoolboy's love of fair play, chipped in with the remark:

"Dad, I think it was a jolly good show for a penny."-Ex.

The Cherry

Tree Little Hatchet we tell the truth about many things, sometimes profoundly, sometimes flippantly, sometimes recklessly

A miniature steam shovel was buried by Canadian workers not long ago, the burial having partaken somewhat of the nature of a municipal festival.

Back to hand labor, it was. Down with the machine.

More recently Prof. William McDoigal of Duke University has declared the issue to be, "man or machine."

At least two other learned men recently have written books leading to much the same conclusion.

The issue is NOT man or the machine. The issue WILL BE man or the machine, within all probability, unless we learn to control the machine.

Which is to say that we must learn to control the hours of labor and the rates of pay.

If and when we can control those two things we shall have removed the "man or machine" issue.

That puts a heavy load of responsibility upon the trade union movement.

There are plenty of persons who will say the issue is not so simple and who will dispute the placement of responsi bility.

Let them think-and perhaps let them wait.

In work and wages, those two elemental things of industrial life, there is the key to human paradise or social collapse.

Today eight millions are unemployed. Machines by the thousands also stand idle. The machines can produce. The men wait. The raw materials are at hand. WHY do not these things move? HOURS of work and RATES of pay lay back of this depression.

Each succeeding depression swings down deeper. There is a limit to the tensile strength of all things, including societies and governments.

How far DOWN can depressions go without becoming collapse?

If that could be foreseen it would be almost possible to measure within a year the hour of collapse, UNLESS control is developed and exercised through an organized, disciplined human race in industry.

Let the savants-the doctors of philosophy and the professional economists analyze that and see what they can do to it-or about it.

Surely there is an herculean task ahead for labor, for trade unionism.

A task also for everyone else. For full success in this business of governing industrial progress and continuity requires organized human machinery in every sphere of industrial usefulness.

The great burden is upon labor, because labor SEES THE WAY.

But all others have their grave responsibilities.

If they will not help, at least let them have the good grace and the far-visioned patriotism NOT TO GET IN THE WAY.

For if collapse does come, THE WHOLE WORKS WILL CRASH!

Tut! Tut! They All Do

"What is your idea of a clever woman; one who can see the point of a joke?"

'No, a woman who can laugh at a joke without seeing the point.-"Boston Transcript.

Bringing Up Father

"Of course, you entertained during the social season?"

"Well," answered Mr. Cumrox, "mother and the girls didn't think much of me as an entertainer, but I overhead several visitors say I was one of the most amusin' people that ever broke in."-Washington Evening Star.

Climbed the Ladder

"Murphy got rich quick, didn't he?" "He got rich so quick that he can't swing a golf club without spitting on his hands."-Stray Bits.
