Consultant Scam?

Bennett Newhouser
Phillips, WI

"I am calling in regard to one of the advertisers I've seen in Music Connection. I was a resident of Los Angeles for the past four and a half years, up until April of this year. When I was a resident of Los Angeles, I answered an ad in Music Connection from Management Consultants. They are located at 6404 Hollywood Blvd., #219, in Hollywood. I took a self-produced, very well polished 16-track demo of my own work to Johnny Lloyd, the President of Management Consultants. I paid him $500.00 consultation fee for two hours of consultation. He convinced me that my music would sell, that I could get a distribution deal for the album package that I had put together and that I should hire him for a fee of $3,000.00 to go to New York and represent me. He said my music was 'money music.' He said that I was a 'star of the future' and that he had the connections from his 30 years in the music business to get me a music distribution deal or an artist's deal. I did pay him the money. Apparently, he did go to New York. He called me the first day after he had been there representing my tape to major labels. He said that, unquestionably, I would have in the mail within the next two weeks three proposals for a distribution deal, one from Columbia, one from Warner Bros., one from PolyGram Records. I paid him an additional $500.00 to 'wrap up the deal.' He supposedly took a second trip to New York, but nothing ever came of that. In fact, none of those deals ever came through. I never even received a thank-you note or courtesy letter that most record companies send out when you just mail them a demo without someone representing it to them. I have absolutely no proof that he did what he said he would do. Since then, Johnny Lloyd has cut off his fax line, he does not return letters, he does not return my attorney's letters. He has not given me any feedback on what happened. What it amounts to is that I feel I have been defrauded. I'm virtually sure of it. I don't have the money to take him to court, but I do want to give a warning to all your readers to stay away from these people. They are very shady and down-right culprits. That's my opinion, and I really, truly believe I have been defrauded by Management Consultants and Johnny Lloyd. If I had the money, I would bring suit against them, but I have since moved away and am helpless to do anything."

Poison Press

Stacy Winston
Agoura Hills, CA

I am so completely fed up with people insulting and making up rumors about Poison. Poison happens to be mine and millions of other peoples favorite band. If they aren't any good, then how come all three of their albums have gone multi-platinum? And they have sold out almost all of their shows on their headlining tour, while other bands had to cancel their tours because of the recession. I'm not saying they're perfect, because they aren't and they've never claimed to be perfect. What they are, though, is a very human, down-to-earth band who enjoys making great music, and they all happen to be very talented. When Bret Michaels sings, he brings the songs to life by injecting emotions into them with a soulful, sexy, raspy voice. And C. C. DeVille was nominated by the readers of Circus magazine as the best guitarist of 1990. Still people like to put his guitar playing down. He is one of the most underrated guitarists around. Before you make any snap judgements about him, listen to his achingly beautiful solos on the ballads "Life Goes On" and "Something To Believe In," or listen to him reveal his bluesy side on "Poor Boy Blues." He could over play and satisfy his ego, but he always plays just what the song needs. He is a true genius when it comes to playing the guitar, and it's about time everybody realizes it. Bassist Bobby Dahl brings an intensity to both the band and to the music. Try imagining songs like "Unskinny Bop" and "Flesh And Blood Sacrifice" without pulsating bass beats to set the music on fire. And anyone who doubts drummer Rikki Rockett's talent need only hear one of his unbelievable solos to be a converted believer. I witnessed his solo at Poison's New Year's Eve and May 19th concerts, and people were honestly picking their jaws up off the floor. Everyone was speechless until they broke into thunderous applause. Besides their great music, one of the best things about Poison is that they don't care whether the critics like them or not. Their main purpose is to please their fans. They are always thanking their fans. Well now, it's time for this fan to thank them. Thank you, Poison, for giving me something to believe in.

More Valley

Kirk Sharp
Van Nuys, CA

"I'm calling in response to a Valley Arts response to Mr. Brian Montret's 'Fret Fretting' letter (Vol. XV, #22). I just want to say that I was with Brian on the day he took his guitar in and these are definite lies that were put into Valley Arts' response about the fact that he was told a level and dress job on his guitar and frets may help but wouldn't solve the entire problem as the bridge was entirely damaged. That was bullshit, first of all. That was what they recommended to him; they said that that would correct his problem on the guitar. They never said anything about the fact that he had one of his bridge saddles corrected to fix the problem. I just want to say that I had my guitar taken there for work for a while and I thought it was a nice store and I actually recommended it to him as well as L.A. Guitar Works. What they are saying is basically lies to defend themselves in view of the light that they did bad work. He went there five times to get his guitar fixed; I know, I was with him when he went. He went there five times to get his guitar worked on, and basically, they fucked it up for him. I'm just calling because I was sure they were going to respond to his feedback letter on their store, which I felt was totally to the bill."

NARAS Programs

NARAS STUDENT MUSIC AWARDS

GRAMMY
in the Schools

By Sue Gold

The National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences (NARAS) has been known for more than 30 years as "the guys who give out the Grammys," but this view is slowly changing due to a concerted effort by the Academy to focus directly on the needs and problems affecting musicians and the music community. The Academy has become an active voice in music education and has started several programs to help preserve music history while also helping musicians of today. The result has been more awareness of music, both past and present, the dangers of substance abuse and a new respect for the Academy.

In 1990, the Academy embarked on one of the first programs ever to make a serious attempt to care for the music community, Musicares. The focus of Musicares is to raise the attention and resources of the recording industry on issues of human services and welfare. "The independent nature of this profession promises very little in the way of financial security. It offers even less if a person runs into a health crisis," NARAS President Michael Greene explains.

Musicares is also trying to bring to the attention of teenagers, the issue of substance abuse. It has already established a successful billboard campaign which included messages from Ray Charles, Paula Abdul and David Crosby. There were 8,000 billboards put up around the country last year which resulted in 45,000 phone calls to The Office of Substance Abuse in Washington D.C., which mans phone lines as part of this campaign. Musicares is currently preparing their second billboard campaign to kick off early next year and they hope to put up 10,000 billboards.

Besides taking care of its own community, NARAS has also established several highly acclaimed educational programs. The most successful of these programs is Grammy In The Schools (GITS), a day-long event geared toward high school students interested in pursuing a career in the field of music. There are ten seminars held around the country during the year, usually in major cities. Among those artists who have participated in GITS are Suzanne Vega, Hammer and Debbie Gibson. For smaller cities, NARAS has a Video Library which includes a "Careers In Music" video. The video contains highlights from various GITS programs from across the nation and describes different career opportunities in music and recording that are available. "Too much talk about the music and record industry stresses the glamour side, not Grammy in the Schools. This program talks fact, not fiction," Greene says.

While GITS focuses on high school students, the Student Music Awards are for four year college students and gives them a chance to show their talent in all areas of music and recording. Students at an accredited four year university can submit an original composition on tape, which must be written, performed and recorded by a student or group of students. The winning school gets an endowment to disperse in the form of scholarships to students. Up to $10,000 is awarded, and one scholarship in each of the five available categories is awarded annually.

Earlier this year NARAS joined with the National Association of Music Merchants and the National Association of Recording Merchandisers to form the National Commission on Music Education. The Commission has launched a national campaign to focus attention on the value of music and other arts in education. "It took a while for music to fade from education and it will take a while for it to come back. Now, at least we have the tools to get it back," Greene says. NARAS also showed a two minute clip during this year's Grammy telecast stressing the problems that music education faces.

Besides students, the Academy also has a grant program for professionals already in the industry where up to $5,000 each year is awarded. "These are given to professionals in the music industry who are involved in research and projects such as archiving and preservation projects, writing books, chronicling certain parts of history within music as well as some recording projects," Greene explains.

Other things the Academy has set up or is in the process of starting are the NARAS Archival and Preservation Committee, a museum and Video Archive. The Archive and Preservation Committee, formed last year, is examining current archival procedures within the vaults of record companies and recording studios in the country in an effort to properly preserve music's history. They are currently studying ways to best store and retrieve these recordings. The Academy is also studying various sites around the country to build a NARAS Museum. The Museum will not only house behind the scenes and other information relating to the Grammy Awards, but a recording studio so people can witness sessions. It will also house the Grammy Hall of Fame Awards and other recording memorabilia.

The NARAS Video Archive will videotape interviews with various artists for preservation and distribution. The interviews will try to focus on those who have made an outstanding contribution to music. The tapes will be available to libraries, music schools and at the NARAS Chapter offices around the country.

To get involved or to find out more about any of these programs, contact NARAS at (213) 849-1313 or write: NARAS, 303 North Glenoaks Blvd., Burbank, CA 91502. MC

The Automatic Choice

Fostex 280 Multitracker

Since one of the main purposes of multitrack recording is to focus on individual elements, you end up going back and forth over the same piece of tape hundreds of times. For this reason, you'll especially appreciate the many automatic operations you can perform with the 280's microprocessor controlled transport.

• Time-saving tricks like Auto Locate, Auto Return, Auto Play, Auto Repeat and Auto Punch-in/out are a breeze with the 280.

8-inputs give you tangible access to MIDI and the optional MTC-1 gives you sophisticated MIDI control of the 280: all transport control functions, MIDI control (yes/no), LTC generator (on/off), time reference selection, recording mode (yes/no), local control (on/off), set-up of monitor mode and auto record (on/off). What's more, when using MIDI time code you can set the 280 first for rehearsal, then for punch-in/out recording.

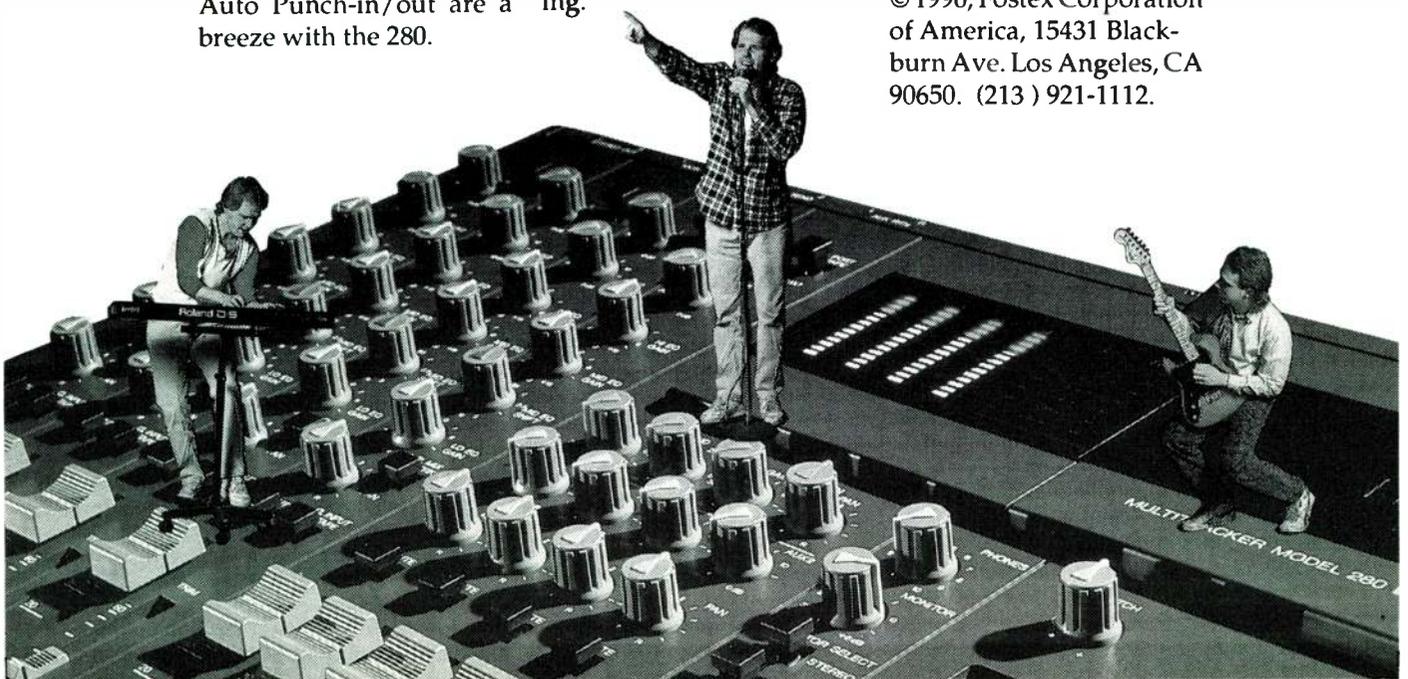

The 4-track cassette recorder runs at 3-3/4 ips--twice the normal cassette speed for better fidelity--and the built-in noise reduction does not have to be switched off when you run time code or tape sync.

• In addition to the individual recording tracks, the 280 has an independent stereo mixing bus with stereo effects return and overall master level control--important features to help you with the final mixdown.

• Two Aux Sends, Sweep EQ in the important midrange, mutes on the inputs and selective monitoring flexibility round out the 280's impressive feature list--the best value today in a quality cassette/mixer at just $850.00 Suggested Retail Price.

L.A. & N.Y. Battle Over Grammy Ceremonies

By John Lappen

LOS ANGELES—The battle between the coasts is heating up as New York and Los Angeles vie for the privilege, and the monetary rewards, of hosting the 1993 Grammy Awards. Although Los Angeles has hosted the awards show more times than its East Coast rival, next year's ceremonies will mark the second year in a row that New York has hosted the event.

"Because we're considering going to a larger venue in 1993—one like Madison Square Garden or the Forum—we're working now on making a site selection decision for '93," says NARAS President Michael Greene. "As a result of that, both New York and Los Angeles want us to seriously consider them for the show. I can safely say it's gotten to the point where negotiations have reached an intense stage."

The reasons, admits Greene, have a lot to do with economics. "New York's Department of Tourism and Trade did a survey to try to ascertain what, in monetary terms, the awards mean to the city. The figure they came up with was around $40 million. Plus, the telecast goes out to 56 countries and 1.2 billion people. There's no question that the city chosen benefits not only financially, but also from the international goodwill factor."

But Giant Records owner Irving Azoff, who is actively involved with the L.A. Entertainment Council, isn't quite sure what all the fuss is about. "It seems like some people are trying to create a battle that isn't really there. New York has a host committee for the Grammys; we don't have that. Here, we have an overall entertainment council that tries to support events which come to Los Angeles. If they should decide to come to L.A., we'll try to support these events in every way possible.

"We don't make bids to anybody," adds Azoff. "We won't be giving the Grammys a bid, per se, we'll just be telling them that if they come here, we'll support it. I don't know what kind of bid New York will put in, but that's not in the charter of what we do. We are going to have a meeting with NARAS, a representative from the Forum is going to attend, because they, as a venue, are bidding. That's really Inglewood, but that's also the greater L.A. area, so we will support their bid."

Although the 1992 site will be New York's Radio City Music Hall, Greene claims that neither city has the edge yet for '93. "We really have just let both cities know of our intentions, but the heat won't be on for another week or so. The important factors that we look for when choosing a site are things like the city's union policies, police protection and security procedures. But we also have two major projects, our Grammy In The Schools program and a huge music benefit to assist indigent musicians that need to be underwritten by the host committee. That's the main reason L.A. lost the show this year: They weren't willing to do that. Nothing will change for '93. We'll still have the same basic needs and considerations."

Greene says NARAS hopes to make a decision "sometime before the beginning of next year." MC

Country Artists Riding High On The Charts

By Karen Orsi and Keith Bearen

NASHVILLE—With artists such as Garth Brooks, Reba McEntire, Clint Black, Alan Jackson, Randy Travis and Travis Tritt scoring high on the pop album charts, 1991 is shaping up as a record sales year for country music. Currently, there are nearly 30 country records in the Billboard Top 200, with Garth Brooks riding the top of the nation's pop charts, beating out such high profile rock acts as Guns N' Roses and Mötley Crüe.

An Urban Cowboy flashback? Some moonshine in the drinking water?

Many industry pundits will tell you that country has always sold in great numbers, it's just that the new

Soundscan system employed by Billboard to compile its pop album chart, based strictly on sales figures, instead of the previous system which used a combination of sales and airplay, is accurately reflecting the nation's musical taste for the first time.

Ed Mascolo, the VP of Publicity for RCA, whose roster includes two of country's biggest acts, Clint Black and Alabama, is one industry pundit who points to the new chart system. "Billboard is getting real sales figures now, not hype. We've been saying this for a long time. Alabama used to sell three million copies in the early Eighties, and people laughed about it. Garth Brooks and Clint Black are selling as well as anybody. I think there's something like 26-28 country albums on the Billboard Top 200. What do they need a country chart for? Billboard is listing half of their country chart right there in the Top 200."

Joe Mansfield, VP of Sales and Marketing at Capitol Nashville, currently riding high with Garth Brooks, agrees that country has always been a formidable commercial force in music. "Garth Brooks will probably be there for one more week, and then Hammer will get it," he says. "Then Garth will go back in and take over. He'll be in the Top Ten for another year. He's outselling Guns N' Roses, both volumes, two to one."

Jack Lamier, VP of promotion at Epic, cites the new chart system, but the real equation, he believes, consists of both sales and the quality of the product. "I think it's the actual piece count, as well as the music itself. Country, for lack of a better term, has always been the music of the people. The lyric content is part of every facet of their lifestyle and what is happening to them. Years ago, it was all cryin' in your beer, and a lot of that has changed. Country music has matured along with its audience. I think they can relate to it. The lyric is the key."

Sue Austin, Director of A&R at Curb Records in Nashville, says of the phenomena, "It's probably the younger demographics—the age of the country record-buyer is dropping. Instead of buying pop or rock, they're buying country. The videos are also playing a major part in directing the kids, even 21-25-year-olds, in what to buy."

She also feels that what used to be called country music is now a different animal all together. "I remember when I was a child," she says, "you couldn't make me listen to country. But now it's a much more contemporary, young sound."

Joe Mansfield has noticed country music's younger demographics, too. "Now it's not unusual to see AC/DC and Megadeth T-shirts in the audience."

He also sees the "cryin' in your beer" days of country as being idiosyncratic of its past. "The talent out there is getting younger and younger and the old Merle Haggards and George Joneses—not to take away from their talent—are really a thing of the past."

Gene Bridges, Program Director for KLAC 570 AM in Los Angeles, sums up the resurgence of country music with, "You used to be able to spot a country music listener real easy. Now you can't do that anymore." MC

Les Paul Subject of Four-CD Retrospective

By Scott Yanow

LOS ANGELES—On November 19th, Capitol Records will release Les Paul: The Legend And The Legacy, a four-CD box set tracing the recording career of the “father of the electric guitar.”

This remarkable guitarist-inventor is responsible for a great deal of the equipment and techniques currently used in modern music, including solid body electric guitars, multi-track recording, echo pedals, the alteration of recording speeds, sound mixers and the Les Paulverizer. He is also known for the string of hits he enjoyed on Capitol during 1948-56, both with and without the voice of Mary Ford.

The bulk of the first three CDs consist of his original recordings in chronological order, along with excerpts from Les Paul and Mary Ford’s popular radio show, with the final CD consisting entirely of unreleased items which have been stored for decades in Paul’s studio. “I added new parts to the original tapes,” says the guitarist. “It was kind of tedious because I had to play exactly the same way that I had 40 years ago, but this allowed me to turn the mono recordings into stereo. It was quite a challenge, especially with some of the performances being incomplete. It took 3-4 months, but proved to be worth it.”

Born in Waukesha, Wisconsin in 1915, Les Paul displayed talents in both music and electricity from a very early age, building a crystal radio set as a youngster and quickly learning banjo, harmonica and guitar. By the late Twenties, he was playing guitar professionally and soon became versatile enough to play country, jazz and blues with equal ease. The only problem was, in some venues, people had trouble hearing his guitar over the other instruments. “I contrived a way to make it louder,” the guitarist recalls. “I took a phonograph needle, stole my dad’s radio and jabbed that right into the top of my guitar. It was pretty barbaric, but at least now my guitar could be heard. I soon took a telephone apart, used half of it as a microphone and half to put on the strings of my guitar. That’s when I started to conceive of the idea of the electric guitar.”

