PRESENTERS OF THE COUNTRY RADIO SEMINAR
GROWTH THROUGH SHARING SINCE 1970

Welcome to CRS 26,

The theme of the 26th annual Country Radio Seminar, "Taking It to the Next Level," reflects my own unflinching optimism in our industry.

Like many of you, I've been fortunate to be involved in country radio's rise from an alternative format to the most programmed format in radio. We have long ago surpassed all expectations and predictions.

Many reporters have observed that in the past year, we've reached a plateau. I challenge each of you to join me in working toward using our current base as a platform for even greater accomplishments.

As our format has grown, so has the task of the Country Radio Broadcasters. We continue to provide the serious learning experience that has always distinguished this conference. In recognition of the unique passion we have for our format, we've expanded the opportunity for exposure to artists.

I have been fortunate to work with some of the brightest minds of our industry on the Board of Directors and Executive Committee, all of whom serve at their own expense. They, along with Executive Director Dave Nichols and his staff, deserve your thanks for CRS - 26.

STANDING ON THE EDGE

The Backus Company

Hot, hot, hot, hot are probably the four best words to define the blistering pace of country music's consumer popularity over most of the past decade. But where do you go once you've reached the top of the heap?

In Search of The

Next

Level

by Tom McEntee

Country music radio is on a roll. A truly amazing and enormously profitable hot streak. In fact, it's been streaking along in tandem with the most productive and successful period, sales-wise and demography-wise, that the entire industry of country music has ever witnessed. But now what? Being a nation of goal-setters, we've always got to have another target to fix our eye on, as soon as (and sometimes before) we've hit the present one. And so there's got to be somewhere else to aim our arrows.

And another thing: the driving force behind the whole rampage is the public. And the public—that inscrutable agglomeration upon which everyone in the entertainment world stakes his or her fortunes, is as changeable as Reba's stage costumes. In fact, in several markets, the unstable nature of “public taste” is already making itself apparent in country ratings slips, as the more fickle listeners dial-surf their way to trendier waves.

But country music has already “proven itself” a winner in the global marketplace. After long accepting a narrow niche as the music of rural America, the country format surged into the forefront of popular music forms worldwide. Like Rocky Balboa, it rose triumphant from the bottom of the heap and wrested the championship belt away from all other radio format contenders, so it's hardly likely to just dry up and blow away, regardless of what the numbers appear to be saying in several locales. Champions don't do that. Still, there is some genuine concern about “maintaining.”

And another, more ironic note: with the dollar value of country music burgeoning like the fabled mustard seed, and technological advancements blanketing the entire planet like some futuristic atmosphere of silicon particles, there are also concerns as to how best retain the personal approach of country music that has always been its most cherished attribute.

So, in the wake of all this success, and acknowledging those few dips appearing here and there in the numbers, where does the country radio industry, and, in fact, the entire country music industry, go from here? What and where is the next level for country?

The CRS roving mike this year took the question to a diverse panel of participants, all with some direct involvement in the ongoing and ever-changing game called the country music industry. The result was an abundance of answers, views, perspectives, insights, hyperbole and sales pitches on the future for country music—all positive, all upbeat, and all fairly well representative of the particular business area of the individual commenting.

Like the Big Rock Candy Mountain, we're told, the next level will offer plenty for everyone. It'll be a place of heightened interaction between fans and their musical heroes, between listeners and, possibly, a more personality'd radio. And wherever that next level may be, it seems we'll be traveling toward it on an information highway. And highways, offers Infinity's Mel Karmizan, will offer more traffic jams, “and people are spending more time in their cars, and therefore radio is the best way to reach these people.”

But maybe it would be better if we just let our panel speak for themselves:

Mel Karmizan (President, Infinity Broadcasting—New York):

Q. What do you see as the “next level” for country radio? What will be its role within the medium itself?

M.K. There is always going to be a very significant role that radio will be playing in the communications world. And radio will continue to be an important medium in the home. But more important than that, radio is still the dominant media to reach people when they’re away from the home, since at least two-thirds of radio listening is done away from the home. People are spending more time listening to radio, and country radio will continue to be a very important part of the overall radio listening.

Unlike any of the media that we compete with, radio listening has never been higher, so we’re entering this year with a medium that has people spending more time listening to it than ever. Competitively, that’s a great advantage.

Q. Lots of talk lately deals with the value of personality in country radio. How do you see the future for radio “personalities”?

M.K. Radio personalities are often important parts of expanding the audience. And when we can find very desirable personalities, Infinity has always made it a practice to try to hire them. But it’s not like you would just hire somebody and say, “Be a personality!”

