Music as a Business Tonic

ITH one hundred and twenty local unions in as already enthusiastic adherents of the Living Music Day movement, and many others now evincing interest in this highly effective propaganda campaign, the season opening with this spring gives promise of a notable advance in music appreciation.

The distressing economic period through which the world is passing has caused musicians to suffer everywhere, but at least this bit of hope may be extracted from the situation: Public appreciation of "flesh and blood" music is not on the On the contrary, reports from many cities disclose that interest in music is increasing. It is, of course, a pity that this renaissance of the art should come at a time when money is so scarce that practitioners of the art can take only oral comfort from the development. However, we must build for the future.

In many cities community singing and concerts show how the public turns to music for comfort and emotional relief. Committees in Buffalo, for instance, have organized musical entertainments in the public schools for the benefit of the unemployed. Concerts and balls for relief of jobless have been promoted in hundreds of cities. Best of all, of course, newspapers and merchants have gratefully accepted the co-operation of local unions in Living Music Days which have stimulated local business, cheered the hearts of the people and demonstrated the drawing power of music as an adjunct for all commercial activity.

Some of the great department stores of the country, out of their experience with Living Music Day, have learned that music is invaluable in connection with any auspicious bargain sale. This truth has been known in Mexico, by the way, for many years and Latin-Americans are well accustomed to "shopping to music."

The Living Music Day movement, begun by American musicians through the Federation, has spread to other parts of the Requests for the plan have been received from many countries, and only recently a copy of the RAND DAILY MAIL, leading newspaper of Johannesburg, South Africa, reached the office of the president, containing a Living Music Day supplement, which followed closely the style used in American dailies.

Many of the local unions and news papers, which have co-operated in a annual Living Music Day," have advised the Federation that their first attempt only began to explore the possibilities of the event, both as a business and propaganda move. Things accomplished in cer-tain cities prove that this view is accu-In Saskatoon, Sask., where Local No. 553 co-operated with the SASKATOON STAR-PHOENIX, the event was made a great holiday. Special trains on all railroads brought visitors to the city from eightythree cities and towns in that region. Hotels were filled to overflowing, gasoline stations did a thriving business and merchants found themselves with a real trade revival on their hands.

What can be done in one city can be done in others. Music has the power to draw crowds of shoppers as well as crowds of show patrons and, given the enthusiastic support of musicians and effective exploitation by the sponsoring conditions must include a wider spread of employment among the population. Since the world now suffers from too great productive capacity - without adequate buying power—and since this power of productivity seems destined to grow rather than diminish, shorter working days seem inevitable.

newspaper, it will accomplish wonderful results and give to any community a thrill of pride in local talent.

Economic and industrial changes through which the United States and Canada are passing must eventually result in adjustments that will give workers in general greater leisure. At the moment that leisure is coming, unfortunately through unemployment. Econo mists agree that any remedy for present

The added leisure of the general popu lace must be filled with diversion and self-improvement, if the sum total of happiness is to be increased. Music and appreciation of music should contribute much to filling that need. The services of professional musicians are urgently indicated. In the city of Vienna, long a source of musical talent of the highest order, the people are said by returning visitors to be sacrificing meals in order to have money for concerts. Music, the Viennese feel, is a necessity to buoy up their spirits in these trying times. It is to be hoped that Americans and Canadians will some day come to love music so, though it is certainly to be hoped that the future will make unnecessary the sacrifice of meals.

Local unions interested in considering the Living Music Day plan for their cities may obtain the complete plan, together with publicity material, by addressing the office of the president of the Federation. Locals, planning their second annual Living Music Days, may obtain new publicity material in the same way.

Newspapers and local unions now participating in this movement include the

The Cherry Where with our Tree Little Hatchet we tell the truth about many things, sometimes profoundly, sometimes flippantly, sometimes recklessly

In the midst of continued depression things happen. Oh, many things. Change is the one thing eternal.

Let's look at some of the new things.

Into the grocery business there comes, like a flash, what the trade calls the Cheapies. And raising hob with the es tablished merchants. Again the word "established" loses some of its meaning, as the word "securities" has done.

Cheapy store is simply four bare walls, surrounding a vast floor space. It can be any old kind of a floor, the poorer the better.

There are glaring lights and circus-type signs all over.

Merchandise is piled in every kind of pile, stack and heap, apparently without order-purposely that way.

And prices are slashed down to where no regular merchant can meet them.

One such store fills an abandoned auto assembly plant, doing business in the thousands of dollars.

Shrunken pocketbooks pour out pennies to fill the tills of these stores. Always in low rent districts, these stores are coining money and sowing consternation on the one hand, joy on the other. Those that like hot competition can get it out of these new Cheapies.

Next: A radio that plays you a tune for a nickel in the slot. You can thus save your nickel, or spend it and get your tune.

Next: A device that hooks onto your automotor at a filling station, draws out some of the oil, so you can see what it looks like. It it's dirty the station's job of selling you a case full of new oil is easier.

In three minutes the machine will empty your crank case. In three more it will shoot mixed oil and air into the case to flush it clean. It can be done while your gas tank is filling. To drain a crank case by hand takes at least ten minutes, usually over a pit. Change is eternal.

Next: An air line, operating radio to its flying ships, devised a dial, like a phone dial, to give ground operators quick, sure communication with ships. The dial selects proper frequency and volume automatically.

New also: The farm rebellion-it isn't anything else. The mid-west farmers have taken the law into their own hands. They intend to keep their farms and it is surprising how many defenders of law and private property sympathize with the farmers.

The farmers simply gather when auction sales are advertised and by beetling brows or shotguns keep away all bidders, and the sheriff as well. court suits will in the end set aside these thwarted auctions, where neighbors bid in horses at a nickel apiece, but for today the farmers have won. A farmers' "council of defense" is in many cases more potent today than a Legislature. As has been said: Change is eternal.

Even small change is getting that way for most folks!

Queer thing, but a price has to be paid for just about every worth-while thing.

It is so in all life, including government, industrial life and in every human relation. There is equities throughout.