By 1934, he had designed his first solid-body electric guitar, sixteen years before his association with Gibson resulted in the first commercial Les Paul models.

Leader of his own trio in the Forties, Les Paul built his own studio in 1945 and started working extensively with overdubbing techniques. Using just his guitar and Mary Ford’s voice, Paul was able to create dazzling orchestral recordings that, by the late Forties, were hugely popular. On their radio show, he came up with the name of a fictional machine, the Les Paulverizer, to explain how the two of them could sound like an orchestra. “After I created the mythical idea, one day I decided to make it into a reality, so we could do it

New Release Celebrates The Songs Of Elton John & Bernie Taupin

By Steven P. Wheeler

LOS ANGELES—More than twenty years after piano player Reg Dwight (later rechristened Elton John) and teenage poet Bernie Taupin answered an ad in the New Musical Express, which began a musical collaboration responsible for over 100 million in album sales, sixteen of the world’s leading musical artists pay tribute to the John/Taupin songwriting partnership on a new CD entitled Two Rooms (a video and laserdisc containing previously unseen studio and concert scenes is also available).

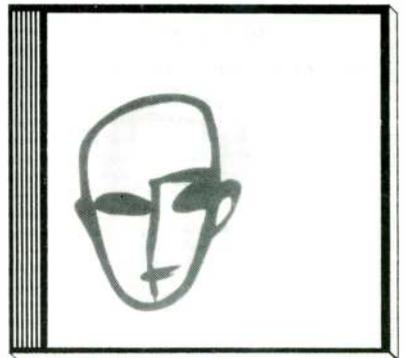

Artists as diverse as Eric Clapton, the Beach Boys, Wilson Phillips, Sinead O’Connor, George Michael, the Who, Kate Bush, Sting, Jon Bon Jovi, Tina Turner and Rod Stewart have all recorded their favorite John/Taupin songs for the project, which was two years in the making.

The result is a pleasing compilation demonstrating the amazing diversity of the duo. Among the highlights of Two Rooms, which derives its title from the first song they wrote together after John and Taupin reteamd in 1980 following a four-year separation (“Two Rooms At The End Of The World”) are Rod Stewart’s tender rendition of “Your Song,” the Who’s raucous cover of “Saturday Night’s Alright (For Fighting)” and “The Bitch Is Back” by Tina Turner.

Rounding out the CD: Eric Clapton’s blues rock take of “Border Song”; the Beach Boys’ doo-wop styled “Crocodile Rock”; Joe Cocker’s soulful “Sorry Seems To Be The Hardest Word”; “Levon” by Jon Bon Jovi; Phil Collins’ “Burn Down The Mission”; Kate Bush’s passionate rendition of “Rocket Man”; Sting’s plaintive reading of “Come Down In Time”; Wilson Phillips’ harmony filled “Daniel”; “Madman Across The Water” by Bruce Hornsby; George Michael’s “Tonight”; “Philadelphia Freedom” by Hall & Oates; “Don’t Let The Sun Go Down On Me” by Oleta Adams; and “Sacrifice” by Sinead O’Connor.

Summing up the duo’s career so far, Bernie Taupin told Music Connection (in an earlier interview): “I think if we’ve done anything over the past twenty years, it would be that we gave pop music some integrity at a time when it was flowery. I think we said something worthwhile in the three-minute single and helped bring credibility back to popular music.”

Industry Mourns Loss of Promotor/Manager Bill Graham

By Rick Terkel

SAN FRANCISCO—The entire music industry was saddened by the death of Bill Graham, 60. Rock music's greatest entrepreneur died October 25th in a helicopter crash just east of Vallejo, California. Graham, his pilot Steve Kahn and longtime friend Melissa Gold perished when their helicopter exploded after striking a 200 foot utility tower during bad weather. The trio had been returning from the Concord Pavillion af-onstage. I had all of the parts all over the floor in the studio, trying to put them together, when I got a phone call from actor George Murphy telling me that President Eisenhower would like very much for us to perform for him at a private party. That left me with two days to get the machinery together.

It so happened that that night we were scheduled to play for the Boy Scouts so we debuted the Les Paulverizer, and it failed! It started to go bad during the second half of our show. That made Mary very concerned about taking this thing to play for Ike. Luckily, two days later, the show went without a hitch. Ike said to Nixon, 'I'll never figure out how he does it!'

During the years 1964-74, Les Paul retired as a performer, working full time on his inventions and guitar designs, but he eventually returned, recording two popular albums with Chet Atkins, and since 1984 has played every Monday night at the New York club Fat Tuesday's. "With my arthritis, I really only have two fingers on my left hand and none on my right that are not stiff, so I had to learn how to play all over again. But it hasn't really hindered me. Now I think things out a lot more. Right now, I'm working on putting in new electronics in the guitar, trying to perfect and improve the sound. I'm also in the process of doing four albums for Sony, a jazz, a pop, a blues and a country album. I love to play in all four bags; it's a lot of fun."

Inducted into the Rock & Roll Hall of Fame in 1988, Les Paul's music remains popular. "I played in Spain last week [at the Guitar Legends show], and we were just shocked by the reaction. We came out in the middle of a rock concert, played 'How High The Moon,' and the kids went crazy!"

ter a Huey Lewis and the News concert, which Graham promoted.

Born Wolfgang Grajonca in Berlin, Graham migrated to the U.S. His first promotion was a 1965 benefit concert for a San Francisco mime troop that he represented as business manager. By early 1968, his shows routinely drew overflow crowds. He opened the Fillmore West in San Francisco and later that year, the Fillmore East in New York City. Both concert halls achieved legendary status.

Graham promoted some of the biggest shows in rock history, including Bob Dylan and the Band (1974); Crosby, Stills, Nash & Young's reunion concert (1974); the Rolling Stones 1982 tour; Live Aid; New York's 1986 Crackdown on Crack concert; and last year's Amnesty International tour. Graham also co-founded the Rock & Roll Hall of Fame in Cleveland, Ohio.

Throughout his career Bill Graham was known as a tough, outspoken leader on both music and politics. His strong beliefs and independence did not always make him friends, yet he always commanded respect. Irreplaceable will be his wealth of wisdom.

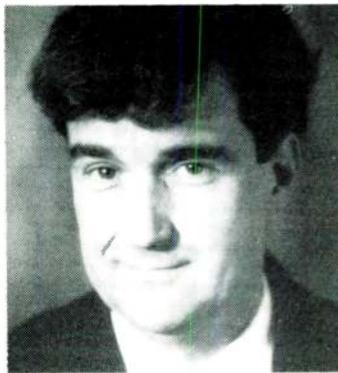

Graham is survived by his son, David.

Dan Ashbrook

Company: EMI Records
Title: West Coast Talent Scout
Duties: Talent acquisition
Years with company: Two years

Dialogue

Beginnings: "Ron Fair hired me about two years ago to train and learn about the inner workings of the record company. I started out in the mail room. Prior to that, I was an intern at KNAC, and I would market their T-shirts and other merchandise, but that ended when Brockum Merchandising bought them out. I met Ron Fair through my job at the radio station. I had always wanted to do A&R. I was a musician all my life and just love music. I grew up with the Beatles, Rolling Stones, Cream, Hendrix and all the classic groups of the early Seventies. From the mail room I moved directly into A&R."

Why A&R: "I've wanted to do A&R because of my love for music. I went to film school, so, if not for A&R, I'd probably be working in film somewhere. My interests, however, lie in A&R. The pay is horrible, and the hours are ridiculous, but I've always been out in the clubs on a regular basis—nowadays about six or seven nights a week."

A Typical Day: "I usually get to the office about 10:30 and start answering my own phone calls because I have no assistant. That alone is an eight-hour job! Right now I'm signing a band called the Betrayed. They're from Boston, but they live out here now. I ran into them in March at the Coconut Teaszer. It was their very first gig together. As a matter of fact, they just got their drummer that day, so it was their very first day together as a band, and I signed them after that first show. I brought Ron Fair down for his approval, and we first put them into a development deal for a while, but now they're signing.

"Because the band has no manager, I'm taking over those chores, in addition to my A&R gig. So I get the usual band calls—the rent is due and we have no money...we have no money for food...we have no money for rehearsal...we need you to get us transportation...what do you think about this in our deal...why aren't we getting a video.... The band is represented by Owen Sloane, their attorney, but because I know everyone, I'm the guy that has to put it all together. EMI has been very cool about it. They feel the band doesn't need another person interfering in their careers now.

"Also, during the day, I take three to four meetings with bands—mostly unsigned bands from the area. I'm into looking for stuff that's outside of the network circle of A&R reps and publishing companies. I'm always out on the streets looking for bands that have no involvement whatsoever. Usually when an attorney sends me a tape, it's pretty bad. They're not in it for the music, they're here to make money. So I tend to stray from the norm of the music industry."

Talent Ingredients: "For me to think a band is ready to be signed, they have to have a deep passion for music and the ability to write songs. They have to have that personality that says they are songwriters. There are a lot of people out there that can play, but few that have a feeling for what it is to be an artist."

Unsolicited Tapes: "I always listen to every tape that comes into my office. It may take me eight to twelve weeks to send out a response because of the volume, but I do try and get to all of them. I'm constantly on the phone calling bands to update their demos and telling them to send me more songs. Also, there are times when producers or publishers call and ask me what I've passed on lately, and I send them some of these demo tapes."

Local Scene: "I think the local scene is great, and there's a lot of talent out there. The problem is that many of these groups don't have the connections or business knowledge to reach the right people. In order to find the great talent out here, you've gotta get out to the clubs all the time and stick with it. You have to have a passion for being out. You can't just read the ads in Bam or L.A. Weekly and know what's going on. Also, a lot of great bands go unnoticed because of the politics at labels. Signings depend on a number of things, including how many spots on the label's roster need to be filled.

"There's no real formula for knowing how to look for talent. You just have to constantly be looking. You have to put yourself at the level of the artist/musician. There are lots of A&R people and record company people who put themselves so far above the artist that they never see eye to eye and never become friends with the act. Remember, A&R is basically artists and relationships. One of the down sides of the business is, even today, too many bands are getting ripped off or are being used as tax write-offs. There are still too many industry people who aren't into it for the passion of the music and for hanging out with the artists."

Club Hopping: "I'm usually out in the clubs all the time. I'll go out 21 nights in a row and then take off three or four nights. Not a day goes by that I don't get a lot of calls and invitations to go see a specific band. And which bands I go see depends on the vibes I get from talking to the band members or their managers. You see, I make friends with a lot of the bands on the streets. Even though they might not be right for EMI, I still might enjoy their music—so I just hang out with them."

The Process: "What will usually happen when I see a band I want to sign is I'll go to them after their show and introduce myself to them. Then, I'll have them come up to the office and play their tapes. We'll talk for a while until I get to know a little about them as people and as musicians. Eventually, I'll bring them to Mitchell Leib, the VP of A&R, and it goes up the ranks until we send a tape to Ron Fair. We usually set up a showcase if Ron really digs it. If he likes it, we take it further and talk about what the band really needs and decide if we're talking about an actual recording deal or a development deal to begin with. It all depends on what stage the band is at."

Getting Noticed: "The best way to reach me and have me notice your band is to first send me a cover letter telling me about your band. When I get it, I'll call you up and request a tape from you. The thinking is that if you take the time to write or type a neat cover letter that is intelligent and has my name spelled correctly and gives me some solid information on the band—then I think maybe there's something there. Maybe this person's got it. My office phone is constantly ringing. People just call up and start telling me they have the greatest band. Yeah, sure. EMI is a very approachable company, and we're easy to work with. As long as you show us you know what you're doing, we'll be open to you."

Advice: "For bands planning to come to L.A., I would advise you to stay home. Become a big fish in a little pond. A&R people love to travel, and if you're that good, regardless of where you're from, we'll find out about you and come to see you. All you have to do is make your connections by doing some research. There is always somebody connected to a label—someone at a local record store or a radio station or a distributor or a concert promoter. Just do your homework and take the time to find out. Stay in your hometown. Make your connections and play around. Build a fan following and make money doing it."

"For local Los Angeles bands, my advice is to be really confident in yourself and your music. If you're going to submit a demo or set up a showcase, make sure it's exactly as you want it to be perceived. Do not leave anything to anyone's imagination. I usually prefer demo tapes with five songs. And keep it focused musically."

Lil' Gypsy has terminated its personal management agreement with Ted Cohen Management and has signed on with Cool Artists, a newly-formed company headed up by Ingrid Olson and Ted Cohen.

Clearly, one of the most striking, most expensive, most colorful and most together press packages ever sent into Demo Critique comes from the guys in Ambush. Everything is in full color—the cassette jacket and press folder—you name it. But this only proves they've got good taste and some bucks. How's the music, you ask? Well, suffice it to say that these guys actually took the time to write strong, melodic rock tunes. Though the vocals are a bit thin, the production is sharp and all of the instruments are indeed audible. My favorite is "Everytime We Say Goodbye," a medium tempo rocker with a chorus that just won't quit. Although I want to rave about this band, the jury is still out with regard to the lead vocalist. Is he powerful enough to carry the band? I'm not really sure at this point. The entire package, however, is a pleasant surprise.

The three members of Wizdom (Mike Ricketts, Larry Krueger, Jeff Clark) have put together a cohesive tape featuring three originals—"She's So Fine," "Ride The Pony" and "Tammy." And even before the first chorus of the first song nears, you can just about sing it. That's one sign of a good song. The second selection, though heavier on guitars, is very similar feeling-wise, but not nearly as strong as the opener. And the closer, "Tammy," is a real uptempo rocker with another strong chorus. The first problem I run into is that the songs are just "okay"—but nothing really spectacular. I think the band should take the first and last songs and build from there. Vocally, the guys are pretty together. They just need a couple of "A" songs to put them over the top. A couple more months with pen and paper oughta do the trick for them.

Dream Frontier is not a new band by any means. On the contrary, they've been around since 1986 when Andrew Albright and Chuck Mac Intosh put them together. Since then, they've been honing their craft as performers and songwriters and the many years of work shows up on their most recent demo tape featuring five original compositions in the folk/rock genre. Plenty of rhythms and lots of room to dance on these tracks! Both vocally and instrumentally, the band is flawless, but I would like to hear some stronger material. As it stands now, most of these selections would make for some strong album filler, but nothing to set Dream Frontier on their way to the charts. This is a band with a definite sound of its own, so strong, hit material is essential for their success. Keep writing, guys, you're almost there. Next demo oughta do it for you.

Activities

A few issues back, we gave you the wrong mailing address for the South By Southwest conference. So, here's the correct address and we're sorry for any inconveniences we may have caused you. South By Southwest P.O. Box 4999, Austin, TX 78765, phone (512) 467-7979 or FAX (512) 451-0754.

Virgin Music held its annual "get to know our writers" bash on the premises of its homey headquarters in Hollywood. The schmooze level was extremely high as songwriters, A&R reps, managers, attorneys, BMI and ASCAP employees, among many others enjoyed the warm evening's breeze, good tunes courtesy of the many Virgin Music recording artists and the delightful munchies.

Bug Music Songwriter Activities

Don Dixon's "I Can Hear The River" and David Egan/Greg Hansen's "Please No More" are on the new Joe Cocker album, with Marti Jones adding vocals.

Sand Rubies have recorded Del Shannon's "Stranger In Town" for their new Chrysalis LP.

Jude Johnstone's "The Woman Before Me" is on Trisha Yearwood's hit debut LP.

Jesse Winchester's "Sweet Little Shoe" is the first single from Dan Seal's new LP.

Rick West's "I Wouldn't Change A Thing About You, But Your Name" is on the new Eddy London LP on RCA.

The Shoes have released Oh Yeah! by the Spongetones on their Black Vinyl label. Shoes are also readying themselves to release a Christmas compilation LP called Yuletunes, which features songs by Shoes, Material Issue, Marti Jones & Don Dixon, Matthew Sweet, the Cavedogs, Spooner, Bill Lloyd and the Spongetones.

New Signings

PolyGram/Island Music Group recently penned a publishing deal with Def America's Seattle rapper Sir Mix-A-lot. His last two albums, which were released on Nasty Mix, sold in excess of 1.5 million records. Sir Mix-A-Lot's new album is scheduled for release during the First Quarter of 1992.

Bob-A-Lew Music signed two New York-based BMI writers, Jon and Sally Tiven. The Tivens wrote "He Don't Know," the next single from Huey Lewis and the News' gold album from EMI, Hard At Play. They also have four songs (co-produced by Jon) on an upcoming B.B. King album.

Primat America signed songwriter/producer Rick Palombi to an exclusive long-term publishing agreement. Palombi, whose first band—the Shocking Pinks—backed up Neil Young in the early Eighties, has written songs that have been recorded by Laura Branigan, E.G. Daly and MTV's Julie Brown, among others. Together with British vocalist Bernadette "Bernie" Barlow, they comprise the new signing group of Joy. Palombi has composed and arranged all of the music for their album debut, which he is currently producing and will be released by SBK Records in the new year.

ASCAP/PRS held its annual awards dinner in London. Phil Collins was named Songwriter of the Year with the greatest number of performances for his songs "Another Day In Paradise," "I Wish It Would Rain Down" and "Something Happened On The Way To Heaven." Publisher of Collins' three songs, Hit & Run Music Publishing Ltd. received the Publisher of the Year award.

BMG Music Publishing has garnered some of country music's top awards during 1991's CMA Week. Careers-BMG Music Publishing was named BMI Country Publisher of the Year and "Hard Rock Bottom Of Your Heart" written by Hugh Prestwood won BMI's Most Performed Song of the Year.

NEM Entertainment, Inc. has signed songwriter/producer/musician Ron Bloom to an exclusive long-term publishing agreement. Bloom's most recent projects include Tattoo Rodeo's Rode Hard—Put Away Wet on Atlantic Records and the new album by Princess Stephanie of Monaco on WTC/CBS. He has also produced the new Atlantic album by the Sleeze Beez.

Bug Music signed Sam Phillips, Mack McKenzie, Traditional Music Co. (Arhoolie Records), Forbidden Pigs, Gerre Edinger and Zamboni Music.

Songwriter Pointers

Aaron West Arkeen

When "West" Arkeen was a youngster, he religiously listened to Jimi Hendrix ("I had like 37 Hendrix albums," he says) and immediately began playing the guitar. Throughout his youth, he played in numerous Top Forty bands, but decided he wanted to "make it" as a musician in an original band. So, he moved from his home in San Diego to Hollywood, where he attended Guitar Institute of Technology. It was in Hollywood where he hooked up with the members of Guns N' Roses and began writing with them (actually, he was Axl Rose's roommate). Currently, Arkeen has three cuts on the new Guns N' Roses albums—"The Garden," co-written with Axl; "Yesterdays," also co-written with Axl; and "Bad Obsession," co-written with Izzy. He's also co-written with Asphalt Ballet ("Precious Waste of Time"), Wildside ("Crash Diet"), Every Mother's Nightmare, Child and Robin Zander.

MC: Do you prefer to collaborate with artists?

WA: Well, it's not so much if I prefer to, it's just the way it is if you're a rock writer. If you're a pop writer, you can just write a song, and if it's good, the band will pick it up. But most rock bands won't even consider it if they haven't had some part in the writing. It's not like I'm in a really large industry. There's only like three or four of us. So it's like a small industry, and it's easy to get gigs. But you find out real soon that rock bands want to write their own material. They don't want a writer in the first place and they're being forced to have a writer, so you've got to try and get on their good side.

MC: How do you do that?