Our feeling is that, if we can find somebody compelling as a personality, that’s very desirable, but if the performer, the announcer, the disk jockey, isn’t compelling, then we’d rather play the country music records than have somebody get in the way of the music.

But if, in fact, a personality is able to attract an audience, and not detract from the radio station, we’re interested. So we have, in our company, a lot of high visibility radio personalities. But we also have, as a company, a lot of radio stations that are very music-intensive. And we feel we can attract an audience both ways.

Q. How about syndication? How strong is the future for networks in syndication in country?

M.K. First of all, we demonstrated and proved over time that radio does not necessarily have to be local in order to be very successful. That doesn’t mean that localism is not a very important part of radio, but it’s not mandatory. Oprah Winfrey has a very large audience in every city that her program is on, as does David Letterman. And when our company broadcast Howard Stern from New York City into Philadelphia, as a morning man, while every one said it would not work because radio needed to be local in order to be successful, we demonstrated that that’s not necessarily the case.

There’s nothing wrong with being local. A lot of stations are very successful locally, but Rush Limbaugh has demonstrated that a national personality can be successful in virtually every market—as Howard has, as Don Imus is doing.

And, on the network side we believe we can spend the kind of money on programming that an individual radio station most often can’t spend. Most of the radio stations—in fact, probably all of the stations—that we’re providing these formats to are unable to spend the kind of money that we would spend on research, and on our production facilities, and on our studios, and on quality control that we as a network can do.

Unfortunately, the radio industry has so many stations—there are 10,000 commercial radio stations, while there are only 1,100 commercial television stations, in the United States. So there is a glut of radio stations dividing up a relatively small advertising pie. Ten billion dollars is being spent in radio advertising on these 10,000 radio stations, which means that the average radio station is still a small business and unable to invest in the programming.

We have people covering the O.J. trial. Most of the radio stations that we provide programming to can’t afford to have somebody out there covering O.J., or covering Bosnia, or covering areas that their audience might be concerned about. We think that in the future, radio stations are going to become increasingly dependent upon a network, as they are in television. Increasingly dependent either for news or for programming, because networks can do things that an individual station can’t replicate.

Looking into the future we see the role of the network being increasingly important to the industry, because the industry is gonna be able to do a sort of one-stop shopping and the network can provide them with the national coverage that they’re interested in. Therefore the record companies and the artists will find networks to be more important and we will continue to make the programming available to radio stations that they can’t replicate locally.

CONGRATULATIONS!

Gary McCartie (Program Director, WMZQ—Washington, DC):

Q. What does the idea of “taking it to the next level” suggest to you?

G.M. It seems to me that we can look through the rearview mirror now and see where we've been the last few years. And I think it opens up new opportunities for us. I really feel like we've been through an unprecedented period. We're just coming out of the back side of the wave. Some of us are on top of the wave and some of us are about to get crushed by it, and I think we'd better start sharing some information about what we've learned over the last two or three years, with the dramatic increase in popularity in the format. Hopefully, when we determine what our future is, it's a future where both the record community and the radio stations agree, or it's gonna be a problem.

Q. And where do you see the formatics heading?

G.M. Personally, from the research that we have done, and from things we've seen in other markets, it looks as though radio is going to come back to a “mainstream” approach. There certainly is a place for “young country” and there's certainly a place for traditional country as well. But in the last few years we've seen two primary things: number one is that, no matter how old or how young you are, you want a more mainstream approach, and secondly, you want more entertainment on the radio. I think the value of the young country stations has been, for those of us who do mainstream radio, that sometimes good entertainment and a compelling reason to listen to radio could be more than just music. We've been thinking that our morning show should be entertaining and then we ought to just flog the hits—you know, 112 in a row for the rest of the day. But I'm not so sure that that's the only way to win anymore.

Q. Is there a viable combination of “more entertainment” and keeping lots of music?

G.M. The “YCDs” around the country I think are showing us that you can certainly appeal more to an 18-34 demo with an entertainment-based radio station that also happens to play quite a bit of music. And if you give people a reason to listen, in addition to the music, then you've got a double-barreled approach. I think that we've made liner readers the norm in the format for so long that we've relied on the music, and when the music is not so good coming out of Nashville or when they're trying to break a lot of young acts, radio stations then begin to rise and fall based on the whims of the record labels. We ought to be determining our own future, by hopefully grooming entertainers on the radio and not just liner readers.

The bottom line is that radio can be a better marketer of recorded product and be able to provide for its own destiny without relying on the labels to keep coming out with 30 hits a week. We would see that our audience really does desire a lot of music, but they will stick around and, in fact, want more than just music if we offer them something that is as compelling as a song.