It isn't that the thing is entirely simple; sometimes it seems complicated. Good institutions generally breed good results. Freedom brings the blessings of Employers, strong for a moment, may deny the right of organization. They may repress the natural and reasonable de sires of the workers.

If they repress hard enough, or long enough there will be a back-action. The workers will organize and sometimes, in their resentment against past brutalities and inequities, they will inflict penalties. Life in like that.

All tryants have been slow to see the coming end of their tyranny. That is axiomatic. It is plain, on the face of it. All history shows it. Human emotions today are about what they have been always. Natural laws have not changed

Today's tryants have learned little from earlier tyrants.

There are industrial tyrants today who think they can go on forever.

In actuality there is no limit to which humanity will not go in retaliation, if pressed hard enough and long enough. Undoubtedly part of the inhuman cruelty of the bolsheviks in Russia was generated by the inhuman cruelty of the czars.

Extremes beget extremes.

Employers who oppose unions ought to ponder these things. They ought to learn about humanity and its conduct. Just knowing about machines and markets and money isn't enough.

If the employers of America, in the great mass production plants, deny the right of labor to organize sanely and freely, ultimately the workers will organize otherwise—not, so sanely, not so freely, but possibly with very destructive

Let Us Stand Together

S long as newspapers accept advertising and figure upon a part of their publishing costs as derived from advertising, it is necessary that the Labor newspapers, no matter how owned, are a part of the labor movement. They exist to fight labor's battles, and they do fight them.

The mortality among labor papers during the past year has been high. It may be higher this year.

There would be NO mortality if labor newspapers got a fair share of the advertising of nationally marketed commodities. Such advertising is known as national advertising and it is placed through large central agencies.

Already it has been announced by some of the great advertisers that their 1933 expenditures will not fall below their 1932 schedules.

Two that have made these announcements are the Kellogg Company, cereal makers, operating on a six-hour day, and the Bristol-Myers Company, making drug and Mr. Lee Bristol, vice-president, is toilet preparations. a man of broad understanding. He participated in last winter's War Against Depression to find jobs for a million wage-earners.

Labor newspapers get very little national advertising. Their combined circulation runs to the neighborhood of two million readers. They justify the expenditure of oney in their columns.

Yet, though these newspapers have organized an agency to fight their battles, they go practically unrecognized among the great national advertisers.

point is that the time has come to make clear to national advertisers that readers of labor newspapers are loyal to those newspapers.

It would take but relatively few letters to national advertisers to make clear to them what is wanted by readers of labor newspapers.

. When readers of labor papers are willing to pay a cription price that will pay the whole cost of production, then there will be no such problem.

Until that time, if trade unionists want good newspapers they must stand with their newspapers in the battle to procure a proper share of the advertising from which revenue to make good newspapers is derived.

The purchasing power of trade union members has fallen less than that of their unorganized fellows. The trade union movement is a buying market. Its patronage deserves and must have consideration.

You who read this magazine can play a part in the fight to bring to labor newspapers the sinews of publication. Advertising is a legitimate business. It belongs in newspapers and it belongs in labor newspapers.

The issue is not a trifling one. It is one of tremendous importance.

Trade unionism is much more interested in the welfare of its own newspapers than it is in the welfare of any other newspapers, important though they may be in their field.

When conflict comes trade unionists rightly expect their newspapers to fight a good fight. A strong newspaper can fight a better fight than a weak one. Go, then, and help make your newspaper of labor a strong newspaper. Carry the fight to the doors and desks of national advertisers. Let us unite in the cause of labor journalism, which is, in every essence, the cause of labor. Every person can do some part. Every reader can write a letter. Do that today!

It is not certain that a man can make opportunities for himself. But he can put himself into such shape that when opportunities come, he will be ready to take advantage of them.-Theodore Roosevelt.

THE campaign to increase the use of products made in the United States is not just a company. in the United States is not just a campaign to sell somebody's goods. It is a campaign to prevent the further destruction of American standards and to lead them back to their former heights.

The wage, working and living standards of America have been and today remain higher than those of any other nation.

Yet other nations, with lower wages and with depremoney, seek to flood our markets with their cheap products and Americans are expected to buy

Importers, big stores, international bankers and the newspapers that are influenced by them, all join in howling against this effort to induce the buying of things made in America. They want imports because largely they live on imports, in one way or another. They are talking for THEIR living. Let the great bulk of Americans who are neither bankers, store owners or newspaper owners, do a little thinking about THEIR living, and whence it comes.

Make no mistake about this: Some of the leading newspapers of America are today under control of the great international bankers, responding to their will, doing their dirty work and fooling the people. Greater damage is done when these newsers influence other newspapers to fall innocent victims and unwitting dupes of the international bankers' game.

Every American can use his own reasoning powers, It is to his interest to spend his money for the things his fellow Americans have made, or is it better to spend it for commodities made in other lands, from whence none of it comes back to America, either for wages, taxes or anything else?

Opponents of the idea of buying American goods eek to make it seem that there is something almost disgraceful about demanding American goods. That, of course, is bunk, a part of the propaganda. has long been an idea that imported things were better. That is not only bunk, it is untruth.

American workers are idle and while they are idle American dollars are providing employment for workers in many other countries.

It is time for Americans to look to their own welfare. No aliens helped American unions to win their wage rates and their shorter hours. Almost every other nation is using governmental machinery to increase the home purchase of home products. That means the world is almost a unit in urging that American goods be NOT bought abroad. America has but one thing to do-AMERICAN MADE GOODS TO SAVE AMERICA AND AMERICAN STANDARDS.

The American carpenter, bricklayer, machinist, electrician, molder, or be he what he may, needs work-he Without work needs the work of his fellow Americans. we can have no happy nation and no high standards. Every person controls his own spending. Let him spend for Americans, with Americans.

Where thought, unhastened by necessity or trepidation, sometimes penetrates to truth. Here, where the shallows throw no spray, let us ponder and enjoy the lessons of the art and the work and play of life.

With the inauguration of Franklin D. Roosevelt and great numbers of Representatives and Senators chosen to change the complexion of Congress, a new trend in government sets in.