WA: Well, I just show up and show them that I'm a normal person. For example, with Every Mother's Nightmare, [the record company] sent them these short-haired, stiff type of writers—these big gun, pop writer guys. I'm not that at all. I'm more a street monger. So, I get in there and I say, "Look man, it doesn't matter to me one way or the other." You see, my bread and butter, whether I want it or not, is Guns N' Roses. So, it's like, I'm doing it because I want to do it. And if they want me to work with them fine, and if they don't, that's fine, too. I'll just party with them and hang out.

Billy Bragg

By Pat Lewis

London-born singer-songwriter Billy Bragg has been professionally making what you might call "political" or "consciousness raising" music for over ten years now. But he doesn't just talk about the ills of the society or the injustices that he sees in our world and leave it at that. No, ma'am. This guy practices what he preaches and has actually wound up in jail several times for participating in rallies against things like apartheid and nuclear power plants. His concerts are another place that Bragg uses as a place to get on his soapbox. But he also manages to balance his preaching with a good deal of entertainment and music.

Over the last several years, Bragg has turned his seemingly never ending energies toward informing his audiences about AIDS. "Well, seeing as how the lingua franca of pop for the last 35 years has been the sex act," he says, "I think that transmitting HIV virus makes all of us writing about [the sex act] suddenly think of a new agenda. That's what 'Sexuality' [a song from Don't Try This At Home, Bragg's current Elektra LP] is about."

An outspoken solo, acoustic guitar-toting performer, Bragg uses his music as a vehicle to challenge his audience. And in this way, even though it may seem inconsequential, he feels he can elicit change on a global level. But it is up to his audiences to make these changes; he can only make them aware of the problems. "I think that the role of a songwriter is to try and hold a mirror up to society and write about what you see and what you feel about it," Bragg explains. "Particularly during a time when there's so much confrontation in society as there is at the moment, I think that the poet—the songwriter—has a role to contribute to that. Not that you can change any of it. But the point is, if there is a feeling in the audience and they want some kind of a change, then your role is to focus on that feeling. And more importantly, to reflect it back to them, because it's the audience that can change the world, not the performer. The performer can be just a catalyst or a lightning rod."

One key point of Bragg's persona and his message is that he feels we should all do our own part to bring about the changes that we feel will make the world a better place to live for all humankind. "It makes me sound a little too much like a boy scout by trying to do my part," he confesses. "I'm trying to make sense of it as much as anybody else. It's a pretty confusing world that we see everyday coming down the newspapers or television or wherever we get our information. But I chose to try and make sense of it by writing songs and shouting it out at the top of my lungs on a record. Other people have other ways."

His choice to use music to voice his concerns and worries and "do his part," so to speak, is a cleansing experience for the songwriter. "It's very much a confessional and absolutist kind of relationship that you have with the audience," he says.

Bragg's process of writing is completely free-form and differs from one song to the next. "I'll play the guitar to relax in the evening or whenever," he explains, "and I'll just mess around with it. Or maybe someone will say something to me and that will spark something off. Or a tiny little concept will give me a crack of light into an idea and I'll peak through and see the idea of a song. Another time, a song will come straight out all in one go. So, no two songs are ever the same."

The 34-year-old Londoner draws his inspirations from, what he calls, "the grey area in our existence." "It is the area which is full of doubt," he explains, "the area where the certainties that we grew up to expect don't actually match with those that actually face us on a day-to-day basis. That grey area where personal relationships and national politics crossover—not just the politics and not just the personal bits, but where they cross. That area where your relationship is dictated by your economic or social circumstances, which are themselves dictated by the political agenda of the country."

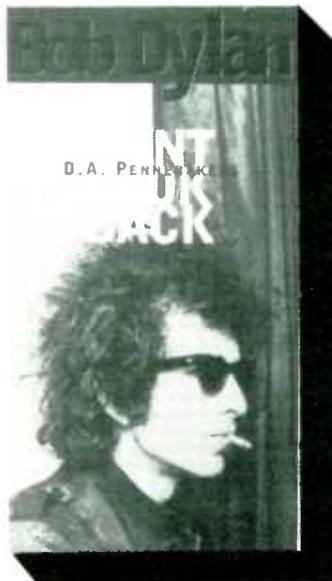

Interesting, this grey area is something that does not anger Bragg. "It's just something that interests me to write about," he states. "It's an area that I find the most fruitful to choose my characters from."

Bragg not only writes about fictitious characters, but he also writes about "real life" people that he may or may not know. And whether or not those "real life" people know they are being written about is completely left up to Billy Bragg. "If I chose that they should know," he says, "then I'll put in a point of reference that's not only known to me but the person as well. And they'll listen to it and come and look quizzically at me. Other times I don't do that, and people think the song's about them. I think if you have a relationship with a songwriter who's prolific, you're bound to think, I wonder if that song's about me."

LOOKING BACK

Warner Reprlse Video has just released Don't Look Back, a fascinating, behind-the-scenes look at Bob Dylan's 1965 tour of England. Performance footage coupled with encounters with harried interviewers (there's an interesting interview between an antagonistic Dylan and an out-of-his depth journalist) and competing rock musicians (Donovan, Alan Price) help give the viewer a sense of the craziness and the pressure surrounding Dylan's every move during this heady time in his career. Don't Look Back was directed by D.A. Pennebaker, who also captured Dylan's controversial 1966 tour with the Band on the Unreleased Eat The Document (let's hope this one also sees the light of day). Suggested retail price: $19.98.

Rinaldo (Courtesy: The RapPages Magazine)

HANK SHOCKLEE

By Pascale Lafranchi

As the head coach of one of New York's most prominent production teams, the Bomb Squad, Hank Shocklee is best known as Public Enemy's master producer. But helping establish rap's most innovative and controversial group was only one of Shocklee's many achievements. His credentials also include Ice Cube's "Amerikkka's (sic) Most Wanted," BBD's hit single "I Thought It Was Me" and Janet Jackson's "Rhythm Nation" (remix), to name just a few.

Combining unusual song structures with an amazing array of sampled music, as well as sound effects, Shocklee has the ability to create his own style. "I just wanted to do something that I had never heard anybody do with rap or on wax. Between all of us, putting in our ideas or rejecting them, I guess that's how our sound developed."

Many people who want to enter the music production arena wonder whether or not formal training is necessary. Says Shocklee: "It's all by trial and error. You make a record, and then if it hits, you make another one. The only training we have is that we are music historians, librarians. We keep records, I mean physical records. We know records better than anybody else."

Shocklee explains that the role of a producer is more complicated and less glamorous than most people imagine. "A lot of people think that a producer just makes a beat or comes together with a groove or a sample. That's only a small part of our job. The biggest part is giving the artist direction. A producer has to be the middleman between the artist and the public, the middleman between the artist and the record company."

He says his job never gets dull since each artist comes to him with a different approach. "First, I have to get to know who I'm working with in order to know what kind of track this person is going to feel comfortable doing. If the artist has done previous records, I look for an area I feel he or she can grow in."

"Some artists have a clear determination of what they want to do. For instance, when 3rd Bass came to us, they said, 'This is what we got, this is what we want to do. Please help us make this thing correct.' In that case, we acted more as coaches. We arranged the record and made sure it was tight."

Although the Bomb Squad is best known for producing rap artists, mainstream acts like Janet Jackson and Paula Abdul have called upon the Squad's talents to remix their material. "I like to do remixes. I call it exercise. It allows me to experiment. We are able to see what happens if we decided to take Janet and give her a different style, or we give Paula Abdul a different approach."

Production techniques vary with each producer. Hank is of the opinion that it is better to match the rhymes to the tracks. "It's hard to match the track to the rhyme because the rhythm of the beat is more important than the rhythm of the speech. The key is to make a marriage. Also, the rapper has to have respect for the music."

Does he consider digital technology to be superior to traditional analog recording? "It's apples and oranges. It depends upon the application. Digital recording is chosen by those who want a cleaner sound. We chose analog because the stuff we do is gritty and dirty, and we want to keep it that way. Analog has a different sound to it. It's warmer, the bottom end [of the sound] is rounder. Digital is a little sterile for me. It's like being in the bathroom as opposed to being in a plush living room. The sound in the bathroom bounces all over because of the tiles, and it sounds very shiny. The same is true for digital."

Does today's advanced technology make for better records, considering that the Beatles recorded Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Heart's Club Band on four-track analog equipment? "By far, modern technology makes music better. Actually, what I mean is, it saves you time and money. If you look at the Beatles, they spent a lot of time trying to get the tricks we have today. If they wanted a big, big snare sound, they had to mike drums for hours. Nowadays, we can just go into a room, hit a reverb and boom, we have that effect. Modern technology is very convenient."

BBD's latest album, WBBD, Bootcity, The Remix Album, is one of the team's latest trophies. "We've done the remixes on quite a few tunes and produced a couple as well. We mixed half the album only because we have a pretty good ear for how things should sound."

"One of the reasons we do a lot of remixes is because we make the artists sound really good. Some people work with frequencies cluttered, so we come in and separate certain frequencies. This is what we call adding listening enjoyment for the listener."

NEW TOYS—BARRY RUDOLPH

Wha Wha One by Metalhead

Wha Wha One is a rack mounted wah-wah and stereo volume pedal all in one. The Wha Wha One unit takes up one rack space and acts as the "brain" for a remote volume pedal. This is the unit for guitar players who already have a rack system and would prefer to avoid running their guitar signal through a good 'ol Cry Baby pedal. Not that anything is wrong with that it's just that the additional wiring back and forth from the rack and guitar can be dodgy at times and there is a loss of sound level and high frequencies with excessive guitar cable lengths. Besides Wha Wha One can be inserted anywhere in your rack loop—like after all your effects.

Wha Wha One uses any ordinary volume pedal so you can get just the right feel with your favorite pedal. A front panel sensitivity control calibrates your pedal to the Wha and a separate "color" control sets the amount or depth of the wah-wah effect. You can switch the Wha Wha One in or out with a separate footswitch or use your existing rack switching system (Bradshaw, Octopus or Midigator) to toggle the Wha Wha One in and out as part of your preset patch configurations. With the Wha switched off it reverts to being a straight ahead volume pedal.

The Wha Wha One sells for $249 retail and for more info, call: Elan Metalhead Electronics at (818) 980-1975 or write 5707 Cahuenga Blvd. North Hollywood, CA 91601.

Tone-X from Chandler

Tone-X is a selectable mid-boost/gain circuit that is installed inside your guitar body. (Of course, this can be done by any qualified guitar tech person).

Featuring an old circuit design used in 60's British amps, Tone-X has an on-board pre-amp with about 15db of gain and a filter sweep control for mid-range boost. One trick is to dial in the resonant peak of your guitar for some "wah-wah" effects or to initiate some very singing feedback sustains.

The Tone-X uses a nine-volt battery and is installed with a minimal amount of hassle. Tone-X sells for $79.99 and for more about it, contact: Chandler Industrials 590 19th Street, San Francisco, CA 94107. The phone number is (415) 626-1742. The FAX number is (415) 626-0671.

Sound Retrieval System from Hughes Aircraft

The SRS or Sound Retrieval System Model AK-100 provides access and control of both the Sum and Difference signals present in a stereo sound source. The SRS unit has a pair of both stereo inputs and outputs that are connected in line between the stereo program (your pre-amp, two-track stereo mix or any stereo pair of tracks) and your playback monitor system. At this point in time, the SRS is a -10dbv unit that is marketed through high end audio stores as an adjunct to home stereo sound systems. SRS will enhance any stereo program by increasing the width of the stereo image and reestablishing realistic dynamic levels. Sounds will appear to come from outside the two speakers. Realism is said to be restored because the proper mix and spectral proportions of the Sum and Difference signals are closer to the original performance as it was

Since the SRS does all this without adding delay, harmonics, phase correction, verb, or EQ., the front panel controls need some explanation. The two main controls are called Space and Center. Space controls the level of the L-R signal. Since all reverbs, delays, echos and room sounds are L-R information, increasing the Space level will appear to add ambience but actually you are just bringing out more of the original ambience than can be normally heard in conventional stereo playback mode. The Center knob adjusts the level of the L+R signal. So you can accentuate or attenuate the center of the stereo mix. So you could make the vocalist move forward to the front of the mix or by turning the Center knob down, cause the vocalist to recede back into the mix.

Other features of the AK-100 are: a built-in stereo synthesizer called 3-D Mono, and a control called Rev Trim which reduces apparent reverberation. I found the SRS to work very well for all stereo programs. The more "stereo" (or ambience information within) the program the more startling the effect. I used the SRS on stereo acoustic guitars, pianos and drum kit overhead mics. I found no disturbing phase cancellation anomalies as with some other devices. The SRS AK-100 sells for $399 retail and for more information, call 1 (800) 2 HEAR 3D or write Hughes Aircraft at P.O. Box 7000 MS LL109, Rancho Santa Margarita CA 92688-2113.

SHOW BIZ—Tom Kidd

'Tis the season to see movies, when the kids are on year-end break and the parents need something to give them a break from their little demons. Plugging quite nicely into this scenario is Touchstone's Ernest: Scared Stupid. This latest installment in the Ernest series has Jim Varney reprising his popular Ernest P. Worrell character. Here, he accidentally releases a treacherous troll that had been entombed for 200 years. With the help of sultry singer Eartha Kitt as a witch, Worrell tries to save his unsuspecting town from the troll's outrage. Though this flick is decidedly small on music, with only George Frederic Handel's "Hallelujah Chorus" in evidence, it makes up for it in being high on costumes and set design. The troll costumes must be seen to be believed. Go see this PG-rated movie for yourself.

Coming up in 1992 from Orion Pictures, look for a flick called Shadows And Fog. This is a comedy, set in the Twenties, which is being shot in black and white. On the cast list we find Woody Allen, John Cusack, Mia Farrow, Jodie Foster, Madonna, John Malkovich and Lily Tomlin.

The soundtrack to Jit—The Movie just landed on our CD changer, and we're glad it did. This new offering features six great performances from the movie, plus six others we just can't live without. Performers include such Third World staples as Robson Banda & the New Black Eagles, Oliver Mutokudzi and Leonard Chiyangwa. For those who haven't seen this Earthworks release, the flick stars Dominic Makuvachuma, Sibongile Nene, Farai Sezenzo, Winnie Ndemera and the aforementioned Oliver Mutokudzi as himself. What's it about? This lyric tells it all: "Above he fights the spirit world/ Below he fights the underworld/ His goal: the hottest girl in town."

Andrew Strong's singing in The Commitments has, not surprisingly, led to a six-record deal with MCA. The seventeen-year-old Irish youth belted out American soul classics as the obnoxious Deco Cuffe in the movie. He says, however, that his new record will be more than soul.

"It's going to be an American sound, a big beefy sound, but all different styles," he says. "It's going to have a bit of rawness to it, an edge. So people will say, 'This guy's in a soul film but he can rock as well.'" Strong plans to return to Ireland to write and rehearse for the album. A November release is planned.

We'd like to take this opportunity to recommend Blood & Concrete. Vinny Golia did the score for this new offering from I.R.S. Media which stars Billy Zane and Jennifer Beals. I.R.S. Records, known for their eclectic musical taste, will handle the soundtrack, though as of press time, we can't tell you just exactly who's on it.

If you haven't heard, Paramount's Stepping Out is a must-see. Based on a hit stage play, this flick stars Liza Minnelli as director of a tap dance class where the participants learn about friendships, hopes and dreams. Their part-time pas-time takes on new significance when the class is called upon to display their skills at a local charity event. "There are times in one's life when one is gripped with a curious bravery," Minnelli is quoted. "When all your instincts tell you to move in a new and unknown direction even though it may scare you. When you act on those instincts and move forward despite the fear—that's stepping out." Oscar-winning composer Peter Matz (Torch Song Trilogy) has the score for the flick, which features Shelley Winters as a pessimistic pianist plus a whole slew of talented unknowns.

Elton John joined an eleven-year-old AIDS patient and thousands of volunteers in Atlanta's first walk to raise money for people with the disease. 18,000 people came to the city's main park recently for the 3.2-mile From All Walks of Life benefit. The event was reported to have raised $542,643. "Sometimes I get a little angry about this disease," said the singer. "I wish sometimes that the governments of some countries would show a little more compassion." John kicked off the march with Brett Lykins, a fourth-grader who last year announced at his school that he had contracted AIDS from a blood transfusion.

We need to point out that several Andy Summers compositions from his newly released World Gone Strange CD on Private Music are prominently featured in Tri Star Pictures' Another You. Summers also plays the part of the bandleader in the film's trailer (with the film's co-star Richard Pryor on sax.) Summers' previous soundtrack work includes the mega-hit, Down & Out In Beverly Hills and 2010: The Year We Make Contact.

Paul and Linda McCartney, both devout vegetarians, have put up $168,000 to buy 80 acres of English forest in a bid to thwart deer hunters. The McCartneys handed over management of the conifer plantation to the League Against Cruel Sports to create a deer refuge that would ban hunters from passing through or hunting on the land. The league has attempted to end stag hunts in the area by a popular hunting club. "Because we've now bought these woods, it means the stag hunts are automatically banned, and it gives the deer a chance," said the former Beatle. "They will have some form of sanctuary from this barbarism."

It has finally been confirmed that David Cassidy will share the spotlight on his first U.S. tour in fifteen years with former Partridge Family co-star Danny Bonaduce. Bonaduce, 31, was recently sentenced in

Andy Summers

Phoenix, Arizona, to three years probation for attacking a transvestite prostitute. It is said that he would open his comedy routine with references to his recent problems. This tour is Cassidy's first since he scored a Top Twenty hit last year with the single "Lying To Myself," from his self-titled CD. Plans for a 1990 tour, however, fell through when his record company, Enigma, went out of business. "It was so disheartening, because I had a hit, there was an audience for my music, I was getting so much positive press and then

British songbird Alexa Jago has proudly announced that she will appear with talk show host Morton Downey Jr. in a new flick called High Heels. The singer will contribute an original composition called "I Won't Believe In Love" to the soundtrack. The English expatriate recently made her screen debut in Boys N' The Hood, before tackling this new role of a young, beautiful variety performer with hopes of getting discovered. Jago recently appeared at a new nightclub called Erika's at the Rose. This club, underneath the infamous Studio One in West Hollywood, has, as well-noted by musical director Gayle Von, changed its focus from old gays seeking young ones to "a club for everybody" and promises many other great upcoming shows.

rently, McNeilly is pushing his latest collection, Lethal Art, which shows potentially deadly elements in 3-D. "These pieces are not really sculptures, but rather, montages," says the artist. "The blades and nails are actually sharp enough to hurt people who try to touch them. Alice called me after he's seen some of my Lethal Art. It's kind of funny that my art work shocked the king of psycho rock!"

But at least she fits in Barbie's clothes. MC

THEY SAY IT'S YOUR BIRTHDAY: On the occasion of what would've been John Lennon's 51st birthday, October 9th, Alliance for Survival's Jerry Rubin (in the Lennon T-shirt) and Honorary Mayor of Hollywood Johnny Grant led festivities honoring the ex-Beatle. Fans showed up at the site of Lennon's Walk of Fame star (near the corner of Yucca and Vine) to listen to Beatles classics and eat cake in honor of the rock star/peacenik.

HEY ALVIN: Dave Alvin apes his brother Phil during a recent performance at the Palomino. Alvin was in town to promote his excellent new release, Blue Blvd. If you're a Blasters fan or just a fan of good, solid roots rock, this album definitely delivers the goods.

THE WHOLE BRAIN AND NOTHING BUT THE BRAIN: Sheila Davis, author of The Craft Of Lyric Writing, and Aaron Meza of SGA (Songwriters Guild of America) are pictured during Davis' day-long workshop, "Writing With Your Whole Brain," a seminar designed to help songwriters expand their skills, held on Oct. 19th at Beverly Hills High School.

LONG LIVE THE KING: B.B. King signed and donated one of his trademark Gibson "Lucille" guitars to the New York Hard Rock Cafe's memorabilia collection. The blues legend was celebrating the 40th birthday of his famous red Gibson guitar and the release of his new MCA album, There Is Always One More Time, produced by Stewart Levine. On hand to help him celebrate were Joe Sample and lyricist Will Jennings.