Erica Farber (C.E.O./Publisher, Radio & Records—Los Angeles):

Q. Do you see the next level in terms of positive growth?

E.F. From my vantage point, both the country radio and music industries are continuing to experience solid growth. I'm defining growth in terms of both the customer base, as well as the financial results. Radio's overall billing was at an all-time high, with advertisers continuing to increase their spending, both locally and nationally. This past year alone country-formatted stations accounted for approximately 25% of all radio stations in America.

On the music side, we saw five new labels open their doors and there are indications of several more still to come. The country music market is continuing to expand as well, with the music appealing to both the young and older end of the population, truly making the country sound the mass appeal format. With the result that country record sales are growing in leaps and bounds.

“Taking it to the next level” continues to depend on all of us redefining our customer base, understanding their very specific needs and expectations, and delivering on that promise. As for R&R specifically, I believe (the next level) raises the questions: “How do our customers want their information delivered? How is information from both the business customer and the public consumer going to be consumed? and What is the impact going to be with measured results coming back almost instantaneously?”

Q. So what does this all boil down to?

E.F. Well, it gets down to “Where are we going to be getting our information? How are we going to be using it?” Everyone will have the ability to make decisions more quickly because we're going to have precise measurements. We're going to know, not only from an advertising standpoint, but we're also going to know from a listener standpoint. We're going to know actual purchasing patterns, we're going to know exact listening patterns.

I think that the intrusion level (Big Brother is watching) is going to be a much bigger issue, and I believe the ability to generate instantaneous information (and some people believe we already have too much information) is also going to be greater.

Our goal as a company is to be the primary business information provider for the radio and music industries.

We're establishing ourselves as a primary delivery system—the platform to allow the radio and record industries to get what they need when they want it. Simple and complete. With a menu, delivered in the form they want. Do I think that newspapers are going to go away? No. I also don't believe faxes are going to go away. However, as people become more PC-oriented, they are expecting to receive information electronically. How people consume information and the timeliness of that information is what is changing.

So, R&R's direction will continue to change as the needs of our customers change.

Q. You're saying you'll be filling more gaps in the electronic area?

E.F. Absolutely. We do have an existing on-line system that's growing. We are delivering our own proprietary information as well as information, products, and services provided by many other companies. Our company is a true work-in-progress.

Maria Cooper Brunner (Owner / President, Insight Management—Scottsdale, AZ):

Q. What's your perspective on the "next level" for the country music industry? And is that level an "upper" or a "lower"?

M.C.B. I do promotion and marketing and I work with radio, labels, artists, managers and venues, and I think country has hit its heights, yet I don't think it's going to go away. Some people are predicting its demise and I don't see that at all. But I do think we're going to need to be very sane about the product we offer or we could be fragmented like pop and rock is now. And what would happen then, just as in pop and rock, is that the oldies but biggies, like Alabama, would be the mainstay. Just like Aerosmith is for rock.

Look at what we've done. It's fantastic! Now, we have a wonderful challenge in front of us, and that is: How do we keep it at this level, but keep the quality and the integrity there—including talentwise.

One thing that is very interesting is that a lot of the labels and artists are jumping on the information highway, which is progressive. Country artists don't get as much press, certainly, as the Rolling Stones and Pink Floyd, but I know they're on the Internet talking to their fans just as much, if perhaps not a little more than rock acts. If country can continue to look at its roots, while keeping in mind that the world is moving on a very fast highway, and consider how to integrate the two, it's going to be very unique.

Good examples of this are selected radio stations, including KMPS in Seattle. Their Loyal Listener line is very interactive. When you call there are several options you can work with. Because of the way their telephone and computer is set up, not only can the station get valuable data, but the listeners calling in can educate themselves in a variety of ways. I don't think it'll be too long in the distant future before they can visually see what they're punching in. So they can call in and not only enter contests, but submit articles, answer questions—get answers to questions on artists. It's very unique.

I think things will continue to speed up, and time as we know it, and work with it, will be totally restructured.

Q. And what about the artists themselves? How do they fit in the "next level"?

M.C.B. Country music is a vehicle that keeps families together, or gives a sense of unity. Also, country artists are the ones taking the lead with many charity events, such as AIDS, Red Cross, etc. I don't know of a community that comes together more when someone is hurt, sick, flooded, or the like. It's usually a country artist who comes to the aid of people who need help, by raising money, donating goods, and making appearances. I haven't heard of pop and rock doing that in a long time. I read with delight that Bon Jovi did their Christmas charity again—which they didn't do for a couple of years—where it benefited people from their roots. It seems to me that country artists more than ever are trying to present good images, both by being involved and by the music they present. That is very significant and could be the very thing that keeps country as popular as it is. I hope we in the country music industry don't lose those values, or that perception.