There may be no great change in the facts of life as they affect the rank and file of workers, but that there will be new currents in the affairs of the nation is certain.

Whatever they lead to is for history to record. Let us know this and take from it some consolation: As the story of this world unfolds through an eternity of time, each particular crisis in the affairs of men is but a flashing incident.

The Battle of Agincourt was a terrible thing for the men involved and the times were tragic for thousands upon thousands. We read of it with interest, but with no sense of immediate reality. The days of the Corn Laws were terrible days for England and populations suffered. They passed and we read of them to learn causes, effects and details.

Caesar, Napoleon, Shakespeare, Louis XIV-these, and many more-lived, did their deeds and misdeeds and died. The world lived through its agonies, dismemberments, joys and celebrations and came to a better Millions were sent into the armies of the World War and all the world knew that life as such was an unimportant thing. The purpose for which it was given was the important thing to each nation. Humanity has given a lot of lip service to the idea of the sacredness of life.

Today, in essentials, is not different from other days. We are passing through a crisis, of which posterity will read with interest, perhaps with amusement, that a race should have showed so little intelligence.

It is hard to accept the philosophical view of a situation which today grips at the belt line of a nation, but history knows no other. If we can see ourselves as history will see us we may at least gain some sustaining No situation in the realm of human affairs is permanent. Today's situation may persist until it overcomes many, but change is inevitable.

The strain of the World War taxed the resources of great nations to the last ounce and many wondered if it ever would end. It did end, though its aftermath persists to this day. But that, too, must yield to change.

As a matter of fact, the change long since set in, had we but the eyes to see. Always there is a growing sprout under ground before the first green leaf shows in the sunshine.

The United States now faces a period of rapid change. Its effects cannot be foretold, but the drama of action impends. Great battles are to be fought in the coming months. The labor movement will be a vital factor. It must be in the front lines of every struggle. There is no escape from that. It is the fate of labor always to struggle, always to fight, until the final measure of democracy shall have been won. At least until then.

Labor's role, therefore, is to be ready; to be capable; to be united. Of what avail to fight without using the best weapons? The best weapons of labor are strong organization and intelligent understanding. We cannot what the historians will say about this day's struggle, but we can be prepared to play a part that will at least give history some meat on which to feed. That we shall do if we are faithful to the historic mission of the labor movement.

Is Repeal on the Way?

SENATE and House have sent the question of prohibition repeal back to the States.

There is argument as to whether the route chosen is the right one. Dry influence, counting as usual for more than its rightful strength, has seemingly led to the longest and most uncertain route.

Thirty-six States, by convention, must ratify the amendment.

Not soon will the distilleries begin operation, for it may take as long as seven years. And who knows what social, industrial and political changes may take place in that time? Things can so happen that a shorter and better route can be interposed during so many years

Meanwhile the thing to do is to work for repeal in every channel opened.

Modification seems certain shortly. The results of modification will almost surely hasten work for complete repeal.

Your union membership was never more valuable to you than at the present time. Do not neglect it or the privileges as well as the obligations it entails.

OVER FEDERATION FIELD

By CHAUNCEY A. WEAVER

The month of March ushers into being an official change of national govern-mental administration. Vox Populi spoke in tones of thunderous volume and power. The people have been given the change which their ballots demanded. It would be a reckless prognosticator who would venture to predict just what the coming quadrennium will bring forth. The vote of confidence bestowed upon President Roosevelt should prove an inspiration, and the new Chief Magistrate will doubtless enter into his work with a high purpose to vindicate that expression of a nation's faith.

At this writing there is a disposition to increase the power of the Chief Executive and decrease that hitherto enjoyed by the legislative branch. From what most of us know of congressional sessions there will be small disposition to demur to the proposed change. The new order of things would be an experiment well worth watching. Even those naturally suspicious of an established dictatorship under a democratic form of government will be inclined to give a try-out to any system which promises relief from unbearable taxation and the curtailment of natural freedom to which we are now subjected.

President Roosevelt stands upon the threshold of a great opportunity. Americans will wish him health and strength for his mighty task.

One mid-western woman has been granted a divorce because her husband would do nothing but play saxophone What a great opportunity to get even by learning to play one herself!

Doubtless to insure a harmonious cabinet President Roosevelt has named for secretary of the treasury Mr. Woodin who is reputed to be not only a financier, but a musician as well. The combination is somewhat rare. His favorite instrument is said to be the guitar. He will probably need a new set of strings or wires or whatever it is that spans the elongated neck of his medium of harmonic dispensation. Perhaps in the din of Washingtonian politics he may feel now and then like reaching for a bass drum or a slide trombone in order to make himself heard. In the present chaotic condition of national affairs the nation needs a secretary of the treasury of the Alexander Hamilton mental caliber, and we hope that in Woodin such a character has been found.

In Chicago music's voluptious swell is sometimes heard at the most unexpected times and in unusual places. The Tribune of that city records an interesting illustration of this nature in the story of the discovery at three o'clock in the morning of a musician "entwined in the coils of a mighty brass sousaphone, the grandfather of all tubas, reclining against an elevated pillar at Wabash Avenue and Seventh Street. His lips rested against the mouthpiece of his instrument and the heavy notes struck on the ear-drums of sleeping guests in nearby hotels like a pile-driver." Two police officers, apparently as devoid of sentiment as a last year's gourd is of nutrition, interrupted the nocturnal recital and removed the purveyor of de profundo brass tone color to the station. This change of scene, however, did not dim the ardor of the instrumentalist, who between hiccoughs announced that he would play the quartet from "Rigoletto"— "all four parts at once." The police captain insisted that the prison scene from Verdi's "Il Trovatore" would be far more appropriate and finally ended the concert by putting the sousaphone in a vault and CRO Leads Again* the player thereof in a cell. Personally, the great mystery of it all is how a bass horn player could ever make himself heard in the vicinity of the Wabash Avenue elevated railway.