'FEET' DON'T FAIL ME NOW: Capitol's promotion staff is shown rallying round Crowded House's new single release, "Fall At Your Feet," in hopes of breaking this well-crafted, melodic ballad. Sporting a melody as sweet as Crowded House's breakthrough smash, "Don't Dream It's Over," this single stands the best chance of becoming a hit than anything else on the band's current album, Woodface.

BACKSTAGE BUDDIES: Producer Tony Berg (second from right), who did such a nice job producing Squeeze's latest opus, Play, visits Warner Bros. recording act Altered State following the band's recent Club Lingerie performance.

The O'Jays, Levert (which includes O'Jays member Eddie Levert's two sons, Sean and Gerald) and the Rude Boyz played a pair of sold-out shows at the venue.

FOR PETE'S SAKE: The Ironin' Maiden of L.A.'s country scene, Melba Toast, helped boost The Mr. Pete Show's ratings past Arsenio Hall recently. Miss Melba is a fixture on the scene as a singer, media personality and promoter.

A SUPER SONG: Brad Roberts, lead-vocalist/songwriter for Arista recording act Crash Test Dummies, a Canadian-bred four-piece band which is making some noise on the U.S. singles charts with their debut single, "Superman's Song," and new album, The Ghosts That Haunt Me, is pictured during a recent performance at the Whisky. Explaining how this folk roots band happened upon their unique, incongruous moniker, Roberts explains: "One evening at our rehearsal space, a med student friend of mine, who had been watching films of car accident victims one afternoon, stumbled in and in a drunken, slurred voice said to us, 'You know, maybe you should call yourselves Crash Test Dummies.' And we all had a chuckle and said, 'Well, I guess that's as good a name as any.' Several years later, when the Dummies landed a record deal, they pondered whether to change their name, but decided it was perfect for the band's eclectic fusion of styles. As for the band's first single, "Superman's Song," a wry homage to the man of steel, Roberts states, "Oddly enough, when the label shipped the song to radio, the nearly unanimous reaction was, 'Look, you're crazy, we're not playing this. It's far too left of mainstream.'" But the programmers eventually came around, and the single is surprising everyone with its early chart success.

MUSIC CONNECTION Ten Years Ago...

Tidbits from our tattered past

ALL YOU NEED IS LOVE: Arthur Lee, the leader of Sixties L.A. powerhouse Love, has signed to do his first solo LP with Rhino Records.

NOT SO SPECIAL: If you're convinced that Midnight Special has gotten too far away from rock in the last few years, you're not alone. Wolfman Jack, with the show since the beginning, is saying the same thing and he's quit the series.

IN THE 'WHO THOUGHT THIS ONE UP' DEPARTMENT: United Artists has reportedly asked David Bowie to give up his singing career for a multi-million dollar movie contract. They want him to portray Fifties singer Johnny Ray, following his success in the Broadway version of The Elephant Man.

Robbie Robertson

By Michael Amicone

As the main creative force behind the Band, Robbie Robertson is responsible for crafting some of the finest songs in the rock canon, including "The Weight," "The Night They Drove Old Dixie Down," "Stage Fright" and "The Shape I'm In."

Robertson and his cohorts, Levon Helm, Richard Manuel (also a talented songwriter), Garth Hudson and Rick Danko, burst full-blown upon the late Sixties music scene, following stints as backing band for Ronnie Hawkins and Bob Dylan. They immediately established themselves as a major new creative force with Music From Big Pink, a formidable debut containing (at least) two classics, "The Weight" and their definitive version of Bob Dylan's "I Shall Be Released," and other gems ("Tears Of Rage," "Chest Fever").

On subsequent albums—the 1969 masterpiece The Band (on which Robertson wrote so evocatively about the Civil War and the Western Frontier), their 1970 rumination on fame, Stage Fright, 1971's strained but memorable Cahoots and 1975's return to form Northern Lights—Southern Cross—the Band cemented its reputation as one of the best ensemble units in rock and Robbie Robertson as one of its finest songwriters and guitarists.

In 1987, a decade after the Band's breakup and following forays into acting (Robertson co-starred in the film Carny) and soundtrack work (The Color Of Money, The King Of Comedy), Robbie Robertson released his first solo album. Unlike the Band's more cohesive efforts, Robbie Robertson, while containing some good music, seemed like a piecemeal affair (Robertson with Peter Gabriel, Robertson with U2, etc.). There was also the added hurdle of his limited singing ability (the Band had three strong vocalists, Helm, Danko and Manuel), to deliver Robertson's material, something which still takes some getting used to.

In contrast, Robertson's new solo opus, which derives its title and steamy musical atmosphere from Storyville, a celebrated party section of New Orleans known for its bordellos and saloons which flourished from 1897-1917, is a confident, seamless song cycle. Recorded in Los Angeles and New Orleans and employing many of New Orleans' best-bred talent—various Nevilles, the Rebirth Brass Band, a reformed Meters—Robertson has once again evocatively conjured up a distant past.

Will Storyville, which harkens back to Robertson's Band days in its sound and thematic quality, find a home on the charts? (It debuted impressively at #69, but has dipped in succeeding weeks.) Not only is he competing with a formidable past, he must also vie for attention in a current pop climate that values musical mediocrity over genuine creativeness.

But as Robertson puts it, when asked how he will fare sandwiched between today's rappers and country hunks: "If somebody would've asked me back in '68, 'How does Music From Big Pink fit in between Cream and the Doors?'—I would have said the same thing that I say to you today. That's not my job—my job isn't to copy. My job is to shuffle the deck."

MC: You used history as a framework on many of your best Band songs. What attracted you to using Storyville as a backdrop for the new album?

RR: I think Storyville was the birthplace of hot music in America, this area in New Orleans where ragtime, barrelhouse music, jazz and blues flourished. New Orleans has always had the most fertile soil for music, anyway. It's the most independent music place in North America—they don't give a shit what's going on in the rest of the world. They have their brass bands, they have their funk...they've always had the best musicians. And it thrives. You can't walk two blocks without hearing music coming from somewhere.

The album is based on a story that I wrote, which is not about Storyville. There's a certain place in the story where these two characters walk through the remnants of Storyville, and they think, "Man, if these walls could talk...imagine this place in its heyday." I've always wanted to do an album based on a story that I wrote, and I've always wanted to do an album that was dripping of New Orleans music as well. I've dabbled with it in the past—working with Allen Toussaint—but I've never done it to the extreme that I wanted to. So this was the fulfillment of a couple of dreams.

MC: There's some great New Orleans talent on the record. As a producer, was it difficult to balance all the elements so the guest artists didn't overwhelm the songs?

RR: Well, it was kind of like "casting" the sounds, just like you would cast a movie, finding the right character for that particular song. Whether it was the Zion Harmonizers singing with Aaron Neville, or the Rebirth Brass Band—it was enjoyable musically, experimenting with these things and making them fit into the story of these songs.

MC: You're known as one of rock's greatest storytellers. Are there notepads of lyrics that you prune down?

RR: There are no set rules for this. Sometimes you sit down and the idea for the song comes, and sometimes you'll have written a note that leads you to a title of a song or the first line of a song and you build on that. Sometimes the music dictates the song; sometimes the mood of the music starts telling the story before you start telling the story and you just kinda follow the path. It can happen every which way under the sun.

MC: Do you find yourself working on songs for a long time?

RR: Sometimes, I remember, it took me almost a year to write "The Night They Drove Old Dixie Down." I had something going, but I didn't know where it was leading, and when I would force ideas on it, it sounded okay; but when the song discovered itself, it seemed more honest to me. And that's hopefully what you can get out of a song, that it finds its true nature.

MC: Were you a student of the Civil War?

RR: Not really. It was information that I had gathered over the years, that I didn't even know was gonna end up in a song. I remembered some things, like when I was sixteen-years-old and had first joined Ronnie Hawkins and the Hawks and went to Arkansas. I remember there was a sympathetic feeling in my heart when I would hear people say that the South's gonna rise again. It was touching, and it stayed with me; I didn't know that it was gonna come out in a song later, only that it had affected me. These things seem to come out of nowhere, but they do come from somewhere. You've gathered up this material in your experience, and this was a typical case of that.

MC: Did you hear tales of Storyville?

RR: No. When I went from Canada down South, I thought I was going to the fountainhead of rock & roll. I discovered this whole Mississippi Delta area, and over a period of time, as I looked closer and closer at this thing, it led to Storyville. Where did this kind of music, these blues guys, have a stage? And in the beginning, as far as I could trace it, it had a stage in Storyville. That's because there were all these saloons and cabarets and bordellos, and what kind of music goes with that? Sweaty, sensual, exciting music. That's how I came to the conclusion that Storyville was the birthplace of hot music—which affected my life. It's what got me attracted to this music. It certainly wasn't the Pat Boone side of it that attracted me. It was that other side of the tracks I was interested in, and if you follow that path, you end up in Storyville.

MC: You used an old cohort, Garth Hudson, on the album. How important were his instrumental contributions to the Band's legacy?

RR: Well, Garth, at the time, was completely unchallenged in music—there wasn't a keyboardist around in his league. It was embarrassing how weak everybody else was. He could have played with a symphony orchestra or with John Coltrane just as easily as he played with us. Even now, when Garth plays, I still don't know anybody who's in his league. He's just a remarkable musician.

MC: I've read that when Garth Hudson joined the Band, he made you and the other members pay for music lessons. Did he really teach you anything?

RR: Oh yeah. We leaped into a whole other spectrum of music once Garth joined us. It wasn't so much the music lessons, it's just his knowledge being shared while working on arrangements. We learned a lot more about harmony and chords.

MC: You and the Band found yourselves in the spotlight early, backing up Dylan in the mid-Sixties.

RR: When we first started working with Bob, he didn't have very much experience playing in bands—he told me that he had, but I don't know what bands they were, because he didn't know much about it.

I was trying [for a quality of music], an emotional experience with dynamics. This wasn't just thrashing around. And we finally discovered something while performing live—although they booed us all over the world. They were really rough. And most of the time, if you were put in this position, you would say, "Wait a minute. I must be doing something wrong. All these people must be right." But when we would listen to the tapes after the shows, we'd say, "That's not that bad." It took a lot of blindness or courage—I don't know which—to think that we were gonna persist out there.

And eventually people came around—we just stuck to our guns. I had a lot of respect for Bob for not giving in. After we recorded Music From Big Pink, Bob heard it and said, "Man, this is really good." Then he could say to the world, "See, I wasn't crazy."

"I don't feel like I'm competing with my past, 'cause I don't know how to. That's the way I felt when I was that age, and this is how I feel now."

—Robbie Robertson

MC: The Band was lauded as a major new force on the music scene after the first two LPs—you even landed on the cover of Time. Was your third LP, Stage Fright, a reaction to all the attention and critical acclaim?

RR: One of the scariest things that ever happened to us was to become successful. We'd been together for a while—six years before we joined up with Bob Dylan, and we'd spent a few years with Ronnie Hawkins and then some time on our own. We'd been around the block. We weren't guys who got some instruments for Christmas and were trying to learn how to play these things. We felt that we had paid some dues.

But all the bullshit that comes with success, some of it you're ready for, some of it you're never ready for. And it was kind of a crazy period, the late Sixties. It was hard for everybody to keep their heads on straight, 'cause the idea was not to...the object was to get crooked. So success came as a confusing element. All of a sudden we were on Time magazine, and there was a seriousness being given to this that we weren't completely clear about.

And by Stage Fright, this confusion was coming out in the music. It was an album that we recorded in something like ten days. We didn't give it the same attention as the Music From Big Pink or The Band albums, at all. See, we had this whole idea that we were going to do it at the Woodstock Playhouse, near where we lived. We were going to record the album live in front of the townspeople—it seemed like an interesting thing to do. But the [Woodstock] festival had happened, and the townspeople hated the idea, so we ended up making the album for nobody at the Woodstock Playhouse because we were already set up there to record the album live.

MC: So you played to an empty playhouse?

RR: Yeah. We were on the stage of that playhouse recording the album, and Todd Rundgren was the engineer. The pieces weren't in the right place. We just barreled ahead and tried to get it down on tape. Half of the material was as good as anything we ever did, and on the other half, we were going after more of a blues attitude.

MC: Like on "Strawberry Wine."

RR: Yeah, that was almost a lark, and to start the record with that...it was almost as if we were jabbing back at the establishment for putting us in that place.

MC: You started Music From Big Pink with a strange choice, "Tears Of Rage." That wasn't a normal opening track either.

RR: Yeah, I know, a long ballad to start the album. At the time, everybody said, "Are you sure about this?" The sequencing of the songs on Music From Big Pink was almost the order in which we recorded them.

MC: Whereas Stage Fright featured some first-rate material, you sounded uninspired on the Band's next studio LP, Cahoots.

RR: Up to that point, we'd always made albums from our environment: We'd go in, set up a clubhouse somewhere and record an album; bring some equipment, we'll make a record. And they had just built this studio in Woodstock—Bearsville Studio—and we went in there, and there was a bit of a distraction with the equipment. It was a new studio, so some things worked, some things didn't. There were some things that threw me a left curve while making that.

And the Band was not fully attentive. They were like, "Oh God, we're making another record?" Sometimes the guys would come to the studio, sometimes they wouldn't. The studio just didn't provide us with the clubhouse atmosphere where we could get in a huddle and do something special. We still nailed a

Top Songwriters Share Songwriting Tips

By Pat Lewis

The following are excerpts from conversations MC recently had with ten of today's top songwriters. Most have landed a Number One hit on the Billboard charts this past year, while the others have scored at least a Top Twenty. The topics discussed mainly center around the technical aspects of songwriting and the nuts and bolts of constructing a song, with anecdotes, advice, helpful hints and even some trade secrets on how to write a hit song.

ANDY GOLDMARK

Publisher: Nonpareil Music/Worner/Chappell Music
Hit: "Love Is A Wonderful Thing," recorded by Michael Bolton
Co-writer: Michael Bolton
Peak: AC: #1, CHR: #2

MC: How does "Love Is A Wonderful Thing" differ from Bolton's other hit?

AG: If you listen to it, the chorus doesn't take off the way "How Am I Supposed to Live Without You" does, for instance. That song sort of rises, and "Love Is A Wonderful Thing" sort of sits there and gets its intensity from the words and the feeling, rather than being modulated or building to a crescendo. The dynamics are different.

MC: What is the standard format or "normal procedure" that one should follow when writing a commercial song?

AG: There isn't a normal procedure. Hopefully, when you write a song, you're always investigating something new. I would say that there are often times a verse/verse/B-section/chorus and then sometimes a chorus/B-section.

MARC TANNER

Publisher: Emerald Forest (presently) but Nelson hits are published by BMG Music.
Hits: "Love And Affection," "After The Rain," "More Than Ever," "Only Time Will Tell," recorded by Nelson.
Co-writers: The Nelsons, Greg Sutton ("Only Time Will Tell"), Rick Wilson ("After The Rain").
Peak: Hot 100: "Love And Affection" #1, "More Than Ever" #9, "After The Rain" #5 and "Only Time Will Tell" #11.
Hit: "She Takes My Breath Away," recorded by Eddie Money
Co-writers: Eddie Money, Dennis Morgan, Monty Byrom, Gory Brougham
Peak: AOR: #5

MC: Is there a standard key or feel or time signature that you'd rely on when writing with Nelson?

MT: Absolutely not. I know very little about anything like that. I don't know what I do when I write. I just know that I plug into whatever the artist is. If that artist is pop, I plug into being a pop guy, and I really don't ever think about keys. I don't have a formula that works for me. I'm more of an energy person. I try and psyche myself into the energy of the artist and really try and become like a member of the band for a few months.

MC: Was it your intention to make Nelson's songs as commercial as possible?

MT: No. Of course, you want to at least be able to feel like the verse flows into the B-section and when the chorus hits, the melody takes off and then it goes back into the verse correctly. And obviously, when you're putting a record together, you say to yourself, I don't want to have ten fast songs unless you're that kind of a band. Nelson's concept in their mind was hard rock undertones with pop melodies. We knew that if we came in and did heavy screaming stuff, it wasn't going to work, because these guys are brothers and they have beautiful voices. They wanted to have power. You just do the best work you can, and if you're lucky enough, it all works for you. But I don't think you can sit down and say, "I'm going to write a hit now."

MC: What about the lyrical content?

MT: Well, there's two ways to write. There's from personal experience where you're actually drawing from something that you're trying to remember of your life or something moved you and you're sort of just writing a story about it. I'm more comfortable getting a concept of what the song's going to be like and then just free-forming, as opposed to telling about my life.

JOHN BETTIS

Publisher: Warner/Chappell Music
Hit: "Can You Stop The Rain," recorded by Peabo Bryson
Co-writer: Walter Afonoseff
Peak: R&B: #1

MC: Is it important for a songwriter to develop his or her own unique writing style?

JB: The only response that you can have is that if you are a career songwriter and you're not just a come-and-go songwriter, it is inevitable that you do develop your own style. However, the balance between your own style and the success of what you do is an interesting question. I think the best way to learn to write good songs is to imitate good songs. And the way I started was sitting down with records and learning a song that someone else had written and then I would try to write a song just like that [laughs]. I think my emotions weren't at all clear. I'm not sure if I thought that would make me money. I think I was doing that because I liked those songs and I knew they were successful. But I can't see much value in that.

MC: Tell me some of those things that set you apart.

JB: Well, I would like to think that if somebody looks at my work, they would see at least one unusual rhyme in it. Now there's a balance there. I used to do too much of that, and that's kind of pointless because really you want to write to the spirit of the music, rather than trying to encumber the spirit of the music with a lot of technical jive. I think that I tend to write conversationally. I tend to use alliteration more than some might. I'd like to think that I write fairly strong titles—I'm kind of big on titles.

PHIL GALDSTON

Publisher: PolyGrom/Island Music
Hit: "The Last To Know," recorded by Seline Dion.
Co-writer: Brock Walsh
Peak: AC: #22

MC: Did you write "The Last To Know" with Seline in mind?

PG: No. Actually, we wrote it about six or seven years ago. It started out as a piece of music that I had written, and it was pretty complete, which is unusual for me. And then I brought it to Brock, and he immediately came up with the hook line: "Don't let me be the last/Don't let me be the last to know." And we reshaped the music and finished the song and made the demo.

MC: Isn't it unusual to come up with the hook line after the music is written?

PG: I had the musical hook, but the lyrical hook came last. I think that most people do start with titles, and I do, too. But a lot of times, a piece of music emerges, and if you don't have a title for it, you're smart enough to know to just let it come out, and it finds a home somewhere. I had no lyric idea when I wrote the piece of music. I not only wrote the piece of music, but I even had recorded the track.

MC: When you write, do you ever have an artist in mind?

PG: I definitely have artists in mind on many songs. But I'm trying to remain in touch with what started me out on this path in the first place. As a result of trying to do that, I find the songs are coming from the heart more frequently now. There is the illusion that you can write 100 songs a year, and it's just not true—not 100 good ones, anyway. So that might argue for trying to target your songs more carefully. But I'm going in the opposite direction right now. I'm going toward just finding what I want to say.

DAN NAVARRO

Publisher: Sony Music
Hit: "You Don't Have To Go Home Tonight," recorded by the Triplets.
Co-writers: Eric Lowen, Silvio Villegas, Vicky Villegas, Diono Villegas.
Peak: Hot 100: #14, AC: #23

MC: What advice would you give upcoming songwriters with regard to developing their own styles?

DN: Whether you're creating fiction or writing about your own life, it doesn't matter—write about something that you really care about. It can be a pretty broad spectrum if you're open-hearted. The other thing is to be open to all styles of music and be willing to be self-critical—to believe that you could improve. That's the thing that seems to separate the ones who make it from the ones who don't. Some have a natural gift, and some don't, but the hard work is real important.