Dean James (Program Director, KSCS—Dallas):

Q. Do you have a location for the “next level”?

D.J. The next level for country radio is to maintain the level that we’re at now. I really strongly believe that. I don’t know if there is a “next level” for it to get any better or any more popular, other than to ride the wave that we’re on now, and continue to bring up the same level of talent, and keep the same quality of radio. I mean it’s a great competitive market.

I don’t know how many new country stations will be jumping on the bandwagon. That is not to say there aren’t some markets that are still “under-radioed” in country. But I don’t think here in Dallas, for instance, we’re gonna be seeing a fifth country radio station.

But I’d like to see the same amount of talent come out of Nashville, and the same quality of music continue. And just maintain where we are now, and hopefully the industry, the talent won’t turn to what CHR became, in rock ‘n roll, where the talent is inaccessible to radio. The two agendas are different anyway, between, I think, the record industry and broadcasting. The common thing between the two, in addition to the talent, is the fact that the labels sell more records and more people listen to the radio. But nonetheless I think that the two industries are basically separate entities. We’re selling advertising and trying to get a lot of people to listen, so we’re doing what’s in the best interest of appealing to the masses, where the record companies are just trying to sell product.

Q. You’ve already achieved a certain “level,” thanks, in some degree, to the music. Now, all things being equal, what can radio do to improve its own situation?

D.J. Be the entertainment medium that it should be, and entertain and inform. And be what radio is all about. And maybe get away from the personality-less [format]. My quest is to stay the market leader. Yeah, I’m the number one country station. I’ve been so for five years. But the point here is to stay the market leader. I want to be the number one station. Bottom line is, its return on the dollar. I’ll make money if I’m the number one country station; I’m gonna make more money if I’m the number one station in the market. So, the next level here for us individually is to stay where we are. Or increase the distance between us and the next radio station. I guess that would be the next level for my station.

Q. What are your thoughts on “personality” radio?

D.J. I think there’s a place for personality radio. And that doesn’t mean playing one less record than I’m playing today, than I’m gonna play tomorrow, if I want to be a more personality-oriented radio station. It just means finding out what the market wants, and serving that market—my core. Keeping them happy. Keeping the majority happy, but still playing country music and playing a lot of it. And find out what it takes—and we think we know what it takes—to be a market leader, and working toward that. And stay successful with it.

We’ve been successful in the past, but now, as things start to level off in country music, we can’t sit here and just kind of kick back on the back of the board and ride the wave. We’ve gotta lean forward and really make sure that we poise the station to be a market leader. Just because we’re playing the music doesn’t necessarily mean we’re gonna stay number one.

It’s playing the right music. The right mix of music. The balance between old and new, or, how much new music are you going to play.

Gene Dickerson (General Manager, KRMD—Shreveport):

Q. Is there a “next level” for the entire country radio industry?

G.D. The “next level” is different for every station, and sometimes goes beyond a single operation. It should be defined by upper management.

The thing we try to do with our middle managers, and I think this is imperative, is to “spread discontent.” That is, we can never be satisfied. We have always got to be reaching for the next level. It’s a constant quest for excellence. The day you begin to rest on your laurels, the day that you begin to say “Hey, look at what we’ve done” somebody is gonna overtake you.

We make a commitment at KRMD to continue the education of all staff members that want to go to school. I’m talking about college level classes. And we want all of our staff people to be computer literate, to be at home with computers, because I think computers are probably going to end up being the one major device that drives the entire industry.

Thanks to you, the music plays on

It's a real tenuous time now for the broadcast industry. It's changing very quickly, and we're always looking at all sorts of technology and digital workstations to improve our position in the marketplace. So, research and education for our employees will insure that one of our major investments this year will meet our goals for delivering, and producing, the best possible product in the future.

Q. Are you making any changes now at your station toward that future?

G.D. A new concept we're adding this year deals with "overserving" our listeners and advertisers. You know, radio stations are very proud and very quick to tout how well they serve the listeners. We're always patting ourselves on the back and wanting to see our numbers in print, and we take to those bragging rights very quickly. One of our directives this year in our research efforts at KRMD is to take our ratings to the next level. Install a similar type rating system that tells us how well we service our advertisers. Can we honestly say that 90% of all the people who advertise on our station enjoy working with us?