The International Musician is always pleased to learn of any victory won by Federation members or their affiliates, through the medium of due legal process, in which the strong armed injunction has been brought into requisition. In the early part of the current year the Empire Theatre of Newark, N. J., playing burlesque, went non-union. Union musicians and stage hands picketed the theatre for a few days until they were stopped by an injunction writ-an expedient with which labor unions in New Jersey are not unfamiliar. The defendant employes went into court, filed and argued a motion to dissolve the writ, and were successful. The presiding judge found no evidence of threats or disorder. The picketing was the chief grievance. The court suggested that five pickets might be employed without violation of the proprieties and dismissed the hearing. The result was a legal victory also for our old friend, Leo Cluesmann, who has been a delegate to a great many national Federation conven tions and is now engaged in the busy practice of the law at 776 Broad Street, Newark, N. J.

This year is to be widely celebrated as a Wagnerian anniversary. Most everyone is familiar with the Bill Nye observation that "Wagner's music is better than it sounds." There is a vast amount of truth in this humorous dictum in that Wagnerian appreciation is a matter of cultural growth, and that thousands of people who were once disposed to scoff have learned to praise.

In some localities the demand for "free music" continues unabated. Could the depression be ended by making everything free?

THE CHICAGO INTERMEZZO reports:

THE CHICAGO INTERMEZZO TEPORTS:
His Excellency, Governor Henry
Horner, has selected James C. Petrillo, President of the Local, as one of the seven Commissioners for the West Parks System. The appointment was made by the Governor January 23, upon his return to Springfield. This is one of the highest appointments in the gift of the Governor. The selection of President Petrillo to serve as a member of the West Park Board is a tribute to his honesty, and evidence of the high esteem in which he is held by the new State Administration.

THE INTERMEZZO is convinced that every member of the Local will rejoice with Mr. Petrillo over the honor thus conferred upon him.

Executive Officer Petrillo's friends outside the membership of Local No. 10 will also be glad to extend their congratula-tions. And, by the way, it looks as though the Chicago Park Board system would now be equipped with a strong and ardent voice in advocacy of plenty of band music in the public parks.

Prosperity is evidently going to take its time even in emerging from around the Local reports from all parts of the Federation jurisdiction show that elections have been held right on schedule time reflecting a firm purpose to carry forward just as though every member had a job. It is that spirit of unflagging virility which keeps the organization in the front ranks of the labor movement.

Only about three months from this time the Chicago convention will be in session. It will be an important gathering. Many delegates have already been elected.

Will Beer Be the First Step Back

(From the Metronome)

Everyone is buzzing about the return of beer. Business, big and small, is sizzling with plans. Vast interests are raring to go as soon as steins come back. They're laying their plans right now. Breweries are signing contracts running into the millions for new equipment and buildings, hotels and restaurants are drawing up plans for tap rooms, vacant city lots are being leased with the idea of starting beer gardens.

August A. Busch, president of Anheuser Busch, Inc., says the relegalization of beer will provide employment for 1,250,000 in nearly 100 different industries. And the music industry will come in for one of the largest slices of the benefits.

It's the brightest spot on the current calendar as well as the music docket for 1933. In fact, it will give the heftiest boost that the music industry as a whole has had in fifteen years. And that's saying something. Let's look into this.

The First Blow to Musicians

On January 16, 1920, the Eighteenth Amendment went into effect. This was the first of a series of body blows to musicians and according to Joseph Weber, president of the American Federation, re sulted in some 56,000 men, or two-fifths of the Federation's membership, losing their jobs. The majority of these jobs were located in hotels, restaurants, resorts and beer gardens. Repeal, says Weber, will restore these jobs to musicians again.

He added: "In a spirit of patriotism and to conserve grain, the country passed a law which it has since had reason to regret. The age of jazz, hip flasks and speak-easies will give place to a return of the simple pleasures such as were found in beer gardens before prohibition. Here a person could get relaxation, refreshent and hear good music in the flesh to boot."

Styles change, the pendulum swings The country is ripe for a return of beer and beer gardens. They were a popular form of entertainment before prohibition and still are in many foreign coun-

In Prates, a borough of Vienna, there are over 100 restaurants all of which are beer gardens. Tables are placed among beautiful trees and shrubbery. Waiters loaded with frothy mugs rush about. Light refreshments can be had. Each garden contains an orchestra of from three to sixty men. They play music for every taste. On Sundays 300,000 people crowd into these gardens. They are the most popular places in Vienna.

Like Miniature Golf

It is believed a similar idea will take hold in America with the return of beer and sweep over the country in a wave like the miniature golf craze some years Vacant lots everywhere will be transformed into beer gardens. Competition will stimulate added attractions. They may take the forms of dancing, picture shows, vaudeville acts and music, of course.

Just what would this mean to music anyway? Suppose we do a little figuring. One beer garden for every 30,000 of our country's population would amount 40,000 such spots. Just cut that in half to be conservative and make it 20,009. Suppose there are from three to ten musicians employed in each spot. Taking five as a mean average, that would run up to 100,000 musicians, quite a crowd. But let's keep conservative and halve that figure to 50,000. Now even if 50,000 musicians were soon to find employment, that would pep up the market for new instruments, music, orchestrations, like nothing in the last decade. New saxes, horns, drums, reeds, accessories would be needed right off the bat. With musicians back on the payroll they would soon be swapping old horns for new; up-to-date equipment would be needed. Twenty thousand orchestras, each requiring 100 orchestrations on the books every three months would run into millions of orchestrations. Try and figure it out. number of new plugs for publishers would take the edge off radio. It might mean a return to the day when hits were built gradually into tall figures, when pianos are dusted off and opened up and when that old gang gathers around to sing. It might be the first step back for music

But, says you, suppose canned music asts its blight on this rosy picture. There are several arguments against it. In the first place people are fed up on canned and aired music since they can get all they want of it at home. But, best of all, beer gardens, being in the open, are not adapted for canned or amplified London has banned all canned music from forty-two open spaces occupying an area of twenty-five square miles in and near the city. It may come to that

Hotels Are Making Plans

That's not all to the picture. Under the dry law, hotels took it on the chin. They suffered substantial losses and music was one of the things to go from many of With repeal music will again have a chance. Some New York hotels have actually begun construction on rooms and various decorative schemes are being tried out. There is the prospect that many of them will serve food with the drinks and put in dancing.