MC: What about the actual technique—the nuts and bolts of sitting down and writing the songs?

DN: As far as the technique of developing your own style—learn to live with your own "elbows." "Elbows" is a word that Eric [Lowen, his co-writer] and I use for things in a song that kind of stick out, that almost seem like they don't belong. As far as developing your own style, it's the elbows that will make you different. So that's the rub—doing something different and kind of looking at it and seeing if it's too different and if it says what you mean for it to say.

ERIC LOWEN

Publisher: BMG Music Publishing
Hit: "You Don't Have To Go Home Tonight," recorded by the Triplets.
Co-writers: Eric Lowen, Silvio Villegas, Vicky Villegas, Diono Villegas.
Peak: Hot 100: #14, AC: #23

MC: How should a chorus be constructed to work with a verse?

EL: The chorus should be constructed in such a way that it provides kind of a conclusion for the verse. If the verse asks the question, the chorus provides the answer, musically and lyrically. So it's a matter of building to a peak in the same way that a story has a beginning, middle and end. It's the same way with a song. Part of what we refer to as a chorus used to be a refrain in old songs. It was the part that came back, the part that would become familiar to you. The chorus would be the thing that would tie up all of the loose ends. It provides a logical ending; provides the answer to the question, the peak.

MC: Should a song always have a bridge?

EL: There are some people who think that a song should always have a bridge. I think that the function a bridge provides is to give release. And that can be if a verse and chorus are somewhat similar musically or rhythm-wise. Sometimes it's just that you need more of a peak than just a chorus. What a bridge can do is kind of set off a chorus in such a way that it becomes more of a conclusion.

LARRY JOHN MCNALLY

Publisher: McNally Music Publishing/MCA Music/Geffen Music
Hit: "The Motown Song," recorded by Rod Stewart
Peak: Hot 100: #10

MC: Would you dissect "The Motown Song" for me?

LJM: I had the original idea for the song, which was "Bring over some of your old Motown records/We'll put the speakers in the window and we'll go/Up on the roof and listen to the miracle echo through the alley down the road"—that whole piece came to me at once, the melody and the lyric, while sitting with a guitar. It was an image that I had in the summertime. I had that one little piece, and it seemed to be kind of magical. So I was sitting there with that, and I was thinking, "What do I say after this?" I'm not the kind of writer who writes songs in five minutes. It took me quite a length of time to live with it and sort of let my mind wander and decide what to embellish that initial thought with. The second part that I came up with, and I know the A&R guy who picked the song for Rod liked the second part that goes: "There is soul in the city watching over us tonight/There's a soul in the city saying everything's gonna be alright." That became quite a hook in itself, and when I saw Rod sing it, it became evident what a strong hook it was. Actually, it was sort of intended to be the B-section, but it ended up being very strong and memorable. It's a shuffle groove; the same groove as that James Taylor remake song, "How Sweet It Is."

Publisher: MCA Music Publishing
Hit: "I Don't Have The Heart," recorded by James Ingram
Co-writer: Jud Friedmon
Peak: Hot 100: #1, AC: #1 (longest running song on the AC charts ever—38 weeks.)
Hit: "I Live For Your Love," recorded by Natalie Cole
Co-writer: Pam Reswick, Steve Werfel
Peak: Hot 100: #14, AC: #1
Hit: "Loving On Next To Nothing," recorded by Gladys Knight
Co-writer: Jeff Peneddo, Howie Rice,
Peak: Urban: #1

MC: Have you ever written with a specific artist in mind?

AR: Yes.

MC: Did you take his or her vocal range into consideration when you were writing the song?

AR: It's a consideration, but not a major one. "Loving On Next To Nothing" was written specifically for Gladys Knight. I was working with the producer, and I came up with this title one day, and I said, "Oh my God, that's Gladys Knight all the way." I sat down and wrote the lyric and part of the melody and then called my collaborator, and he helped me with the melody, and then I called Howie Rice, the producer, and included him in on the bridge. But the minute I wrote the lyric, I knew that I had captured Gladys.

MC: What was it about the lyric and Gladys that made the song right for her?

AR: Well, Gladys is a very forward and direct person, and she always has an edge in the viewpoint in her songs. And this song was about a person who couldn't take the lack of love they were getting from their spouse, and she was making a declaration that she couldn't go on like this anymore. Gladys is a person who makes very strong statements like that in her songs.

MC: Did you take into consideration Gladys' style?

AR: Yes. We just thought of Gladys and thought how would she have sung this lyric. I knew that Gladys has a very strong melodic sense in her melodies, and when she does her tempos, there's a real syncopation, a real drive in them, and this had a real driving, real funky, nasty groove.

MC: I also find it interesting that you wrote the lyrics.

How does a man write from a woman's point of view?

AR: I just sit here, and I become an actor. It's a role I play. I think that one of my strengths as a songwriter is I try to make my work sound as much as a conversation between two people as possible—just the way they would be saying it if they were talking to each other. And so, I just make believe I'm an actor saying the words.

DAVID TYSON

Publisher: EMI Music Publishing
Hit: "Don't Hold Back Your Love," recorded by Hall & Oates
Co-writer: Richard Page, Gerald O'Brien
Peak: AC: #5

MC: Do you ever write songs with an artist in mind, and how successful are you with getting that song to the artist?

DT: Currently, I'm working on Alannah Myles' second album.

I'm producing it as well as writing some of the material. Since we're writing toward an album, we're writing with her in mind. For me, personally, however, I just try and follow though on a good idea and try and make it have integrity.

MC: When you are writing with a particular artist in mind, do you look at their past success and try to duplicate it?

DT: I would say so. Again, it would be different if I were producing the record. If I'm the producer, I would investigate their previous sound and listen to the voice, listen to what works, what doesn't work, etc. But as a writer, again, I would try and write the best song and leave it up to the producer or the arranger to adapt it instrumentally.

INGRID CHAVEZ

Publisher: PolyGrom/Island Music Publishing
Hit: "Do Anything," recorded by Natural Selection
Co-writer: Natural Selection
Peak: Hot 100: #5

MC: What do you look for in a collaboration partner?

IC: I like to work with people whose music I appreciate. I look for someone who is supportive of other people's ideas, who can take criticism and also give it and I look for something natural to happen between two people. I look for someone who's good at arranging and producing.

MC: What makes for a successful lyric?

IC: I believe that it's something that you're saying that is universal, so people can understand it and feel something for it. It has to have a beginning, a middle and an end. It's a whole, like a little story. The universal part to me is in the chorus, where it sort of ties everything together. But in the verses, it's like you're telling the story, and the chorus is like a title to what it's all about and the verses are describing it. MC

Allen Hyman

By Sue Gold

A band's trademark is one of its strongest assets. Few people today would ask what band is behind that big red tongue and lips or who the Beatles are.

In recent years, several major cases have been brought to court regarding trademarks and a band's legal rights to a name and identity. Allen Hyman, a prominent attorney with Shelden & Mak, has argued and won many of these, including cases involving Megadeth, the Diamonds, the Byrds, the Platters and others.

MC: First of all, what exactly is a trademark?

AH: A trademark is a symbol indicating to the public that the source or origin of the services is good. The Rolling Stones and the Beatles are both trademarks, as are the Supremes and Coca Cola. A trademark indicates to the public, who associates it with you, that service. It is a sign, a commercial identification of who you are.

MC: How can you get a trademark?

AH: You get trademark rights. There are three ways to get trademark rights: use, assignment and registration. You can use the trademark in conjunction with what you're doing. If you went out as the Ink Spots and went out and spent five years performing everywhere you could, you would have acquired the rights through use; the public has come to recognize you as the Ink Spots. The second way is by having someone assign their rights to you. If a group is forever changing people throughout the years, the group can assign their rights to the new band. Or you can get rights through registration of a trademark. A registration is an indication that you own it, but it is not proof positive that you own it.

MC: How long is a trademark registration good for?

AH: You can own it forever. You have to renew once after five years, and then every ten years.

MC: How can a band protect itself against another band using its name?

AH: It depends how strong the rights are. Let's look at the Megadeth story. The band played a lot, made a record, started getting airplay on college radio stations, then they started getting reviews in local music magazines up and down the state of California and then they toured nationally. After they put out their second album, they got sued in federal court by a group that had the California state registration of Megadeth. This group who had the registration claimed they had the rights to Megadeth or anything similar. We filed our own case against them, and the cases were moved to federal court. Both of us moved to injunct the other at the same time. They tried to stop us, and we tried to stop them. The judge granted our injunction and denied theirs.

MC: If they had the trademark registration, why did you win?

AH: Our commercial use looked as if it predated their trademark. We had also established a very valuable goodwill. We had established a commercial use and a valuable public recognition through record sales, reviews we had and the public acknowledgement and association of Megadeth with our group. The other band had very little evidence of any commercial public recognition or acknowledgement. We had a large protectable interest. Based on those factors, the court said we have the right, not them. The more famous your name and the more time and energy that has gone into it, the greater the protective interest you have.

MC: How long does a band own a name?

AH: Good question. The Beatles haven't per-

Mike Mena

Director of Alternative
Promotion

SBK Records

By Oskar Scotti

Young firebrand executives like SBK's Mike Mena are causing normally staid A&R men around the country to feel like they're edging precariously close to the endangered species list. For Mena, who also serves as the label's Director of Alternative Promotion, bypassed the A&R artery at his label completely when he ventured to England last year intent on negotiating a deal with alternative kingpins Jesus Jones. Mena hoped to persuade the tuneful quintet to throw their fortunes into the SBK star-making combine, and history will note that he succeeded admirably in his mission.

What won the group over to Mena's corner was both his attention to detail in the promotion end and creativity in the areas of retail and college radio promotion. More importantly, the native New Yorker guaranteed the group he would devote his total energy to crossing the group over from their alternative base into the lucrative mainstream arena and, as we all have seen, he has more than come through on his pledge.

Mena says that he knew from the first listening of Jesus Jones' early demos that the group had all the ingredients of stardom: a unique, vibrant look and adrenaline-fueled, topical material that held up after repeated listenings. "The fact that this group had not been scooped up by a major seemed like the fluke of the decade," expressed a somewhat winded Mike Mena from his office in New York City following a grueling day of radio and retail calls and marketing meetings. "I met with Dave Balf, who ran Food Records, their independent label in England, and outlined a really comprehensive game plan on how I felt the band should be presented to the public. We came to terms quickly because he knew I meant business."

More specifically, Mena personally ventured out on the road with the group after their second album, Doubt, leading them through a grueling schedule of mom and pop retail store "meet and greets" and college radio station junkets. When the band's first single, "Right Here, Right Now," bolted from the alternative charts straight up the mainstream ledger, he realized his whistlestop campaigns were paying off at last.

"The group was always willing to go the extra mile and really knew when to roll up their sleeves for me—even when they were half out of their minds from exhaustion," he says appreciatively. "Their work ethics and positive attitude made my job a lot easier."

And as has often been stated, it's easier to appreciate qualities in others that you've experienced first hand, and Mike Mena is no stranger to hard work and personal sacrifice. The intense alternative director hails from Farmingdale, Long Island, and first experienced the excitement of the industry at college where he called the shots at the campus radio station.

But the opportunity to introduce R.E.M. at a nightclub during the Georgia band's first U.S. tour opened his eyes to his future in the music business. "More than being on the air," he says, "I realized what I really wanted to do was work for a label where I would be more influential in the creative process. I immediately got a job at A&M Records in the mail room that, after a grueling twelve-month trial, culminated in my appointment as the label's alternative director."

Enter SBK's well-traveled Vice President Daniel Glass, who had interviewed Mena when he was pounding the pavement looking for work prior to securing the A&M gig. "Things just weren't working out at A&M. They didn't seem to be taking the college music department seriously, even on records by Robyn Hitchcock and Soul Asylum, which I believed had a real chance to break through commercially if they had been supported. But they weren't, and I checked in with Daniel, who I had stayed in touch with, and he convinced me to jump ship to SBK. That phone call turned out to be a real blessing!"

Mena says that working with Glass and SBK President Charles Koppleman is a "totally fulfilling experience," but that it took him a few months on the job to realize just how prestigious his employers were. "Oh, I heard stuff about SBK from my friends, after I changed jobs, about Koppleman being lucky," he states. "But when you look at Charles' successes with people like Tracy Chapman, Barbra Streisand, the Lovin' Spoonful and Technotronic, you realize that his luck, if you want to call it that, springs eternal. The man has a Midas Touch when it comes to music talent."

"Once in a while, Daniel will come over to me and say, 'Lay off Charles for a while,' regarding one act or another that I'm trying to bring over here."

—Mike Mena

More importantly to Mike, Koppleman is accomplished a listener as he is an administrator. "He lets me venture out and go with my gut if I really believe in something, and that's a great feeling—knowing that Charles Koppleman believes in you," says Mena. "He's a great guy to have in your corner."

Since the Jesus Jones coup, Koppleman has come to Mena for advice on left-wing groups on several occasions, most recently on their pact to distribute the acts on Alan McGee's Creation Records. In the end, the indefatigable Mena prevailed, even though Koppleman at first doubted the relevance of some of the obscure acts on Creation's roster, who Mike admitted "took repeated listenings before the real quality came through."

"Once in a while, Daniel will come over to me and say 'lay off Charles for a while,' regarding one act or another that I'm trying to bring over here," he asserts. "But if I really believe in something, Charles and Daniel usually give me the opportunity to run with my intuition."

Now that Jesus Jones is established and well on their way to a platinum disc, the SBK Records hierarchy have turned their attention to another Mike Mena discovery that they hope to break, Blur. The band (which also hails from England) recently took a ten point jump up the Billboard alternative chart, confirming that Mr. Mena has not lost his magic touch.

"It's pointless I think to release records from acts with the intention of establishing cult groups that peak out after 60,000 album sales. That's not what we're trying to accomplish here," confesses the quietly confident New Yorker "The public has better taste than most radio programmers give them credit for, and I think they're hungry for groups who transcend the cliché-bound limitations of what's glutting the airwaves these days. We've got quality acts and the ingenuity to find the audiences for them."

The SBK story is turning out to be a wondrously stimulating saga indeed, and Mike Mena is proving one of the more capable authors of the doctrine. Whether you call him an A&R man or a marketing and promotion whiz, one thing is certain: Mena is an up-and-comer who's turning a lot of heads in the industry.

Messrs. Koppleman and Glass definitely know a winner when they see one. MC

Those who were teenagers in the Fifties became 35-40 in the Eighties and went to Vegas to see shows and are buying records again. The Fifties and Sixties music were the roots of rock & roll and music. The music is now being used in commercials and films and has become extremely valuable.

MC: Let's talk a little about copyrights. What exactly is a copyright?

AH: A copyright is a right to artistic expression. If you compose a song, you have the exclusive rights to that artistic expression.

MC: How do you obtain a copyright?

AH: You file an application [Form PA, for a musical composition], send it in with the music, cassette tape and ten dollars to the copy- right office [Library of Congress in Washington, D.C.]. It's proof of right to use that artistic work.

MC: Is there a minimum amount of musical notes that someone can use from a song before it's considered an infringement?

AH: That's an important question. It has to be so few that it can't be recognizable, and it has to be the commonly available portion of the song. A musicologist can compare the notes of songs to see if there is some unique aspect of the songs that are similar. There is no minimum number of notes under any circumstances.

MC: How do you know if you're infringing on someone else's work?

AH: Infringement is copying someone else's work. Two elements of infringement are similarity and access. If it's my original creation, I have the rights. If there was no access to the work, then it could not have been copied. MC*

SQUEEZE

By John Lappen

It's a pity that critical acclaim doesn't come packaged as a form of hard currency or stock that can be traded on Wall Street. If that were the case, the members of Squeeze would be millionaires many times over.

Since this clever band of Londoners first hit the scene in 1977 as U.K. Squeeze (to avoid comparisons with a now-defunct American Squeeze), the international music press and an ever-growing coterie of fans have long trumpeted the impeccable merits of this most jocular of contemporary pop bands.

The heady comparisons started early. Group co-founders and songwriters extraordinaire Chris Difford and Glenn Tilbrook (who, along with original drummer Gilson Lavis, formed the core of the band) were heralded as the Lennon and McCartney of their generation because of their seemingly effortless knack for writing instantly memorable hooks and melodies. Their scintillating live shows—assisted in no small part by eccentric keyboardist Jools Holland's manic performances—earned them an adoring and devoted following.

The musical cognoscenti, recognizing the band's vast reservoir of talent, clamored to join the fray. Luminaries such as former Velvet Underground legend John Cale produced a 1977 EP entitled Packet Of Three as well as their eponymously titled debut album (with the exception of the self-produced Top Twenty U.K. hit "Take Me I'm Yours"). Squeeze fanatic and kindred songwriting spirit, Elvis Costello, had the band open for him on a series of 1981 U.S. dates and then, that same year, produced Squeeze's classic East Side Story LP.

Keyboardist/vocalist Paul Carrack, formerly of Ace and Roxy Music and currently a member of Mike + the Mechanics, eventually replaced Holland and lent his soulful vocals to the smash single "Tempted," one of the group's most recognizable tunes.

Over the course of ten distinctive albums like

Chris Difford   Gilson Lavis   Glenn Tilbrook   Keith Wilkinson

Enrique Badulescu

Argy Bargy (1980), Sweets From A Stranger (1982) and Babylon And On (1987), the most recent being the excellent new LP, Play, Difford and Tilbrook have provided us mere mortals with some of the most exhilarating and incisive pop music on the planet.

Unfortunately, even though Squeeze has carved out a niche as one of music's most indispensable bands, radio and the record-buying public haven't always come to the party. And for those who haven't...well, what a shindig they've been missing.

Pose the "what's wrong with this picture?" question to the genial Tilbrook and his answer is instantaneous and to the point. "It's frustrating, because what we're doing now, and what we've done in the past, I think has been accessible. But I don't think things are as open as they once were on radio. It's tough to get to a lot of people these days if you're not—as we're not—part of a recognizable form of music. We obviously have an audience, but I'm not sure where they exist when it comes to radio. It's great to be loved by the critics; we've appreciated that over the years. But it would be great to sell lots of records as well."

Since Squeeze is an innovative act that tends to chart its own course, a sometimes risky proposition in these stifling times of formats and formulas, some bumps and bruises have occurred along the way, namely, the inevitable label and personnel changes.

But Tilbrook views the comings and goings in a positive light. "Actually, signing to Reprise/Warner Bros. has been a real boost to the band; our confidence is the highest it's been in a while. We've been able to pick up something along the way during each stop. At least we've always been able to get a deal, which," laughs Tilbrook, "is an accomplishment in itself."

Squeeze's current lineup, in addition to the four core members, includes keyboardist Don Snow, back for his second Squeeze stint. Tilbrook's enthusiasm is contagious when discussing the lineup that is featured on Play. "I think it's a stable and talented bunch. When we signed with Warners, we made a commitment to one another that we'd do what it would take to be as successful as possible."

And the enigmatic Jools, who rejoined Squeeze for several albums? At the very least, Tilbrook is a civil man. "Jools was always sort of...uh...semi-detached from the band. It was a good time for him to depart."

Difford and Tilbrook themselves decided to depart from Squeeze in late 1982 when they split up the band to record their own self-titled LP and watch while a musical based on their songs, Labeled With Love, opened in London to ecstatic reviews. Also touring as an acoustic duo (which the pair still does on occasion), Tilbrook explains that the split was a necessary evil. "I think, at the time, we toured too much and ran ourselves into the ground. It was not a pleasant time, but if we hadn't split, I don't think

VOCAL BIOMATRIX — A TRADITION SINCE 1963

Sammy Cahn

By Kenny Kerner

Kenneth Johnson

Sammy Cahn is the quintessential wordsmith. Among his 2,600 active copyrights are such classic songs as "All The Way," "Call Me Irresponsible," "High Hopes," "Let It Snow, Let It Snow, Let It Snow," "Love And Marriage," "My Kind Of Town (Chicago Is)," "The Second Time Around" and "Three Coins In The Fountain," songs that will live forever as part of the American heritage. His simple, to-the-point lyrics, combined with the beautiful melodies of his collaborators, James Van Heusen and Jule Styne, have won countless awards during his long, lucrative career.