We're gonna ask them to evaluate our people, from the receptionist right through to the account executive that calls on them, to the creative services that interact with them. And this is both at the agency and the local level, as well. I think that overserving both the listener and the advertiser has got to be the key mission of country radio in the future.

We're always scanning the horizons for new techniques, new ways to keep the station on the cutting edge. We're spending a lot of money to find that out. And we know what our listeners think about us. And we know what our brand approval rating is. Anybody who's running a radio station today, whether it's country music, or A/C or AOR or Top 40, needs to know exactly how they're scoring with the listeners in ways other than just what's reported in the Arbitron report.

I think country music has a great future. Perhaps there may even be more opportunity internationally than on a national basis. We make all this "product" in America, but country music is the preferred music of choice in Russia. Why? 'Cause they can understand the lyrics. The church that I attend has a respondent Church in Russia that we have established and the gentleman that put that together came to me and said, "I can get the Russians to give me a radio frequency over there, and they want me to put country music on it. What can you do to help us." I think there's a tremendous opportunity to export the product on an international basis.

Lynn Kite (Director, Country Format Network, the Interep Radio Store—Chicago):

Q. How do you fit into the scheme of things, and where's your next level?

L.K. Since our inception in 1992, the Country Radio Format Network has created over $12,000,000 new dollars for country formatted radio stations and we've only just begun!

Now, our next level is to take our business to the nontraditional advertisers. The accounts we have been focusing on have been the "typical" country accounts, like Chevy and Dodge, but in 1994 we began to branch out in other arenas, and our focus for the rest of the decade will be non-traditional accounts. We'll be making major inroads in the grocery and banking industries, and not just the automotive. The reason we went to the traditional advertisers in the beginning is that they were an obvious match for the network. Truck advertising and the country listener are a natural marketing match.

We have seven highly trained "specialists" who, though they're affiliated with national rep firms of the Interep Radio Store, devote a major portion of their time speaking with advertisers and their agencies about the tremendous buying power of the country music audience.

Q. It would seem that $12,000,000 makes for a decent opening shot.

L.K. Right, but now it's really time to expand our sales. The format has grown to the point where now it's time that we go after the grocery business, like Clint Black being a spokesperson for Keebler, and Reba working for Tropicana and Frito Lay. It's time for the people who sell our network to go to non-traditional country accounts—products you don't normally think of as being country-oriented.

That's the way I intend to help grow the country share of the advertising dollar. The Country Format Network is just three years old. We got the idea to do it four years ago, and when we first started it there was still a bias against country in a lot of areas. It's amazing to me how that has all changed. Now there might be just a handful of clients who won't buy the format, and we need to concentrate on those, as well.

Q. Where do you see country radio going?

L.K. There are so many new artists that I'm glad I'm not a program director. I would hate to have the job of trying to figure out who I should play on the air. I was just looking at a copy of Country America the other day and they highlighted ten new country artists for 1995. I haven't even heard of half of them. And you know stardom for them is just around the corner, yet only three or four of them will make it to 1998.

Maybe this is the same thing that other formats go through, but it just seems to me that there are so many artists out there that it makes it very difficult for the stations. What happens to guys like Randy Travis? I mean, is he a has-been already? It's a shame, because he doesn't get as much airplay as many of the newer artists, and yet in my opinion he's getting better as an artist. A station I was talking with not too long ago said, "You will not hear Willie Nelson on my air, ever!" and I thought to myself, "Now isn't that a shame?" I can relate when Merle Haggard at the CRS a few years ago asked the audience why they didn't play his records anymore.

In one of Lon Helton's recent columns in Radio & Records, he asked, "Have we peaked or have we reached a plateau?" Maybe it's a combination of both. The key question now is, how will country radio respond if the country boom is behind us? Will they pull in their reins or will they become aggressive marketers? This is another time for change in the country radio business.

Fred Schumacher (Vice President/General Manager, KMPS—Seattle):

Q. We hear KMPS is already moving toward the "next level." What's going on up there?

F.S. We have a lot of weird stuff here. For instance, we use a FairWest interactive telephone system, which can also be used as a way to play music. When the new Garth record was released and we couldn't play it on the air every four seconds, we put that over the phone system and thousands of people called on the first day just to hear it on the telephone.

Also, about a third of our Loyal Listeners Club (of about 185,000 members) have, and use, computers with modems—a far bigger number than I thought I'd see. And it's growing. So our latest project came out of our club magazine, where we've put out a substantial amount of editorial over time, and lots of photos and so on. We put it on the computer and we went up on the Internet with the first country music site in the world. Some eight or ten thousand people have accessed the site so far, about a third of whom are from our area, western Washington, and about two thirds from all over the world. There are country fans all over Europe, South America, Australia, and so on.