According to figures of the American Hotel Association there are 29,000 hotels listed in the United States. If only half of them added a minimum of three musicians each to their staffs, 43,000 musicians would find new berths.

It is impossible to calculate the number of restaurants throughout the country that under repeal would add music to their meals. Anyway you look at it. music is bound to benefit.

Unless all signs fail, it appears that beer first and then repeal will be a big step out of the woods for music. Are you behind repeal? Are you ready for it with new ideas and plans? Are you prepared for the coming of beer gardens?

The music business has had a tough time during the last ten years. It has come through battered, but the flag is still there. Better days are ahead, but not for the guy who lays down and plays possum. The plums as never before will go to those who look ahead, and prepare, keep pegging away all the time and keep

SPECIAL CAMPAIGN FOR UNION LABEL

Annual Drive to Boom Use of Union-Made Products and Union Services.

The Union Label Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor is now preparing for the annual union label camwhich will be conducted during April.

All international unions affiliated with the department and all Central Labor Unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor have been invited to take an active part in this campaign.

"While the Union Labor Trades Department conducts a continuous campaign for the union label, shop card and button, each year, for the period of one month, this special campaign is conducted for the benefit of organized labor in general," John J. Manning, secretary-treasurer of the Union Label Trades Department, said.

"This is a sort of revival to renew the interest and enthusiasm of trades unionists and their friends in the union label.

"Each year, in this way, new converts to the cause are made. If given the support such a campaign merits, there is no doubt but it will greatly relieve unemployment among trades unionists.

"All localities are urged to take part in the campaign as a matter of self preservation against unfair employers and those opposed to organized labor.

"This can be done by holding mass meetings to which speakers who are able to explain the great value of spending union-earned money for the products and services of organized labor should be in-The radio, newspapers and advertising of all kinds can be successfully The distribution of literature is a great help in campaigns of this kind. Free literature is supplied by the Union Label Trades Department to those requesting it."

OLD-AGE PENSION BILL MADE LAW IN INDIANA

Governor Signs Measure, Bringing to Successful End 12-Year Fight.

Governor Paul V. McNutt of Indiana, in the presence of labor leaders, signed the old age pension bill passed by the Legislature after a fight of twelve years by organized labor, led by the old age pension committee of the United Mine Workers of America.

The law will become operative at the end of 1933. It is mandatory in its pro-visions and will grant pensions of not more than $15 a month to indigent persons of 70 years of age or above, who have resided in the State fifteen years

Exclusive control of the administration of the law is placed in the hands of county commissioners. It is estimated that the cost of the first year's administration will be $500,000. The State is to pay one-half of the pension out of its general fund and each county is to pay one-half from its

What to Use For Money?

An address delivered by Philip Eubank, a member of Local No. A. F. of M., of San Antonio, Teat the preliminary organization meing of the First Credit Intercha Associates, January 18, 1933:

THE subject before us this evening is money and credit and its relation to business and our future welfare. It is a subject not easily covered in a few words, and I will only try to bring out a few salient points. The correct answer to "Which was first, money or credit?" will be the basis of our readjustment. Credit in its strict sense is what labor earns, and all that it earns. A like, or a satisfactory amount of labor is due to balance the debt. Labor performed is an earned credit. If we spend our credit first, we must labor to earn it. A salary or wage is only a credit for labor per formed, therefore, our labor is the only basis for our individual credit.

When credit is expanded against something of a non-productive nature such as gold, there is no help from it in liquidating the obligation. Labor or production is the only sound basis for the expansion of credit, or the issuance of money, and the proper distribution and exchange of production would liquidate the credit obligations. If credit was used without interest attached, it could circulate until the final exchange of labor or production balanced and cancelled the circulating debt or credit money. It is the proper use of credit with which we are con-

In recent years the common practice has been for the beneficiary or employer of labor to temporarily balance his debt by the use of government credit--money or interest-bearing bank credit. method is more convenient than direct barter or direct exchange of labor, and practically eliminated that substantial institution of past generations. During the last thirty years 20,000 new banks were organized to profiteer by renting their credit for use as a local medium of exchange. In 1900, bank-created interestbearing credit money was seven billion dollars compared with fifty-nine billion dollars in 1930. Total government issued lawful money was two billion dollars in 1900 compared with eight billion in 1930.

Credit is the most valuable form of money we use, and under honest and intelligent administration need never cause panics and depression such as it has caused in the past. International interest collectors, recognizing the enormous profits that could be made by extending unlimited amounts of credit at interest to an uninformed people who thought they were borrowing actual money, are the vandals responsible for wrecking the national economic system. The wide difference in the small amount of gold, and the outrageous sums of interest-bearing credit people have agreed to pay in gold, has almost destroyed the value of credit as money. It is for the purpose of salvaging and restoring credit to its proper standing as a medium of free exchange that we are here assembled.

The use of credit has made it possible for us to advance to the state of comparative luxury in which we now live. If we had to depend on the insignificant sum so-called standard money there is in existence, or primitive methods of direct barter or labor exchange, we could not possibly exchange the products of labor so readily; or have so many lux uries and comforts in life that we now call necessities. When it is clearly understood that what we really exchange is credit for labor performed, or credit for labor we intend to perform; and that money is only an instrument of utility in making that exchange, we will have a sound basis upon which to issue credit money and provide a method for its constant liquidation. Credit money should be created for circulation as the need for it arises, and it should be retired from circulation when the debt is balanced.

We should never permit our credit structure to become top-heavy by piling credit on top of credit, with both principal and interest being payable in som thing the debtor cannot produce. Credit should not be inflated against something that cannot reproduce its kind, such as If we cannot generate gold, why agree to pay debts in gold? Promises to pay gold made up the artificial credit money or so-called dollars of bank deposits which we used as a local medium of exchange in past years. This should answer the question "Where is all the money we formerly had?"