Now 78-years-old, Sammy Cahn is still doing what he does best—but with a new twist. Cahn now writes "special" lyrics for "special" occasions—he takes the melodies of standard tunes and re-writes the lyrics. But the truth is, everything he puts down on paper is very special.

MC: When did it first dawn on you that you can make a real living and have a real career by writing lyrics?

SC: At the age of fourteen, I went to the Academy of Music theatre on 14th street in Manhattan, and there was a comedian named Jackie Osterman on the stage. In the middle of his act, he decided to sing a song he had written; so really, I was looking at my very first songwriter, so to speak.

I didn't have the nickel to get on the trolley, so I walked home that night. And on the way, I created a song—words and music—in my head. I got home and took my school pad and pencil and wrote down my first song. And that weekend, I managed to write four or five songs just like that—in my head.

MC: Do you devote a certain portion of each day to writing lyrics, or do you write when you're inspired?

SC: I write when the phone call comes. My main occupation today is writing "special" lyrics for "special occasions." And the phone never stops ringing. It seems endless—just endless. I've written special lyrics for Sinatra and for Ronald Reagan, just about everybody.

MC: During your career, you've been fortunate enough to have written with two great partners—James Van Heusen and Jule Styne. How were they to work with as collaborators?

SC: Both writers were similar in one respect: They loved to write songs. They both knew how to draw the lyrics out of a lyricist. They would sit and play the melody endlessly with different moods and attitudes. But I'm a swift lyricist—nobody writes faster than I do.

When I do my one man show, I do the stories of the songs. I've been doing that now for seventeen years. I haven't done the show once where the audience didn't stand up and cheer. The audience doesn't know what this 78-year-old man is going to do, but when I walk out on that stage, I'm smiling, because I know the finish. It's just me, a piano player and three young singers with me.

MC: Was there one song in particular that gave you more trouble than the others; one that was more difficult to write?

SC: No. I don't write songs that fight me. When I sit down at the typewriter—it's written. Let me give you an example: The phone rings, and it's Sinatra. "Sam, Frank—Frank, Sam," that's our greeting. Sinatra says, "I'm here in St. Louis at the Anheiser Busch Company, and they want me to sing something." I said, "So, just as long as they don't want you to dance." I asked him when he needed the song, and he said NOW! I told him to have somebody call me from the stage in ten minutes ready to take down the song. I then go over to my typewriter and put in the paper. Here's what I typed: [sung to the melody of "My Kind Of Town (Chicago Is)"]

*"Don't ever, ever ask me what Budweiser means Unless you got an hour, two or three
Cause it takes time to tell you what Budweiser means*

*Especially what Budweiser means to me
Gee, it's my kind of beer, Budweiser is"*

The minute Sinatra told me where he was, everything clicked into place.

One night, my wife and I were going out to an affair for Robert DeNiro. As we're leaving, she tells me that it would be nice if I wrote something for Robert. As soon as she says that, I go over to the typewriter and start to type: [sung to the melody of "There's No Business Like Show Business"]

*"This song is by Berlin and he was the best
And the best to Bobby we must give.*

*If praises we're hurlin', then let me suggest
When you say 'Bobby' that's an adjective.*

He simply is the greatest you'll agree

Sometimes I think he thinks that he is me

*There's no Bobby like this Bobby like no Bobby
I know"*

Now I stop typing in mid-song, because I have to think of some other famous Bobbys. And this is what makes it so marvelous. And the first Bobby I think of is Bob Fosse. So I type...

*"Speak not of the Bobby who is Fosse
Speak not of the Bobby who's Goulet
Goulet, as they say, is just a glossy
And Bobby Fosse—has gone away"*

I do that once through the typewriter, and if you watch me, you'll think it's a miracle. And what makes me smile is that I'm part of that miracle.

MC: What other contemporary songwriters do you admire?

SC: I like the fellas who write lyrics that are really pure rhymes. I'm not too familiar with the names of the more popular songwriters, but, for example, the person who wrote "The Wind Beneath My Wings" [Jeff Silbar]—that's a major piece of work, both musically and lyrically. Now lyrically, it doesn't rhyme in all the places. If I had written that song, I would have made it rhyme more and possibly would have ruined it!

MC: Are there any words that just don't have rhymes? For example, I can think of the words "orange" and "silver."

SC: That's good. The word "orange" is a classic word that you can't rhyme. I once held a contest and gave a prize for the winner who could rhyme that word. Here's what the winner wrote: "I couldn't fix my car hinge/ So I went out and bought an orange."

MC: And "silver"?

SC: I never had to rhyme that word. Don't use words you can't rhyme—who needs 'em?

PSYCHEDELIC FURS

By Jon Matsumoto

Jessica Alliman

Psychedelic Furs main man Richard Butler

The Psychedelic Furs' 1987 Midnight To Midnight LP sold over 400,000 copies and was one of the group's top-selling albums. It also spawned the band's most popular single, the Top Twenty "Heartbreak Beat."

Most artists in the Psychedelic Furs' alternative rock field would gladly serve a six-month sentence on a Mississippi chain gang in exchange for this type of recognition, but not Furs head man Richard Butler.

"It's an album I deplore," says Butler unequivocally. "Musically, it wasn't anywhere, just gray."

Butler realized the Furs had produced an album with commercial allure but little artistic fiber when the band embarked on a tour following the release of Midnight. The group found itself replacing new numbers with old songs, and by the end of the tour, it was only playing one or two tracks from the new LP.

For Butler, Midnight To Midnight was a source of great mental and physical anguish. The ultra-sensitive singer, who has admitted he is prone to deep fits of depression even in the best of times, found himself increasingly unable to cope with his misery. The stress led to an irregular heartbeat and ill feelings that lasted about two years. For a while, he thought about not only leaving the band, but "leaving the music business entirely."

"It was rough emotionally," he adds. "When you're doing something like making records or painting or writing books, you're as good as the last thing you've done. When you're personally not satisfied with what you've done, then it's a hard hump to get over, because people view you in the light of that work."

Fortunately, longtime bandmates John Ashton and brother Tim Butler convinced him to make another Furs album—this time one that was true to his own personal and artistic feelings.

"They thought I should make another record that really reflected how I was feeling," says Butler. "I was feeling really down, but I wanted to be honest. So they said, 'Fine, make a down record.' So we made Book Of Days."

1989's Book Of Days marked the return of the more abrasive and brooding post-punk sound of the Furs' first two early Eighties albums. It also proved to be the perfect remedy for Butler's personal woes. "It's funny, the stress and discomfort stopped when we made Book Of Days. It just disappeared," Butler states.

"I think you have to please yourself," he says, trying to explain the correlation between Days and his improved health. "I love making music. I wouldn't love it if it were for something other than the love of making music. You have to be true to yourself."

World Outside—the Furs' new album—is much like Book Of Days, only it's more focused and melodically engaging. With both albums, the band went into the studio and recorded them in only six to seven weeks; conversely, Midnight To Midnight took six months to complete.

"With the last two albums, we decided not to go into the studio until we had enough songs written, while with [1984's] Mirror Moves and Midnight To Midnight, a lot of it was written in the studio," reveals the frank 38-year-old. "I think you tend to lose some of the excitement, the edge and the feel when you spend too much time in the studio. We didn't want to spend too much time on Book of Days and World Outside. You can examine music too much, and then you tend to have a harder time making up your mind about things. If you go in and put down what you first feel, you're usually right."

Surviving his late Eighties crisis hasn't really changed Butler. He hasn't found religion or a new and improved outlook on life. In fact, the Midnight To Midnight experience reinforced his view that he belongs on society's periphery.

Butler moved from London to New York City in 1983 partly because he liked the idea of being an outsider. "It keeps you awake, which is good. It kind of gives your life some excitement," he says of his expatriate existence in New York.

Given Butler's maverick tendencies, it's a bit ironic that he has become somewhat of a new wave sex symbol. Originally, a noir-ish cult band in the early Eighties, the Furs gradually began to attract a more mainstream audience. The 1986 single "Pretty In Pink" is often credited with expanding the group's audience to Malls-ville U.S.A. ("Pretty In Pink" was actually a 1981 Furs song that was re-recorded for the John Hughes teen movie of the same name), but that process actually began as early as 1983 with the group's Forever Now album.

Not surprisingly, Butler isn't very comfortable with the semi-hysterical, love-stricken girls who show up at Furs shows.

"In America, we get loads of these teenage girls screaming up in front," Butler told Britain's New Musical Express in 1988. "It feels fucking stupid. You think, 'You're half my age, what are you doing? Don't you listen to any of the songs?'"

Butler doesn't believe that people should idolize him or any other public figure. "Anybody who has heroes is making a complete mistake! People can point you in the right direction, but ultimately, it's your own feeling and personality that must direct you," says Butler.

Next year, Butler plans to not only record another Psychedelic Furs album, but also his first solo record. He's looking forward to working with musicians outside of the Furs and experimenting with new ideas. The gravelly voiced singer says the disc will probably include some acoustic material.

Butler seems to be fairly content these days—at least as content as anyone who admits he's not truly happy unless he's at least a little miserable. Clearly, there are some things about one's personality you just can't change.

"I'm as cynical as ever!" he laughs. MC

◀ 23 Robbie Robertson

few of the songs—like "Life Is A Carnival" and "When I Paint My Masterpiece." "The Moon Struck One." "The River Hymn" and "4% Pantomime," the song we did with Van Morrison. So the album was half successful, and other half, I didn't feel that happy with at the time—and I still don't.

MC: Are you considering touring in support of the new record, or did you have your fill of the road while with the Band?

RR: Well, it's much more appealing to me now than it has been in the past, and I think something interesting could be done with this music. A lot of the people that I worked with, the Meters, Chief Bo Diddley, Chief Monk Boudreaux, the Rebirth Brass Band, it's a very colorful array of talent. It could be visually very interesting as well as musically. It makes me think in terms of...I wonder what a traveling minstrel show would look like in the Nineties.

MC: Like "The W.S. Walcott Medicine Show" (a song Robbie wrote about old-time minstrel shows from Stage Fright).

RR: Yeah...a theatre of music. And now that I have these two albums, plus the songs that I've written in the past, I feel like I now have the ammo to do it.

MC: The Band said good-bye to the road in grand style with The Last Waltz concert. What was your reaction when the other Band members reformed and decided to tour without you? Did you feel that perhaps they were going to the well one too many times?

RR: When I came up with the idea for The Last Waltz, it was because this routine—album, road, album, road—had become a bit boring, and I thought, what can we do to make it more adventurous...maybe we could concentrate on making really interesting records, and we'll let this other part of us go. We'd done it, every which way you could possibly do it, and everybody seemed to feel the same way.

But after we did the Last Waltz, a period of time passed and [maybe they were thinking], "But this is what I do. I feel like there's a piece of me missing now without this." I could understand that, or someone saying, "This is my work. This is what I do as a living." That's very understandable as well. [Their going back on the road] wasn't upsetting to me. I understood it. I just couldn't do it, because I would have felt hypocritical.

MC: Do you feel like you're competing with your past when making a new record?

RR: Maybe there's some of that. I don't feel like I'm competing with my past, 'cause I don't know how to. That's the way I felt when I was that age, and this is how I feel now. MC

we'd be together now."

But the musical gods spared the faithful that awful prospect, and Squeeze has taken yet another resounding step forward with Play. Produced by Tony Berg (Michael Penn, Edie Brickell), Play consists of twelve typically whimsical, poignant and bitingly insightful gems, written in the inimitable Difford/Tilbrook style. "I think Chris has always had a real good eye for detail," says Tilbrook. "Sometimes he tells a story through small details that mean a lot. He always manages to break things down to their most common element no matter what the subject. And by doing that, he can make the listener laugh and cry at the same time. That is really his gift. He always surprises me with the observations he comes up with."

Perhaps it's the pair's erudite and wry observations, as structured in the band's melange of shifting sounds and influences, that have confounded radio programmers and the uninformed masses who have yet to tap into this immensely talented unit. "We certainly do pander to a variety of influences," chuckles Tilbrook. "Squeeze grew out of a lot of things—everything from a mixture of Forties and Fifties rhythm and blues and jazz, to Sixties pop, classical and even a bit of Hendrix. It's never been a conscious decision to draw on one form of music. What happens when I sit down and write is that something will spring up months, or even years later, and then I identify what it was that influenced me. Tilbrook pauses to let out another peal of his rich laughter. "I guess I can feel a bit of pity for those people who've been trying to pigeonhole us over the years."

But for those individuals who have tried, Tilbrook gleefully shares this bit of Beatles-inspired Squeeze trivia. "I remember when the Beatles comparisons first started coming out. I have a vivid memory of being crammed in a van with all of our equipment and the other band members. We used to take turns sitting in the back next to the window. I was lying on top of our equipment, uncomfortable as hell. Suddenly, a car pulled in behind the van. I struggled to look out the window and saw that it was a Rolls Royce. I did a double take when I saw that the driver was Paul McCartney. That's the closest I ever came to meeting the gentleman who Chris and I have been compared to songwriting—very so many times over the years."

This irony isn't lost on Tilbrook. His sides are probably still aching from laughter. MC

You should only rhyme what is rhymeable. And again, a pure rhyme is "mine" and "wine." With words like "mine" and "dime," only the sound rhymes—they're not pure rhymes. I like the fellas who write pure rhymes.

MC: The song "High Hopes" had some strange lyrics—words that aren't commonly used in songs.

SC: The song "High Hopes" is a miracle in itself. It was written for a picture called Hole In The Head. All I can tell you is that when we wrote it, we never expected it to be such a hit. It won an Academy Award. I had a marvelous time writing that song.

MC: I understand that you still have at least one more dream to realize.

SC: The Songwriters Hall Of Fame—that's my dream. It was originally Johnny Mercer's dream. He was the first president. On his death bed, Johnny asked me to take over, and I did. At the beginning of next year, we're going to open the Songwriters Hall Of Fame Museum in New York.

MC: Looking back at your illustrious career, do you have any regrets?

SC: I have two regrets in my life. The first is that I didn't finish high school. The second goes way back to when I was a child. We had a piano in our little apartment in the lower east side of Manhattan. I never knew how it got there—it might have been left there by the previous tenants—and my mother said to my sister, "You will play the piano, and Sammy will play the violin." If she had only switched those around, God knows what I might have accomplished!

MC: Then you've come a long way for a violin-playing lyricist.

SC: I have come a long way. Let me put it all into perspective by telling you one last story. I got a letter from a woman who said the following:

Dear Mr. Cahn:

My husband and I fell in love to your song "All The Way." We were married to the song "All The Way." Every anniversary it was "All The Way." I recently lost my husband. In his will, he stipulated that his monument should read: "When somebody loves you, it's no good unless he loves you, all the way."

She sent me a picture of the monument, and that made it all worthwhile. MC

Odds

Neopolitan
Zoo

① ② ③ ④ ⑤ ⑥ ⑦ ⑧ ⑨ ⑩

❑ Top Cuts: "Love Is The Subject,"
"Wendy Under The Stars."

❑ Producer: Odds

❑ Material: The Odds' pop/alternative material is melodic, rich with three- and four-part harmonies, tastefully flavored with acoustic guitar and violin and actually quite memorable. The band seems to draw their influences from the likes of Squeeze and the Beatles—so there's a bit of that Sixties thing going on here and there. There are two primary songwriters (Steven Drake and Craig Northey) who also handle lead vocals. And not surprisingly, one writer's approach and resulting compositions are rather distinguishable from the other's. Drake's songs are the harder, more guitar-oriented songs, while Northey's tend to be more melodic and light-hearted. Lyrically, Drake tends to tell stories (which, according to him, are all entirely true), while Northey goes for a little more of the relationship and feeling stuff. Both musicians are fine writers, and I don't particularly prefer one's songs over the other's. As a matter of fact, their differences compliment each other, and the resulting fourteen tunes never get bogged down sounding the same from one tune to the next.

❑ Musicianship: This band plays as a unit, and there are no real soloists or players who stick out more than the others. All are proficient players. Both Drake (who has the more strained, raspy voice) and Northey (with the more pure sounding pipes) are compelling vocalists.

❑ Production: This isn't an overly slick record; as a matter of fact, it's got a lot of edge to it. Some songs are thick with acoustic instruments intertwined with electric instruments and punchy drums, while others are breezy and open feeling. The poignant "Wendy Under The Stars" sounds like Drake is in my living room singing and playing his acoustic guitar.

❑ Summary: The Vancouver-based Odds aren't breaking any new musical ground with their debut album; however, what they do, they do well and with a whole lotta sincerity, commitment, honesty and old-fashioned charm.

By Pat Lewis

Almost four years ago, "the four most twisted individuals on the Vancouver music scene" formed a band, and not surprisingly, called themselves, Odds. "It's like what you see in a pond," says guitarist/vocalist Steven Drake, searching for an analogy that best describes the band. "The pond sits still and all of the scum floats to the top. Well, that's us!"

Actually, the members of Odds, which, in addition to Drake, include drummer Paul Brennan, guitarist/vocalist Craig Northey and bass player Doug Elliott, are anything but scummy ("we've since cleaned up," admits drummer Brennan, "but back then we were the crazy people!"). As they sit in the conference room of their new label, Zoo Entertainment, they seem more like the kind of down-to-earth, level-headed chaps that most moms would like to see marry their daughters. And while they may get a tad cocky when locked in a room with a music journalist, you get the feeling that these guys are simply out to have a whole lotta fun, albeit clean fun, together.

Before Odds formed back in 1987, they all knew one another from other Vancouver-based bands. "We were all playing on the music scene in different capacities," recalls guitarist Northey. "Doug was playing in a country band, Steven was playing a solo gig and Paul was playing in a Gothic/funk band. It was sort of the classic thing that we all wanted to play with each other at one point, but we were doing different things."

Well, for one reason or another, those "different things" fell apart, and the four mates sort of just naturally found one another and began writing together and playing the local clubs. But, unlike most of their competition, Odds had a strong vision, and just as importantly, they had a strategy to see that vision through to its fruition. "When we started doing shows in Vancouver as Odds," says guitarist Drake, "we realized that in order to do the sort of thing that we wanted to do, we really had to concentrate on making recordings of our music, rather than just playing. In today's world, if you're going to try and get a record deal, [playing the clubs] is only about 1/3 of getting a record deal. The other 1/3 is making demo tapes and the last 1/3 is making connections and talking to people. So, instead of playing our faces off doing Odd songs and trying to travel all over B.C. and expanding out into Canada and basically killing ourselves, we thought we'd just concentrate mostly on writing songs and recording them and getting connected with people. We got a house gig at a club for cash."

So, as is typical with so many beginning bands, Odds sent their demos out to a variety of record labels. But what wasn't so typical was the response those impressive tapes garnered them. "We started coming down [to Los Angeles] after sending out a few tapes and getting some response," says Drake. "We just figured we've got nothing better to do, so we came to L.A. and sat in a hotel room and said, 'Let's go visit the two people that we have appointments with.' And that expanded and we eventually ended up signing with Zoo after several showcases in Los Angeles."

Interestingly, when Odds first formed, they weren't dreaming of becoming the world's next great rock band. Sure, they wanted a record deal, but they weren't willing to sacrifice their integrity to get one. "You need to make a record to keep the buzz going—it's almost like a fix," says Northey, "and to disseminate it and to have people like it so you can do more of it. It was always a part of the picture. We knew we wanted to make a record and get it out to the most people. But it wasn't the final goal or else the music would suck big time, because there'd be no music there. We might as well be trying, like a lot of people, to get hits. When we're out on the road now, we're playing on alternative stations and small venues for people who come out and made a connection to this music and feel it's something that they've discovered because it's new and it's from some place that's far away and it hasn't been rammed down their throats. That's why we signed with Zoo because they said to us, 'Hey, you guys produce the record. We don't want to get in the way of what the four of you already have going by putting somebody in the picture that might not fit.'"