And you can join our club [on computer] just like you can over the interactive phone system or on paper. So we've got lots of new members who've joined over the computer.

What is certain about different types of music is that they tend to rise and fall in popularity at different times. And what we wanted to do was to create an experience that's so rich among those people who like it that we could maintain a good profitable business regardless of the size of the format.

I see the Internet becoming much bigger in the future. You can already, for example, if you have a sound card in your computer, [get] a little sound check from the radiostation. You can also play sound checks of different albums that are being reviewed that month—very short snippets. There are lots of other little things that hook up to computers too. For example, a card being shown at a recent consumer electronics show contains not only an FM receiver, but RBDS receiver as well, so stations can send alpha numeric messages to computer screens to use for contests and whatever else they want to. But that's really taking it to the next technological level.

From a human standpoint, taking it to the next level, for me, really isn't taking it to a bigger and bigger and bigger [place] in terms of the number of people. In fact I would suggest that, at least in Seattle, the number of country music venues has decreased in the past year, rather than increasing. So I see "taking it to the next level" really means taking it to a more personal level of the people who like country music.

What we're out to do, is to create a relationship with people who like country music. 'Cause it is a relationship and it's beyond hearing a song that they don't like, or a commercial they don't like, and punching a button. Nowadays you run up and down the dial, and the relationship you have with most stations is, "Well that sounds good for right now," and most of the time you don't even know what station's on.

The last point I'd really like to make to the people in Nashville is that, using technology they're gonna be able to take country music to people and places they haven't been able to reach before. Taking into their homes beyond music videos on CMT and TNN. In the future you'll be able to just go down this enormous system of menus [on computer] and find the song you want to hear right now and just click it on,

So if Nashville really starts thinking toward the future, there's a wealth of things people can bring into their homes. Maybe there should be a Nashville web site, which all the record companies contribute to, so that people all over the world can access that in very much a library-type fashion.

Jim Ed Norman (Executive Vice President, Nashville—Warner Bros. Records):

Q. Any predictions from your angle on the "next level"?

J.E.N. It would be nice to be able to give a rock-solid prediction of what to expect in the coming year and beyond, but that would take all the fun out of it, wouldn't it? Instead, I'd rather look at where I think the format is going, and maybe we can get together again next year and see how close I came.

At Warner-Reprise/Nashville (WRN), 1994 saw one of the most dramatic sales increases in the company's history, and was, in fact, our biggest sales year ever. That was due in no small part to the success of three of our newest artists—Faith Hill and Jeff Foxworthy, both of whom have reached platinum and gold status, and David Ball, who should reach platinum soon. Of course, the artists, themselves, deserve a major share of the credit for that success, but at least as important has been the label's integrated marketing approach. Part of that marketing approach has been a commitment to improve our communication with radio and a focus on how to ensure that we provide what radio needs.

That's becoming more important than ever because of the pressure created by the increasingly competitive market situation. More competition leads to more information and a noise level so high that labels have to find more concise and efficient ways to cut through the clutter to make their cases. One of the ways we're doing that here is with our Warner/Reprise Nashville Information Superhighway, an electronic magazine featuring artists from the WRN roster. Each issue is produced on a disk that highlights a group of WRN artists and provides discography, press, fan club, management, and publicity information, as well as the latest album artwork. The bottom line is that we want to make information about our artists as accessible and as appealing as possible. We'll do more and more high tech marketing in the coming year and beyond, and other record companies will likely do the same.

Q. Can we expect to see the country numbers continue to climb, without any fluctuations in sales?

J.E.N. It's important to remember that, no matter how we'd like to believe otherwise, the music industry is an inexact business. We're dealing with songs and emotions, not burgers and fries. For that reason, there always have been—and there always will be—periodic fluctuations in sales. That's just a part of the business that we have to accept.

What's truly important, however, is that the country music format has shown consistent growth in the past and will continue to grow. As a matter of fact, it's at least as popular now as it's ever been, not only in this country, but overseas, as well. That popularity is not due to any one thing, but, rather, is a result of a combination of factors working together—radio, video, records, etc. They all are important and all have significant roles to play in the success of country as a format.

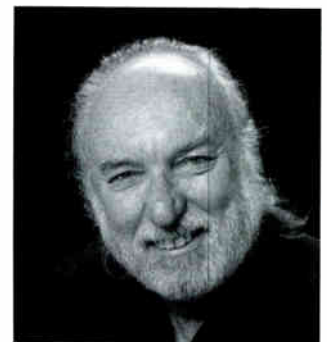

The diversity within the broad musical category termed "country" also is a factor. It encompasses not only Faith Hill and Hank, Jr., but Reba and Travis Tritt. There is more for people to like about country music than ever before, and there are no signs that will change.