In Volume 7, subject, Money and Banking, published by the Alexander Hamilton Institute, credit is defined as a postponed payment of money. A promise to pay money is a concrete object of value and is exchangeable for other things of value. This suggests the possibility of using such promises as a medium of exchange if they can be put in such form that the ownership in them or the title to them can be transferred from hand to hand.

The knowledge of only this much of the principle of credit was responsible for the mushroom growth of banks from 10,000 in 1900 with credit deposits of seven billion dollars, to 30,000 banks with deposits of thirty-seven billion credit dollars in 1920. We have lost 10,000 banks since 1920, and fifteen billion credit dollars of bank deposits since 1930. As bank failures increased, the amount of interestbearing credit or bank deposits also in-In 1930 there were 24,000 banks with fifty-nine billion phantom dollars on deposit.

Government issued money, something you can feel and see and hold in your hand, is at the highest point in history. There are five and one-half billion dollars in circulation now compared with four and one-half billion in 1930. The hitch is, there were only 300 million dollars of bank notes in 1900, and in 1932 there were three and one-half billion dollars of bank notes in circulation as money Actual money in circulation, gold and silver, or certificates backed up dollar for dollar by gold and silver deposited in trust in the Treasury, is practically the same as in 1900. There was a little less than two billion then, and a little more than two billion now. The population was 75 million in 1900 compared with 125 million in 1932. There is only five per cent of lawful money deposited in the Treasury in trust against bank notes. Therefore, bank notes are 95 per cent credit

Those who own the gold and sell their interesting-bearing credit to those who have no gold, will tell you that it is sound business to loan ten times more credit than there is gold; because, instead of earning 5 per cent interest on the gold they own, they can earn 80 per cent interest plus all the trimmings. The difference between artificial credit money and sound credit money is-the one is created by expanding credit against some thing that is not self-liquidating-gold; and the other is created against labor and production which lends itself to selfliquidation by exchange and consumption.

Frank A. Vanderlip, in the Saturday Evening Post of January 14th, states: "Unfortunate practices are largely the lush growth of extremely rapid develop-The public's attitude should not be ment. one of sweeping condemnation, but rather a searching for greater safeguards and improved methods. Credit is on trial for its life, but its death will drive countless millions more into the starvation column. All debts owing today could be paid if the holders of gold obligations would accept labor or the products of labor in settlement of the Interest-bearing credit payable in gold of the present weight and fineness can no more mix than oil and water. Our modern alchemists should realize it by this time. However, if they do not, that is no reason why we should not realize that fact, and institute measures in selfdefense. Our duty is to seek a proper understanding of the natural law govern ing the use of credit, and apply it quickly. The question, "What to use for money?" is answered. Continue to use the same thing you have been using all these years, but learn to use it right.

INHUMAN GREED

By Franklin E. Wolfe

What is happening in this country? How many persons—what percentage of -have any definite, clear idea the peopleof the transition that we are in the midst in these days of difficulty? Not many. They seem simply to know they are being hurt, but have not the remotest idea that there is some underlying, fundamental cause. It is true some of them can glibly point to a "cause," but the simplest analy sis shows it to be a meager sympton and not a cause at all. Perhaps some may point to a small, subsidiary, contributing but few get down to the fundamentals.

A great philosopher once told us that humanity was at all times comparable to a passenger on the rear observation platform of a rapidly moving train. He sees the landscape, not as a thing of the past, but he thinks it is the present and the Thus we are seeing what has future. been passed and think it the present or perhaps a glimpse of the future.

Right now we are passing through a time of transition in the economic affairs of a nation. We are knee deep in that change and all the while we hear persons, utterly unaware, saying that things are getting back to the place where they were a few years ago.

The great change, name it what you will, is being forced by many causes, but the most pitiful one is that of human greed that preys upon the poor, the weak and helpless. Profit seekers have taken advantage of the extremity of the disinherited and are grinding their faces as never before.

In Massachusetts the ghoulish employers in the garment trades are paying wages to adult workers that are reported to be less than $4 a week.

In Pennsylvania children under 16 are working in large numbers for $2 a week; women in textile industries in the same State are getting $5 a week; pay envelopes for women in textiles in New Jersey contain for a week's work as low as $1.96 and $5 is the top wage.

Candy workers in Illinois, who at one time received from $18 to $25 a week, now receive from $5 to $7. Time of work has been mercilessly stretched out and men, women and children are working in-humanly long hours. Girls in Connecticut sweatshops are working from 81 to 85 hours a week.

Women in a New Jersey upholstery plant are working 92 hours a week on night shifts. South Carolina mills are operating from 125 to 140 hours, with an 11-hour night shift and 55 hours per week a common condition. That millions will jump at the chance to get such jobs is a measure of current human desperation.

Among the very rich in New Washington there is constant talk of a revolution. They fear it as they sense it, yet no steps are taken to abate the atro-All the profit-eater seems able to think of is more profits. There is horror in human suffering and starvation — but beyond that stalks the spectre of grim tragedy.

Who's the Wild Man?

Not long ago a real African bushman addressed a meeting of business men in Chicago. They laughed at him and he laughed at them and made fun of their queer ways.

This ex-wild man raised some questions as to the values of civilization. How came he to come among white men, talk ing the talk of a college man? He was one of a group of bush boys who one day ran outside the village fire circle out of a spirit of adventure, ran too far, got lost. found themselves on the coast where there were ships. On board ship he was taken to Scotland, where he ran ashore and down Glasgow's streets, stark naked. A kindly Scot captured him, took him home, spent a year teaching him to wear clothes and sleep in a bed and educated him. That's the story.

Mr. Lobagola, ex-slave, kidded the Chicago business men about their civilization. which is now likewise his. many tabus in my country," he said. "So Here are some of his words to white business men:

"My people are so primitive that they do not value time. We have no seconds, no minutes or hours. We have time for everything.

Most civilized men and women have little time for anything, or else, unemployed, they have time only for hunting more chances to work so that they will have time for nothing else.

"We do not dress, we decorate," Lobagola said. "We wear amulets, charms and trinkets. There is no compulsory labor in my country.