Tom Farrell

I was just thinking what a shame it was that local band compilation discs have entered the endangered species charts right below "mud wrestlers with real breasts," and behold! Skyklad Records brings us Hit By A Succession Of Bricks, a Seventies-flavored disc featuring the local strains of X-Offender, Let's Talk About Girls, Vicious Fish, Dirty Dogs, the Leonards and the Tommyknockers. Any more compilation discs we should know about, or are things really that bad on our local scene?

Way-cute girl group Table Talk will be representing the United States in the World College Pop Festival to be held at Yoyogi National Stadium in Tokyo this December. Congratulations, girls! Eight other bands will perform in the festival.

New clubs on the block: Brent Muscat of Faster Pussycat is hosting Memphis, a new club at Stringfellow's in Beverly Hills; David and Renee Max of X-Poseur

54 fame have opened Pleasuredome, a new after-hours club on Friday/Saturday mornings; Mancini's in the Valley, while not new, is picking up its momentum; ditto for Sanctuary, the Tuesday night all-acoustic club at the Troubadour; Industrial Rock opens its doors at 12455 Brandford, Studio E in Arleta; Club Po Na Na Souk has resurfaced at Bruno's Ristorante on Centinela; Fashion's in Redondo Beach has been getting a lot of attention from the rock crowd.

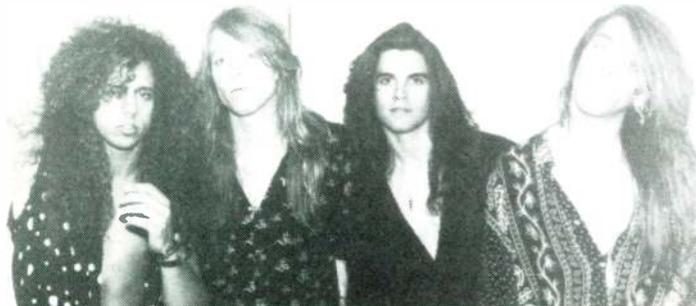

Judging by the sold-out crowd at their October 25th show at the Palace, DGC group Nirvana is on its way to Next Big Thing status. Whatever the situation, their album, Nevermind, brings back a sense of integrity that makes it one of the hottest discs of the year.

Three bands with over five million albums sold worldwide—Warrant, Trixter and Firehouse—couldn't sell out the Universal Amphitheater. What's happened here is a reflection of what's happening: poor ticket sales out on the concert trail. Nevertheless, Warrant earns my vote for the best five minutes of the evening with their performance of "Heaven" that unified the crowd something extreme. On the flip side, Trixter earns two thumbs down for their cover of (get this) "Enter Sandman" by Metallica. Leave that stuff to the pros, guys.

The rumors are true: longtime L.A. dive the Gaslight has been sold, and as of mid-November will no longer be hosting live music. Once known as Lido's, the Gaslight played host to a variety of local music pioneers such as It's A Beautiful Day, the Doors and Love.

Ex-Weirdo/L.A. Gun skin pounder Nickey Alexander (or Nickey Beat, as he used to go by) is the new drummer for voodoo/rockabilly band the Cramps. Alexander joined after the new album (entitled Look Ma, No Head!) and is currently on the seat for the band's European tour.

War and Peace has been picked up by Camel Z management. Catch them with fellow Camel Z clients Tattoo Rodeo, November 7th at Club XS in Glendale.

Warner/Reprise recording artist Jim Lauderdale will celebrate the release of his debut album on Thursday November 21. Jim has long been a favorite on the local scene and is now poised for national attention. The first single and video, "Maybe," is airing on both CMT and TNN. This will be a musical event you won't want to miss, so be there!

The brisk sales and critical acclaim for Hightone Records' release of Dave Alvin's Blue Blvd. and the catalogue sales for Jimmie Dale Gilmore's music have revitalized this cutting edge indie label. Bruce Bromberg of Hightone will continue to bring the best of American music to the forefront with releases from the likes of the legendary Gary Stewart to newcomer Heather Myles.

Chris Gaffney and the Cold Hard Facts have been knocking out audiences at the resurrected Upbeat Club in Orange County. Gaffney has long been a personal favorite and I wish someone would make another record with this guy.

Speaking of another record, Dan Fredman and Michael Dumas are working on A Town South Of Bakersfield Vol. 3. This third installment will also feature many of L.A.'s top country up-and-comers. More later.

Congrats to Edward Tree for writing the first single on Lacy J. Dalton's new release. Ed is a fine songwriter as well as a first-rate guitar slinger. Edward lends his many talents to the Spencer Davis Group, the Blue Healers, and was a featured guitarist on the night of the Blues Babes at their Palomino debut.

On November 17th, the Bakersfield Allstar Review will hit the Palomino for one night only. Country legends Red Simpson ("I'm A Truck"), guitarist Roy Nichols (Lefty Frizzell, Wynn Stewart, Merle Haggard), slap bassist Fred Maddox, drummer Henry Sharpe, guitarist Gene Moles and steel man Mack Owens join together for a formidable lesson in the "Bakersfield Sound." Kudos to Johnnie Whiteside for his efforts in promoting traditional country music. Those interested can also tune into KCET, channel 28, for the special Bakersfield Country set to air Friday, October 15th at 9:00 p.m.

Cool viddy dept: Dulcimer champion David Schnauffer and the Cactus Bros. perform "Fisher's Hornpipe" for the lens of Dream Ranch Pictures' Greg Crutcher and Thom Oliphant. Check it out!

If Windham Hill Records was a ride at a theme park, then High Street Records would be a roller coaster and Patty Larkin would be its lead car. This eclectic writer/performer takes you on a wild ride of emotional ups and downs and makes you laugh and wonder why. Her recent McCabes show was a great introduction to a truly fine talent.

Show of the month: Reba, Vince Gill and Aaron Tippin at the Greek. Reba is a star on a level all her own and Vince has always been great. It's nice to see him earning the recognition he so rightly deserves. Tippin was an engaging, energetic opener who illicit howls from the female members of the audience.

Til' next time, keep it country.

Al DiMeola

A strong contender for the title of "top unsigned blues artist" has to be the dynamic Sweet Baby J'ai. An exciting performer who inspires her sidemen with her dancing and enthusiasm and often tells humorous stories between songs, J'ai is a real crowd-pleaser. More importantly, Sweet Baby has a highly appealing voice with a wide range and is versatile enough to stretch from Bessie Smith and Dinah Washington to more contemporary blues material. At her recent set at At My Place, J'ai stuck to her own original material which boasted intelligent lyrics about topical material including what may be the only AIDS blues ("Soldier Of Love"), a dramatic song about abuse ("I Don't Want The Neighbors To Know"), a Billie Holiday-type torch ballad ("All Alone") and a happy autobiographical piece about how at fourteen, she desired to become the blues queen. Assisted by a strong band (with hot solos from tenorman Louis Taylor and the talented guitarist Ray Bailey), Sweet Baby J'ai proved that she is long overdue for a record contract. Prediction: J'ai will become a household name in the blues world by the mid-Nineties.

Al DiMeola, a fusion hero ever since his days with Return to Forever, has recently been concentrating on his acoustic guitar which he plays with more emotion (and without sacrificing his remarkable speed) than the electric. DiMeola brought his "World Sinfonia" (also the name of his new Tomato release) to the Roxy for a spirited set of jazz-inspired world music. Joined for much of the performance by bandoneon wizard Dino Saluzzi, second guitarist Chris Carrington and two colorful percussionists, DiMeola made up for a late start with a generally mesmerizing performance; his interplay with Saluzzi was quite impressive.

Recently the Los Angeles jazz community suffered a major loss when The Jazz Link, one of the most informative of all the regional jazz magazines, announced that it would cease publication after the next issue, ending four years of increasingly significant coverage. Our condolences go to editor-publisher Jude Hibler, along with our appreciation for keeping up the struggle this long. If only the record labels had supported this important venture with ads rather than lip service!

Upcoming: Trumpeter Arturo Sandoval (through Nov. 10), Willem Breuker's often-hilarious Kollektief (Nov. 11-12) and the Kenny Kirkland Quartet (Nov. 13-17) will be at Catalina's (213-466-2210), while Charlie Shoemake (Nov. 8), and singer Ruth Price (Nov. 15) are at the Jazz Bakery (213-271-9039). Don't miss pianist-vocalist Ellyn Rucker Nov. 8-9 at Lunaria's (213-282-8870).

Suavé

As we go to press, L.A. singer Yvette Marine presses on with her lawsuit against Paula Abdul. You may remember Marine earlier this year filed suit for a piece of Abdul's royalties claiming she was one of several voices who handled lead vocal chores on America's favorite cutie-pie's debut release. Abdul retaliated by holding a press conference during which she categorically denied Marine's assertions but wouldn't answer questions from the press.

It appears all answers will be forthcoming as Abdul embarks on a mammoth world tour. You can't fault her if her "live" vocals are sampled—she certainly won't be the first—but a truly "live" show is obviously the best opportunity she'll ever have to silence critics. Her "Under My Spell Tour" comes to the Great Western Forum on Thursday, December 5. Opening will be Color Me Badd (no questions at all about their vocal abilities) and Aftershock. Look for weekend dates to be added if ticket sales are brisk.

Suavé, who scored big almost four years ago with his hip-hop version of "My Girl," has plans to tour behind his long-overdue sophomore effort, To The Maxx.

Everyone keeps asking whatever happened to Lionel Richie. Likewise, whatever happened to his former group the Commodores? Original member William King wasn't giving up any details at a recent party for Morris Day and Jerome Benton, but he certainly looked none the worse for wear.

Brazilian artist Dori Caymmi has been packing them in monthly at LeCafe's intimate showroom in Sherman Oaks. The master of romantic seduction is headed back to Brazil for the holidays but should be returning to LeCafe sometime in January or February. Look for him.

Word is rapper M.C. Breed is getting ready to hit the road with stops in Los Angeles scheduled. No confirmed dates yet.

Gerald Levert, whose debut solo disc Private Lines ranks as one of the best efforts of the year, returns to the Southland with his group, Levert. The talented trio will be sandwiched on the bill between opening act the Rude Boys and the headlining O'Jays, which, of course, features Gerald's dad, Eddie Levert. The show can be seen at the Universal Amphitheatre (Nov. 16) and the Celebrity Theatre (Nov. 17).

The Holiday Funkfest featuring Zapp, the Ohio Players and Lakeside passes through the Celebrity (Nov. 27), as does Al Jarreau and Lalah Hathaway (Dec. 13 & 14) and B.B. King with special guests Bobby "Blue" Bland and Ruth Brown. King also does the honors on New Year's Eve at the Strand.

Mellow Notes: Speaking of the Strand, the club features the Dramatics (Nov. 15 & 16), Chick Corea's Elektrik Band (Nov. 29), Rose Royce (Nov. 30), Branford Marsalis (Dec. 7), Terence Blanchard (Dec. 18) and Nancy Wilson (Dec. 27 & 28). MC

Squeeze mainmen Glenn Tilbrook and Chris Difford at the Roxy

Squeeze

The Roxy
West Hollywood

Even though Squeeze's recent Roxy gig was a last-minute affair, the packed house was a vivid testament to the strong pull this veteran British pop outfit holds over its faithful.

Actually in town to open for Sting's highly publicized Hollywood Bowl gig, it just wouldn't have been right if Squeeze had escaped before performing their own headlining set.

And, in the case of these solid pros, their 75-minute performance was impeccable. Their "we're here to play" attitude was evident from the get-go, as they hit the stage running with "Take Me I'm Yours" (their first U.K. chart success). On record, the song rumbles along buttressed by dark, ominous underpinnings, but this version was a sprightly, effervescent one; no doubt a reflection of the band's general air of upbeat enthusiasm since signing to their new label, Reprise Records.

With Squeeze, the song is the thing, though guitarists/frontmen Chris Difford and Glenn Tilbrook certainly work up a sweat as they go about their work. Difford's frenetic, jazz-inflected, economic solos contrast perfectly with Tilbrook's rhythmic chiming, while the underrated rhythm section of drummer Gilson Lavis and bassist Keith Wilkinson expertly drive each song, giving the band's unique pop tunes just the right amount of rock edge to keep the proceedings from becoming too saccharine.

But the real highlight occurs when the band's incredible vocal harmonies interlock to create what is almost another rhythm instrument. "Hourglass" and "Sunday Street" (the latter from their new LP, Play) were the best examples of the band's prowess to create this percussive vocal effect during the choruses of these songs. This rapid-fire, staccato vocalese pushed the songs along at a dizzying pace, revealing yet another element to one of contemporary pop music's most fascinating treasures.

Otherwise, all of the best known and loved Squeeze gems were present and accounted for—"Black Coffee In Bed," "Tempted"—plus excellent new tunes from Play, including a poignant rendition of the album's opening track, "Satisfied." Which, afterwards, is just how the smiling crowd felt. —John Lappen

Bonnie Raitt

Universal Amphitheatre
Universal City

To declare that the music world needs more Bonnie Raitts is an understatement of majestic proportions. This charismatic, earthy and honest artist is not only an engaging personality and a damn good blues guitar player, but a potent live performer as well.

After seeing this solid performance, I wonder why it took so long for her to become a superstar. Raitt and her capable band handled the material from her previous LP, Nick Of Time, and the current Luck Of The Draw, while also digging back into her song catalog for a brief stint on the keyboards. The evening was filled with energetic, rollicking renditions of such rock tunes as "Thing Called Love," "No Business" and "Something To Talk About" and the gorgeous ballad "I Can't Make You Love Me." Later in the show, she turned south into a little Mexican cantina for several silky, accordion-laced pieces such as "Of Fernando," which featured harmony vocals by guest star Jackson Browne. Unfortunately, I could hardly hear Browne's soft touches, and I kept waiting for a full duet by him and Raitt.

—Jonathan Widran

Manhattan Transfer

Universal Amphitheatre
Universal City

The past few years have seen the emergence of several vocal harmony groups (New York Voices, the Ritz) attempting to copycat and capitalize on the success of the wondrously versatile and peppy Manhattan Transfer. And who can blame them?

While there were some dragging ballad segments in the middle of their 105-minute set, the beginning and ending segments were bouncy and energetic all the way. The quartet—Cheryl Bentyne, Janis Siegel, Tim Hauser and Alan Paul—introduced their amazing vocal talents early on, giving voice to well-known horn solos on jazz instrumentals from the catalogs of Joe Zawinul and Quincy Jones. Later, in an effort to wake up the audience after the ballad segments, they chimed in gems from their first album in four years, The Offbeat Of Avenues, the best of these being "Sassy" and the swingy "Confide In Me."

The highlight of the set was also their best known harmonic works—"Java Jive," "Operator" and "Trickle Trickle." Why they bypassed their biggest hits, "Twilight Zone" and "Boy From New York City" was rather curious, but also a testament to the vastness of this harmony group's repertoire.

Lenny Kravitz

Variety Arts Center
Los Angeles

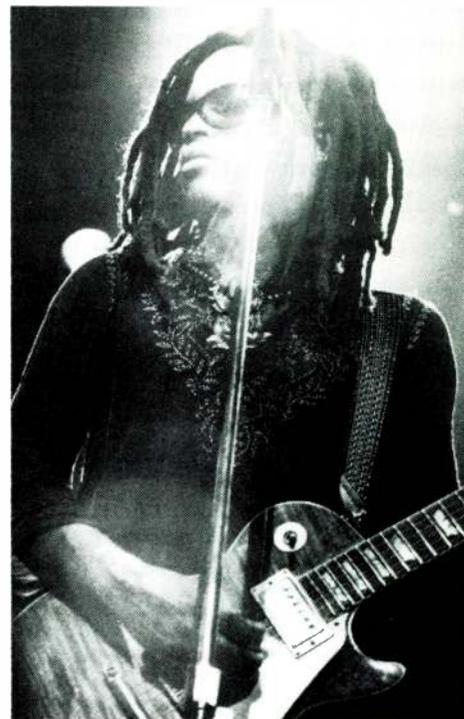

It has become increasingly apparent that Lenny Kravitz has many of the same records in his collection that most of us do, and that some of those riffs have found their way into his music.

I like a good "Shaft" guitar sound as much as anybody, and it is a credit to Mr. Kravitz that he knows what to borrow, as did so many successful musicians before him. Some say a musician is as only as good as what he steals, and the entire audience of shoplifters at this show did not sit down for one minute from the moment Lenny hit the stage.

Lenny was wearing a pair of shades, which proved very effective in creating the right attitude for such tunes as "Mr. Cabdriver," which sounds like a gene splicing of Sly Stone and Arlo Guthrie. After all the dancing and chanting and peace signs were completed, Lenny had performed just about every song from both his albums. He let out nary a peep between selections and kept the momentum going. The show did begin to sag midway through, however, because he'd already burned off some of his funkier numbers, such as "Stop Dragging Around." This sag in song momentum allowed the brilliance of his backing horn section to shine through.

Lenny himself was in top form—his voice was as charismatic as ever—and he fully enjoyed the gyroscope effect of the swinging dreads on his head. The show culminated with a performance of his signature tune, the anthem-like "Love Rules."

James Lykes & The Victims of Love

At My Place

Santa Monica

① ② ③ ④ ⑤ ⑥ ★ ⑧ ⑨ ⑩

□ Contact: James: (213) 451-2045

□ The Players: James Lykes, vocals, piano; Dean Rubichek, saxophones; Russ Allor, bass; Henry Gatlin, guitar; Michael Kramer, drums.

□ Material: Finally, an artist who speaks up for the hellishness of being a bachelor and trying to find quality women in L.A! Lykes' often witty lyrics have a slightly cynical edge to them—the fun rockers "Blinded By Blondes" and "Bachelor's Bible" are typical—but all the frustrated guys can certainly relate. His upbeat material is strong and hooky, but some of his most appealing songs seem stylistically grounded in either the Fifties ("Without You By My Side") or the Seventies ("The Person That I Want To Be"). There's no denying the cleverness of most of the tunes, but he seems destined to win over the male ego while prompting the chicks in the crowd to think, "Gee, we're not that bad, are we?"

□ Musicianship: It's always nice to see an up-and-coming band that has its chops together, and Lykes and his Victims are tight, potent and aggressive. Among his many talents, Lykes is a commanding pianist, and his band's energy and charisma are a perfect match. Funky solos by Lykes, bassist Allor and saxman Rubichek made this set a hot one, even for those who found the message of the tunes a little burdened with attitude.

□ Performance: The hard and sometimes sardonic edge of the lyrics carried over to Lykes' playful banter with the audience, and his is one of those slightly cocky personalities you either love or hate. Chances are, again, if you're a guy, you'll nod right along. The fact that his songs lean on the old days seems logical in light of his Billy Joel-like Piano Man presence and his amazing Jerry Lee Lewis-inspired assault on the ivories. His singing is a little nasal, but not bad. Most importantly, he is an excellent and adventurous player, and a showman who could kill 'em in Vegas with his mix of music and shtick.

□ Summary: As a performer, Lykes is, well, lykeable, if you don't mind that old attitude or a little whining over his inability to make a love connection. As a pop songwriter, he knows hooks, but seems a little nostalgic and anti-romance to hit the synth and Mariah Carey-conscious Top 40. Nonetheless, he's got wit, lots of style and can play the keys incredibly well. The irony is, I'll bet if he found love, he'd lose his edge but ultimately soften to the point of appealing to the masses who don't realize how tough it is to find a quality female in L.A.