If those of us within the format work together to help country music generally, in competition with other formats (as we do with CRS, for instance), the individual successes of specific artists, labels, stations, and networks—and, ultimately, country music—will take care of themselves.

Russ Solomon (President, Tower Records—Sacramento, CA):

Q. What do you see as the main cause of the country sales boom, and what's the next level for country in the sales and marketing areas?

R.S. The main thing that's happened is probably that country radio was a strong AM stalwart and now it's become very, very present in the FM perspective, in the last eight years, maybe. Which is why we've got a better penetration to a popular audience. In general, just the older audience was listening to AM radio and the younger audience was listening to FM radio. And now the younger audience is listening to country and the stations are broadcasting a younger-oriented form of country, instead of the old-fashioned stuff that's been around forever—which is what I happen to like, but that's not what the younger buyers like.

But basically that's the big thing that's happened. And I think that's terribly important, 'cause now you've got an availability to a dial spinner on the FM band. And what they're playing, of course, is a much more modern sound—by artists that they can identify with. I always think the audience will seek to popularize those artists who they can identify with in a personal sense, as a sex symbol, or otherwise. You have a little difficulty identifying with a 60-year-old country singer, or bluegrass picker, as a sex symbol. But Garth Brooks and Reba are a different story.

But, in the final analysis, as far as this “next level” goes, the only thing that really counts is the music. You can talk all day long about techniques of marketing and techniques of merchandising, and whether to sell it by mail, or not sell it by mail, or put it on electronic wire, or all that other stuff, but the only thing that really counts is the music. And if the music has its appeal, and it's new and fresh and it appeals to a younger audience in general, and responds to what that audience wants to hear, then it's easy to market. Then it's just a matter of exposing it to that audience.

There's not much radio can do if they don't have good music to play. They can come up with every stunt imaginable, but no one's gonna listen unless the music that's being played is responsive to the audience that wants to listen to it. That's not a very revealing comment, of course. I'm sure they know that.

So the future of the format depends upon an ever-freshening music, as well as on the artists themselves—those who people can identify with, and maybe identify with as sex symbols.

As it turns 20, the Country Radio Scholarship Fund already has one foot poised on

The Next Level of Education

by Tom McEntee

This year the Country Radio Scholarship Fund turns 20. Emerging from a well-intended but somewhat directionless adolescence whose future was often murky, it approaches adulthood with strong evidence that the program has truly grown up.

Just as the Seminar itself has burgeoned from an innovative idea, meticulously nurtured over many years, to an industry giant, its offspring has begun to carve out its own niche, evolving out of its teens into a far more mature and effective agent of educational assistance.

The program's new look is the direct result of a crucial makeover employed by the CRB Board of Directors, which has adopted a number of new policies that will dramatically change its approach to education assistance.

One aspect of that change has already taken place, in the form of a significant boost to the dollar value of the awards, from $1,000 to $5,000 each. Still not through, the board is planning to raise the pot even further, with a goal of ten scholarships a year by 1997, each in the amount of $5000.

Much of that was brought about as a result of a contribution pledge of $100,000 made to the fund by Gaylord Entertainment. The first of four installments of $25,000 came in 1994, and marked the largest single donation ever made to the program. The second installment will be made during the program of CRS-26.

Initiated in 1974, immediately after the Country Radio Seminar was granted its nonprofit status, the scholarship program began as a gesture in the direction of Making A Difference, funded from "profits" ensuing from each year's CRS. Since the goal of the Country Radio Seminar itself was one of education, with the purpose of upgrading the country radio broadcasting industry, it seemed to the leaders that whatever profits CRS might accrue should be redirected into some sort of education program for college students. As such, it was intended to be an expression of a continuing commitment toward quality in the country radio broadcasting industry. It also nicely exemplified the CRS' motto: "Growth Through Sharing."

But like many other well-intended ideas, the scholarship program at times moved sluggishly at best. Costs to produce the Seminar itself climbed continuously, forcing registration fees upward and leaving "profits" that were barely noticeable. As a result, the fund saw little growth, and the 2-year stipend remained stagnant at $1,000-per-year. And while its gifts to several dozens of college students totaled some $60,000 over its first 19 years, inflationary times had devalued the annual award to the point where it would barely keep a college student in text books. It had become more a token of good will than any significant assistance to the needy students it was meant to serve.