We have not the economic problems that you have. We do not have to pay rent. We do not have to pay taxes. We do not have to buy food. All we have to de, that is, the women, is to go outside and pick it and everyone eats it. No markets, no bazaars, no stores, no bartering, no trading, no exchanging, no selling. We are a bush people."

The condition described by Lobagola is a condition of savagery. Lobagola has gray hair. He says his brother, still a savage, has no gray hair.

This description of savagery and this contrast of it with what is called civilization, is interesting, refreshing, perhaps a bit instructive.

Civilization marks a clear gain for humanity, but it stands today as a gain marred and marked by terrible penalties. There must be a way to preserve the gain without carrying the penalities along with it

This ex-bushman, who grew up without clothes, gathered in a sense of humor as he gained knowledge. He is so new to civilization that he sees its jokes. jibes at things civilized people do and he peeks through their pretentions. It is not often that a savage has been educated to civilization, given its culture and its ways, preserving within him an unspoiled sense of values. It is somewhat as if the fictional Mans from Mars came to look us

Lobagola says the wild men have to worry about a few tigers, snakes and elephants, while the civilized man has to worry about taxis, drunken drivers and

There is point to the bushman's views. Chiefly it comes about once more that freedom from undue restraint is an elemental necessity and that we must learn how to control surroundings and institutions, or the blessings inherent in them will fade and disappear.

The Call of the Wild

The peace of the prairie is calling men home Long bruised by the city's clamor;
They yearn for the smell of the fresh turned loam
Where winds through the forest stammer.

Oh, what has a city of brick and stone So gay as a nest in June, And what has a city that can atone For the lack of a robin's tune?

The call of the country is clear and strong And the heart will heed that call, It has been held in bonds too long, It warries of warden and wall.

Oh, what has a city of ceaseless grind
So gay as a field of rye?
And who wouldn't leave its din behind
For an elm against the sky?

SHORT STORIES ON WEALTH

By IRVING FISHER

Professor of Economics, Yale University

Remedies for Wrong Distribution

In previous short stories I have spoken of the causes which make the distribution of wealth unequal and also of the causes which makes that distribution more or less fixed, or unmovable.

The next question is: Can we and should we do anything about it?

I don't see any very good methods of curing the evils of inequality. But we can reduce them somewhat by recogniz ing the fact that a large part of inequality comes from "chance" and reducing chance.

Of course, there is no such thing as chance, in any absolute way; for, what we call chance merely represents lack of knowledge.

Anything that will reduce chance of risk, that is, will give more knowledge, will tend to reduce the chance distribution which we now get.

If, for instance, everybody could have foreseen what the automobile would do, and everybody was as inventive as Mr. Ford, there would have been such competition from the start to make automobiles that instead of one or two becoming enormously rich in that way, thousands would have become moderately rich.

So, if we knew the crust of the earth better in regard to its capacity to produce gold, we wouldn't find a few people occasionally striking it rich, stumbling on gold mines worth ten or twenty million dollars, we would scientifically exploit the known deposits and multitudes would make a few thousand dollars instead. The chief reason for inequality is chance -the chance of profit and loss-and the diminution of chance will diminish that inequality.

Even the inheritance of wealth may be regarded as a species of good luck for those who inherit.

There are two great keys to the whole problem of distribution:

One is the profit system, which is really what people miscall the capitalistic sys tem (for, of course, you can never have any system without capital). The other great key to distribution is the inherit-

In short, profits and inheritance are the two chief sources of inequality. Inheritance is also the chief source of immobility. Now the most practical prothat I know of for reducing the immobility of distribution due to inheritance is that of the Italian economist Rignano, According to Rignano, anvone who has property to leave should be subjected to big inheritance taxes. State should take over one-third of the estate on the first descent, another third on the second, and practically all of the remaining third on the third descent.

Inheritance would thus still be permitted, but its extremes would be discouraged. No one could have wealth simply by inheritance through three generations. He must bestir himself by that time and show that he has capacity to amass a fortune himself or else lose his wealth entirely. The danger of an hereditary plutocracy would then be greatly lessened. There would be a greater equality of opportunity.

The result would not be ideal, neither would a dead level of equality. We can never reach any ideal millenium least of all in the distribution of wealth. It behooves us to be practical and not too addicted to dogmas, whether of aristocracy or democracy. There is a falsehood in the idea of a blue-blooded aristocracy and this falsehood grows greater the longer the inheritance of privilege is handed down. But there is a falsehood, too, in the dogma of equality which contradicts the facts of feeble mindedness being found side by side with genius. Equality of opportunity is not only more practical, but also more nearly true to facts and instincts. But we cannot expect parents to avoid favoring their own families to a reasonable extent and a society in which all favoritism was eliminated would be one destitute of love and friendship.

Nor is Rignano's proposal very radical. It merely intensifies somewhat the existing inheritance taxes and applies them cumulatively so as to prevent a cumulative immobility. It would probably safeguard us against a radicalism which might some day be destructive like that in Russia. It would tend to keep distribution mobile or elastic; that would be a great safeguard; for an immobile society will be in danger of breaking instead of bending.

COMMENT AND CRITICISM OF WORLD AFFAIRS

Neville Chamberlain, speaking for the British government in the House of Commons, said some things that need to be shouted from the housetops in every land.

Pointing out that the displacement of labor which is going on all over the world of the greatest problems confronting civilization, Chamberlain said:

"There has been a dislocation of the old equilibrium and somehow or other a adjustment must be arrived at. This problem cannot be solved in five minutes: it needs the best brains of many countries before a final solution is reached."

Chamberlain realizes that a "new adjustment" must come if civilization is to survive. Some other statesmen apparently do not. Unless they wake up soon, they are due for a sad shock. While, as Chamberlain says, the problem of unemploy-ment cannot be solved in five minutes, there is no time to be lost in getting at the solution and putting it into effect.

The depression is bringing back old things, old processes, old ways of living. Neighborhood grist mills, long idle, are unning in many parts of the country. Old Dobbin is staging a comeback in communities where the farmers are too poor to buy or operate automobiles. In Pennsylvania, firewood is being used more than in decades, now being cut in quantities for the kitchen stove, the living room stove and the furnace. Formerly it was used largely in the fireplace, which may be considered a luxury. Of course, the use of more wood means the use of less coal, which is another blow at coal mining.