□ The Players: Michael Nagy, vocals; Joshua Kaplan, guitar; Eddie Larkin, bass and keyboards; Ray Mehlbaum, drums.

□ Material: True to their moniker, this band's specialty is blues. Armed with basic Bullet Boys rock fare and some perfectly executed Led Zepelin covers, materialy, the Blue Zoo is a mixed bag. Their original compositions, both R&B and hard-pop, are at times musically unfocused; as heard on "Sleezy Love" or "Love Worth Winning." However, their bluesier grooves were quite catchy and very workable items. My favorites were "Forever In Your Eyes," with its Van Halen "Hot For Teacher" guitar loop, and the funky, drum-driven "Heart Keeps Slippin'." I fully cop to the fact, though, that I was swept off my late-night feet when the

SJ & Route 66: Talented and entertaining.

Zoo segued into an absolutely picture-perfect version of Zeppelin's "How Many More Times." I swear I heard Plant, Bonzo and the rest—right here in Hollywood. Zep lives.

☐ Musicianship: The Blue Zoo's tunes need some reworking, but—unreservedly—these guys are fabulous players. Musically crafty, clever and creative, the Zoo's members have been playing for years in several incarnations. Hence, in this lineup, the amassed expertise is their ace in the hole. The standout in this bunch is heavy-hitting drummer Ray Mehlbaum. With his intricate fills and provocative just-behind-the-beat meter, his playing is compelling and evocative. I can't help but compare him to the late John Bonham (one of Mehlbaum's admitted influences). Guitarist Joshua Kaplan's organic-minded solos were full-bodied, giving life to some of the weaker material, while soaring on the cover tunes. Eddie Larkin plays bass with a free hand, too, pumping out the fat bass licks with unabashed soul, while his keyboard work was pretty and appropriately embellished the ballads. The newest member is Michael Nagy, whose fine vocals blend angelic sweetness with demonic raunch.

☐ Performance: This is where the Zoo members descend in evolution. Fine studio level musicians, they are amongst the other mammals when it comes to the stage. Leader of the pack Nagy and string players Kaplan and Larkin need a healthy dose of charisma—and to learn to act, move, posture, etc. like the rock stars they attempt to portray. Give us something to watch, after all, this is the video era. Aside from the compelling devices of drummer Mehlbaum, the Zoo's amassed stoic personality lent an air of generic-rock boredom to their set. Nagy had a few expert Robert Plant moves up his sleeve which helped nicely during the bluesier moments yet, the rest of the material needs to be displayed with less ennui, more stage ease, and perhaps—some concern.

☐ Summary: The Blue Zoo is a great blues band with high level musicianship. It's a shame they didn't have a harder hitting live set. However, I predict that with a bit of sparkling pomp and confidence on stage, and melodically more interesting original tunes, the Zoo will be quite an exhibition. —Heidi Matz

Shawn Jones & Route 66

The Palomino
North Hollywood

① ② ③ ④ ⑤ ⑥ ★ ⑧ ⑨ ⑩

☐ Contact: Shawn Jones & Route 66: (213) 396-8191

☐ The Players: Shawn Jones, lead vocals, guitar, harmonica; John York, vocals, bass, twelve-string guitar; Roy Swedeen, drums; Armen Chakmakien, keyboards, backing vocals; Ray Yslas, guest percussion.

☐ Material: Shawn Jones and his bandmates scare up a percolating blend of down-home rock & roll and potent boogie-woogie, colored with authentic country sensibilities. Songs about heartbreak, work, childhood—a working-class man's view of his own world. Some of their material sounds tailor-made for album rock radio, and the band delivers several aching ballads that'd easily find a home with today's Adult Contemporary listener. "So Many Teardrops," "Forgiven" and "Yesterday's Blues" were my favorite numbers, along with the eleventh song—a deliberate barnburner whose title I never caught. Really tuneful, often rollicking music. Shawn Jones and his writer comrades should spruce up their lyrics, however, as too many of the choruses are bogged down and repetitive. Hooks are important, but equally so is an interesting word play. Ya'll got the former down pat, so why not work on the latter a bit?

☐ Musicianship: No problems here. The MVP awards go to keyboardist Armen Chakmakien and special guest percussionist, Ray Yslas. Each of these musicians was truly a delight for the eyes as well as the ears. Chakmakien persevered through a horrible early mix, buried as he was underneath a very loud guitar. By the fourth song, the sound was fixed, the band hit its stride and his fancy fingerwork absolutely shone! Great solo in "Working On The Nightshift." Yslas' presence was felt from the beginning, his conga licks complimenting a spicy stew o' percussion drummed up by Roy Swedeen. Boy, do these guys sound good together. And the cool bass lines kicked in by John York sent this bottom-end-loving music fan into orbit. Shawn Jones can really sing (he proved it during the fifth song, "Forgiven") and his guitar work ain't too shabby. It became obvious to me these guys are comfortable sharing the stage—playing as a unit, they enjoy a give-and-take that's pleasurable to witness.

☐ Performance: No fireworks, but when the music sounds this rootsy and this true, it'd be incongruous if its makers were posturing all over the stage. It took only three songs for those rude people seated on my right to stop yakking and pay attention. The band's whole set was received well, with most of the audience sitting quietly, glued to their chairs and soaking in the music. Ain't that what counts? Now, Shawn Jones and his bandmates will have to find a stronger stage presence if they start playing larger venues, but tonight's show was loose and real.

☐ Summary: I liked this band a lot, but I wouldn't ink 'em. The lyrics (especially during choruses) tend to get repetitive, almost to the point of redundancy. And although some might call Shawn Jones a real babe, the group doesn't possess an image that's strong enough to compete in the MTV era. What I'm saying is there was no "incredible wow"—that feeling which grips your stomach during a stellar, magnificent, unbelievable show. There's a lot to be said for Shawn Jones & Route 66 though—go check 'em out for yourself sometime. What you will find is a real band with talented players pumping out some honest music. Which is a lot more than can be said for many of the "bands" in this city!

Radio Active Cats

Club Lingerie

Hollywood

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Contact: Jim: (818) 953-3765
The Players: Shel Graves, vocals, guitar; Mike Graves, vocals, drums; Ian Espinoza, lead guitar; Ron Maldonado, bass.

Material: The Radio Active Cats promo kit tries to portray them as a roots-rock band influenced by Fifties music, using such key phrases as "with a musical reach that extends...backwards, into rock's rich heritage" and "that different kind of excitement that came from the Fifties." In addition, the group's publicity photo prominently features a big hollow-body guitar, the type favored by jazz and rockabilly musicians. Well, the axe must have been borrowed from the Guitar Center for the photo shoot, because it was nowhere to be seen during the show, guitarist Ian Espinoza favoring the solid bodies standard with hard rock bands. If anything, the Cats seem more like Sunset Strip circa 1991 than Memphis 1961, playing an uninspiring set of tepid hard rock tunes with only Espinoza's occasional slide guitar solos providing the barest hint of anything retro.

Musicianship: Nothing here to write home to mama about, either. The four band members went about their musical duties professionally and competently, with little in the way of musical fireworks to be heard. Even Espinoza's previously-mentioned slide work and Southern style solos sounded lifeless and unoriginal.

Performance: Late into the set, drummer Mike Graves, who shares lead vocals with his brother Shel, attempted to scold the audience for their lukewarm reaction by saying, "What's this mild shit? We're busting our ass up here." Sorry to tell you Mike, but this isn't the taping of a television show, and there aren't "ap-pause" signs to tell the people when to clap. If you aren't happy with the way the crowd is treating you, it might be time to ask yourself why.

Summary: The polite, sporadic clapping followed by dead silence was embarrassing, especially since Warner Bros. had taken pains to showcase the band, decorating the Lingerie with balloons and inviting a mostly industry crowd. But what did they expect? The Radio Active Cats are promoted as an exciting link between the Fifties and Nineties, yet this is the same band that closes their set with a stupid hard rock tune entitled "Cheap Mascara?" Their bio calls the Cats "a long overdue breath of fresh air blowing over the musical horizon." The only air I see blowing over this horizon are the foul vapors of a stage three smog alert.

Wanted

Gazzarri's West Hollywood

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10

Contact: Wanted: (213) 657-2715.

The Players: Kenny James, vocals; Jeff Lane, guitar and keyboards; John E.K., bass; Pierre Requena, drums.

Material: Could it be Warrant? Could it be Poison? Could it be Bon Jovi? Could it be more generic? For bands that want to rise out of the club scene and into the warm glow of the record companies' spotlight, there is no crime more heinous than unimaginative, mediocre song-writing; Wanted, alas, is guilty. The stuff starts out strong enough, then loses focus—kind of like running out the door but stopping at the porch. Their lyrics are often about realities beyond sex and drugs and speak about the problem of homelessness and glories of sobriety. This "political correctness" is noble, but smacks of being contrived. "2nd Best" is a ballad and probably their most earnest and strongest number, but if you put it next to Faster Pussycat's "House of Pain," you'd swear it was the ugly sister.

Musicianship: Bassist E.K. is the bright white hope of the band, bringing a certain pizzazz and funk-up groove to their otherwise vanilla pudding product. The rest need a dose of his personality—James' vocals, for instance, are solid but too often flat and stale as yesterday's cheese pizza. There's no doubt Lane knows his scales and could be a respectable pop-metal guitarist if he would just slow down a bit to allow for more finesse. He seems to be floundering with the weak material; ditto for drummer Requena. They both sounded best during the first minute of "Say Good-bye."

Performance: See the singer lean in close to the guitarist and hold the mic for them to sing. See the guitarist and bassist swing their instruments in sync. See the drummer twirl his sticks. See the singer do a Sammy Hagar and climb above the stage via the Marshall stacks. Yes, you have seen it before.

Summary: Guys, indeed this review may be harsh and indeed I have criticized you for fulfilling the very formulas that have been successful for others in the past and present. But mediocre talent makes mediocre records and breeds like rabbits on record store shelves. Your mission, then, should be to become so tight your mothers can't tell you apart. Find your own story to tell, and make something that's all your own. Only then will others want it.

① ② ③ ★ ⑤ ⑥ ⑦ ⑧ ⑨ ⑩

▮ Contact: Jeff Wagner, Chrysalis Records: (213) 550-0171

▮ The Players: Chrissy Steele, vocals; Joey Wowk, guitar; Jim Webster, keyboards; Tony Vogt, bass; Ric Sedyk, drums.

▮ Material: Even with Steele's gale force pipes, the unsophisticated Whitesnake-like power-pomp (with a stronger pulse) and shiny pure rock, where everything turns out as you expect it to, only meagerly suggests a trite character and definition and doesn't amount to more than fodder to spotlight her substantial abilities and predominance.

▮ Musicianship: There's no doubt that Steele is an A-1 belter (in the Benatar and Wilson league) who has the gift to work in other, more demanding fields. Yet her band, while not of the virtuosic block—at least not in this vehicle—and only mustering what the songs allow, does furnish support competent enough to save face and at least make the proposition plausible.

▮ Performance: Onstage, the disparity that prevails in other areas defers to a unit that is as well-drilled visually as musically: one that knows its respective place at all times and maintains a sprightly disposition throughout, regardless of the underwhelming response. Even if Steele only speaks to her audience in clichés yellowed by time and listener indifference, the band provides just enough physical support to make it swing, but not enough to overshadow her.

▮ Summary: If Steele has any hopes for a long solo career in rock, she'll first need allies whose priorities will be to get her songs that disdain stereotypes and contrivances and find musicians who'll exalt in the challenge of working with someone with her potential.

Mirror

FM Station
North Hollywood

① ② ③ ④ ⑤ ⑥ ★ ⑧ ⑨ ⑩

▮ Contact: Dick Knows Music: (818) 765-2626.

▮ The Players: Al Morpheu, lead vocals, trumpet; John Bigwood, guitar; Carl De Marco, bass; Jeff Triens, drums, and Ed Roth, keyboard.

▮ Material: Just call 'em "calculated." This quintet pours out a seamless stream of pop metal so smooth it's damn near radio ready and at times reminiscent of those one-time media wonders, Europe. What redeems them from absolute soulless commercialism is an obvious commitment to musicianship, highlighted by song lyrics that manage to be simple but not stupid, with hooks that stick to your tongue like peanut butter ("Tell Me Why" is a strong example). Touches like Morpheu's trumpet playing in "Gimme" add depth and character to their efforts, making appealing offerings from their otherwise standard fare.

▮ Musicianship: Morpheu wields a well-trained tenor voice and can maintain a falsetto from hell. Restraint in execution would improve his delivery; in the stretch for high notes he sometimes sounds strained. De Marco and Triens hang tight together as driving (if unadventurous) rhythm twins, with De Marco adding the requisite bluesy touches. I'd like to say more about Bigwood's guitar and Roth's keyboards, but both sounded watery in comparison to the other elements onstage—blame it on the mix.

▮ Performance: Picture the screen rising on the stage, and with it the mic for the lead singer. . . talk about a bad start. But even during this minor fiasco, Mirror managed to save "Say Your Prayers" by projecting the ease and humor of musicians who have been around the block more than once. Although Morpheu was clearly the conductor who set the pace of the performance, the other two front men, Bigwood and De Marco, equally engaged the crowd with a tangible playfulness and joy in playing.

▮ Summary: There's no denying Mirror's broad appeal to that huge audience that asks for nothing more than to be entertained. They're skilled players, write songs that scream to put on the commercial airways and pull off a polished performance. But what they need is daring. . . just make my blood pressure pump, please. They don't have to stray from formula to add a few more doses of what they already have at their fingertips: the trumpet. Mirror's brass lends unpredictability, which is the only thing they haven't mastered.

Most record buyers will probably prefer to simply stick with the original recordings of these classic songs. However, for those who find the Commitments' deliberate uncanned-sounding amateurishness a refreshing approach, being able to hear new treatments of these fixtures of Sixties-era Motown and soul will probably be recommendation enough.

□ Summary: Chockfull of Sixties influences and melodic charms, the new Smithereens album once again mines familiar territory: well-crafted songs propelled by solid musicianship. Smithereens leader/main songwriter Pat DiNuzio has perfected the art of writing catchy songs that ape the past—though he doesn't bring anything new to the party. Tracks such as "Top Of The Pops" and "Too Much Passion" are pleasant enough, but ultimately unsatisfying. Her voice is fine (try the ballads, which aren't that bad), but this attempt at the trendy techno-dance/pop groove is just an oversynthesized mess that makes little use of her formidable pipes. Material is the key, and the upbeat disasters here will make you long for the days of "Bad Girls." After this turkey, Summer's gonna hope you don't recognize her. Toot toot, hey, this stinks!

Summary: Not only is this the finest disc of Saint's career, but it's also one of the most deeply emotional recordings of recent memory, hard rock or not. The band has channeled the death of guitarist Dave Prichard, into a statement that expresses the durability of the human spirit, without any calculated pathos. The album also highlights Saint's versatility, balancing riffs so heavy you could stick a Flying-V in 'em, with moodier, restrained passages like "Tainted Past," one the most sincere and complex songs you'll hear this year. Salvation comes to those who seek it.

Jerry Garcia & David Grisman
Jerry Garcia/David Grisman
Acoustic Disc

① ② ③ ④ ⑤ ★ ⑦ ⑧ ⑨ ⑩

Producer: Jerry Garcia and David Grisman
Top Cuts: "Arabia," "The Thrill Is Gone."
Summary: Here's an interesting and logical teaming—a famed hippie rock guitarist and his mandolinist pal simplifying everything with blues and folk in a setting reminiscent of a small Southwestern cantina. Poor production renders these marginally intriguing tunes about as clear as a Woodie Guthrie recording, but there is a certain charm. Too bad the best cut, a Middle Eastern jaunt, goes on ten minutes too long. A must for Deadheads and lovers of old-time acoustic folk, this is an offbeat project worth at least one spin.
—Jonathan Widran

Haunted Garage
Possession Park
Metal Blade

① ② ③ ④ ⑤ ⑥ ★ ⑧ ⑨ ⑩

Producer: Ronnie S. Champagne
Top Cuts: "976-Kill," "Little Green Men," "Dead And Gone."
Summary: "Are you feeling gross and twisted?" asks lead throat Dukey Flyswatter. On their carnivorous debut, HG has written some of the most psychotically humorous passages of heavy metal verse you'll hear this year. Consider "976KILL," where Dukey locates a social gathering via the phone's partyline, arrives at the house, slaughters the Tom Cruise wannabes and samples their onion dip while stacking the bodies in a corner. The band also has some excellent chops thanks to the tandem guitar of Gaby Godhead and Johnny Ho. Brilliant stuff!
—Scott Schalin

Warpipes
Holes In The Heavens
Artful Balance

① ② ③ ④ ⑤ ⑥ ⑦ ⑧ ★ ⑩

Producer: Davey Johnstone and Guy Babylon
Top Cuts: "Divided Heart," "Back A' Ma Buick," "Tear Jerker."
Summary: You could look at Warpipes as one of two things: an Elton John Band reunion (with EJ staples Johnstone, Babylon and Nigel Olsson), or a phenomenal new outfit playing good old-fashioned rock & roll, instantly hummable tunes and having a hell of a time doing it. While these cats are tight, great soloists and Johnstone finally gets his chance to shine as a songwriter, it is the tough yet tender newcomer vocalist Billy Trudel who really keeps the Warpipes adventurous and exciting. One of 1991's truly great pop/rockers.

WE HELPED MAKE A MOUNTAIN OUT OF WINDHAM HILL

WINDHAM HILL RECORDS

Back when William Ackerman and Anne Robinson went shopping for a company to press their first records, their vision and passion for perfection were evident. Will and Anne must have recognized the same in us. That was 15 years and 60 releases ago. The rest is history. If you want to make history, call.

ANDY CAHAN'S DEMO SERVICE

Compared to a professional recording studio, at first sight, it's hard to believe that Andy Cahan's demo facility is capable of producing such high-quality demos.

Andy Cahan, ex-Turtle, Rhino producer and independent producer, can make a demo for $100 a tune. He's never had an unhappy customer. Using CD-quality, 16 bit sampled sounds of percussion, guitars, keyboards, orchestra and vocals, as well as various ethnic sounds such as bagpipes and sitar, Cahan can offer the next best thing to a recording session for a fraction of the price.

Cahan claims he can turn out demos that can be "transferred into perfect synch independently to separate tape with no generation loss," should someone want to go into a 24-track studio.

Cahan also offers help in arrangement. Singers and songwriters with limited musical knowledge often rely on him to provide the sonic partner to their lyrics. His arrangements are custom made to order. He doesn't mind players bringing in their own axes, but for those who require instrumentation, the sky's the limit.

Andy has now relocated to Sherman Oaks, and is running his studio 6 days a week, day and night. For clients who are outside the L.A. Area, Andy offers his demo service by mail and provides male and female session vocalist for all styles.

Cahan helps the artists whose talents exceed their wallet. He offers that most people contend that it must be money that gets certain artists signed and lack of it that holds other ones down. He considers his services an opportunity to contradict that notion.

Andy Cahan can be reached at (818) 377-8967.

THERE IS A DIFFERENCE BETWEEN MAJOR PLANT QUALITY AND USING A MAJOR PLANT.

"The new Digalog process is the most exciting advance in cassette duplication since chrome tape. The sonic clarity and stereo separation rival that of a CD. All Positive Music's cassettes will be manufactured with Digalog from now on."

- Ken Navarro, President Positive Music Records, Inc.

Major manufacturers can afford the latest, and very expensive technology, to give you better quality.***

Now you can take advantage of DIGalog from WEA Manufacturing (Time-Warner Inc.) - a new manufacturing process that duplicates cassettes directly from a digital source (solid state microchip) so that no generations of sound are lost before the music is recorded onto your tape. DIGalog produces the standard analog cassette with one important difference, better sound with signal-to-noise ratio by 2db or better. Now your standard cassettes will sound more like CD's.

\(At volume prices through complete service experts like Creative Sound Corp.)*