Nearly one out of every three accidental deaths in 1932 occurred in the home and nearly half of all non-fatal injuries also occurred in the home.

There were 28,000 persons killed in home accidents last year, a reduction of about three per cent from the 1931 total of 29,000. The economic loss from home injuries—wage loss, medical expense, and surance overhead—is approximately a half billion dollars.

The record of home accidents shows that we are a careless people, as undoubtedly all but a small proportion could have been prevented.

LABORGRAMS

Let us go forth in shining armor, strong in union membership.

If Congress is against the sales tax. why is it not against the sales tax on gasoline and cigarettes?

Farmers, with surplussage of crops and no market; wage-earners willing to work and no place to work. Each needs what the other has or can produce. It's a queer and unreasonable thing.

With unemployment on every hand, some plants are running as long as 58 a week. Patriotism, it seems, is the last refuge and also the last consideration of some employers.

The interlocking directorate is worldwide. Yet if workers get together for self-protection the interlocking torate howls about conspiracy. Get together and let it howl!

The exponents of technocracy are having a hard time keeping their kite as high as it went on the first burst of flight. But that's what usually happens when men cease being scientists and become special pleaders.

Forty-four nations are off the gold standard-and a lot of them, with cheap money, are trying to flood their products into the United States to take away the jobs from American workers. There are people who think we should let them do it, without limit.

Whose depression is this? That's the question often asked. For banks and big corporations steady dividends, little short of their high mark. For the workers cut wages and long unemployment. depression, and WHY?

Chart in a financial magazine shows the combined private and public debt bigger than the total national wealth. The budget, it seems, isn't quite balanced. But, TO WHOM ARE WE ALL IN DEBT? And for what? And Why?

Mr. Mellon's bank in Pittsburgh is able to declare a dividend of 200 per cent. A New York bank declares one of 100 per cent. Find out how this was done loaning money at 6 per cent and win the grand prize of one rimless doughnut.

How blind are they who will not see How foolish are the big employers who stand against unionism. How utterly foolish are those workers who, having the chance, will not join a union. through unionism is there any democratic control in industrial life.

Labor didn't want to demand unemployment insurance. Big Business drove labor to that demand. If Big Business drives on without relenting it will almost surely drive labor into political action, where it likewise does not want to go. But men use such tools and weapons as the job demands, always-if they can get them. which usually they can do.

Americans are beginning to do some tall wondering about why banks should. crash and spread ruination. Once upon a time the banker was a leader and was regarded as a wise man. But when banks crash by the hundred, up into the thousands, reputations crash likewise. Canada has had no bank failures and it is time the United States found out why it is.

The Shannon Committee would turn all munitions making back to the war ring and the great profit ring. Nothing indicates a sufficient degree of patriotism among those gentlemen to warrant trusting them with national welfare. knows no reason to trust the munitions ring in America, a branch of the international munitions combine.

THE PIANO IN THE WHITE

An Exceptionally Interesting Instrument Adorns the President's Official Home.

HOUSE AT WASHINGTON

It is said there are in the world a very few famous pianos, such instruments for the most part being associated with famous musicians like Beethoven, Schubert and Chopin. Yet there is one exceptionally interesting piano which should be regarded of considerable national importance by the American people. This is the piano installed in the Blue Room of the White House in 1903 during the presidency of Theodore Roosevelt as a gift to the American people.

Let it be remembered that as a musical instrument, the piano stands of highest importance in the development of musical art, besides being the chief means by which music has attained its extraordinary popular dissemination. It was evidently with this idea in view, coupled with a glowing pride in the manufactur-ing achievement, that promoted Steinway & Sons, the American manufacturers of pianos, to present their one hundred thousandth Steinway to the American people. William Steinway, one of the company in its second generation, expressed a wish to President Roosevelt that this instrument adorn the White House Blue Room, and the significance of the achievement in producing such a magnificent musical instrument, following a little more than a half century of activity, was readily rec ognized by Roosevelt, who felt a natural pride in such a feat of musical instrument manufacture. He thus accepted the piano on behalf of our people, and it was placed in the White House, in the famous Blue, Room, as suggested by William Steinway, where it has since been admired by everyone who has visited the President's official home.

The writer had the privilege of viewing the piano on a visit to the White House during President Coolidge's administration, and not a visitor present on this occasion failed to exclaim enthusiastically touching the beauties and elaborateness of the instrument.

The piano was made in the ordinary manner and received no special attention in the factory. The case, however, is said to be the most beautiful ever produced in this country. The designs, models and decorations were made under the super-vision of noted artists, sculptors, architects and designers, who were given instructions to proceed with the work regardless of expense and make the most lavish creation possible to produce.

The case is overlaid entirely with gold. The underside of the top carries a paint-ing by Thomas Wilmer Dewing (born 1851), the great figure painter, which depicts the young American republic receiving the nine muses. (Whitman's "Song of the Exposition" deals partly with this same subject.)

Edwin Howland Blashfield (born 1858). the rural artist famed for the delicacy of his work; J. Burr Tiffany, a member of the great American family of jewelers, artists and decorators; Richard H. Hunt and J. H. Hunt, of the family of Richard Morris Hunt (1828-1895), the American architect who first won for American architecture the respect of European artists, and other men of high standing in American art, all took part in the making of the case.

The decorations are symbolical of music and of the American nation, the piano being supported by three eagles with spread wings, each standing on a square pedestal, draped with laurel wreaths. This gives forth a sense of illimitable strength, yet the eagles are in effect so light that the instrument is not in the least burdened by additional weight.

Around the rim are painted the shields of the thirteen States, entwined by a graceful scroll of acanthus. On the lid are allegorical figures representing History, Epic Poetry, Tragedy, America, Elocution, Comedy, Music, Dancing, Astronomy and Love (lyric) Poetry.

The piano, above all question, is the feature of the Blue Room.-Frank Willard Kimball in The Bandmaster.