In keeping with its desire to keep a lid on the cost of registration, the board began to seek a more predictable source of funding for the scholarships. One path toward that end was that of approaching and seeking support from the broadcast and music industries, as well as affiliated fields, including country-related advertisers.

The first step in that direction came in the late '80s when the board created an endowment fund to ensure that the scholarship would continue regardless of Seminar profits. Beginning with precedent-setting contributions by Warner Bros. Records, Music Row Magazine and Interep, corporate involvement in the program soon became a reality.

The recent Gaylord involvement then brought the scholarship fund to its own "next level."

CRS scholarships are awarded directly to educational institutions, who then choose needy student recipients. Funds are granted only to upperclassmen pursuing a baccalaureate degree in mass communications (broadcasting, journalism, electronic media or "other title revealing an emphasis on radio"). Students must be maintaining a "B" average, and must put in at least 10 hours per week gaining radio experience, either in an institution-operated broadcast facility, through an internship, or through employment at a commercial radio station.

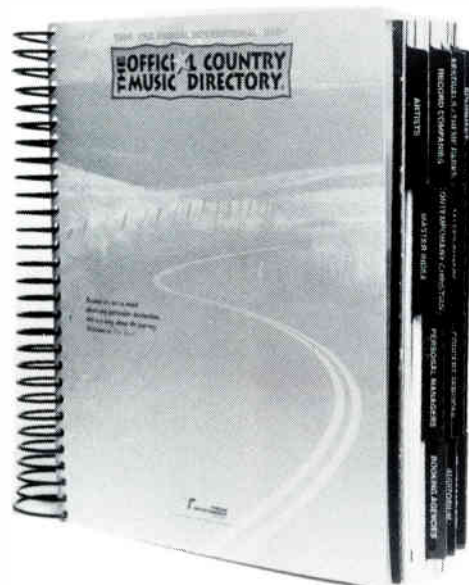

Country broadcasters are encouraged to submit names of deserving students to the CRB office in Nashville. The CRB maintains a file of 98 schools accredited by the Accrediting Council on Education in Journalism and Mass Communications (ACEJMC).

Ken Kragen

One of the Country Radio Seminar's most well-received long-form leaders, Ken Kragen returns this year for yet another encore with a powerful session entitled "Play To Win." In this presentation he'll demonstrate how you can make yourself and your station a S.T.A.R. in your market—by applying Strategies That Achieve Results.

Author of Life Is A Contact Sport, published last year, Kragen always leads a fascinating long form session. His insightful mini-seminars delve deeply into the principles of successful career development and glitter with his personal insights into such career basics as establishing goals and setting your sights, not just high, but at the top of whatever is your chosen field.

Harvard-educated, with a career spanning over 30 years in the entertainment industry, Kragen has achieved a lofty perch at the top of his profession and is recognized as being one of today's most successful artist managers. In addition to a 23-year working relationship with superstar Kenny Rogers, he has also steered the careers of such past and present headliners as Harry Chapin, The Limelighters, Olivia Newton-John, Burt Reynolds, Lionel Richie, The Smothers Brothers, Travis Tritt, and Trisha Yearwood, to name a few.

In addition, Kragen has produced a number of highly successful television ventures, going back to the original "Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour" in the late '60s (and their return to CBS-TV two decades later).

Additional production credits include three mini-series and four Kenny Rogers television movies, along with some dozens of specials for both network and cable TV.

Ken's creative juices not only flow in the area of personal advancement, but in the area of public service, as well. Among his most notable achievements in this area are his initiation and development of both the enormously successful and precedent-setting "We Are The World," and "Hands Across America" relief efforts. In addition, the globally community-conscious Kragen coordinated the almost four dozen artists who jointly recorded the We Are The World theme, and he established an organization to supervise raising and distributing funds for the victims of starvation in Africa.

For his efforts in these areas he was awarded the prestigious United Nations Peace Medal.

The "Hands Across America" project rallied some 7 million Americans to stand hand-in-hand and form a line from the Atlantic to the Pacific, in an effort to focus attention on the problems of hunger and homelessness here in the United States. Between them, these two activities have raised over $100 million to help the world's disadvantaged, and have been perhaps the most successful private fund-raising activities ever done.

Barry Skidelsky

Few lawyers know the inner workings of the broadcasting and music industries from quite the same inside point of view as does Barry Skidelsky, who'll be heading up a long form session on Friday entitled Radio and Music Law. Of course, few lawyers have accumulated as much experience being part of the inner workings of the industry as has Barry. Prior to his taking up the law, he spent 15 years working in radio, with positions in programming, sales and management in such major markets as New York, Boston, and Philadelphia.

Barry knows radio. (After all, he got his first FCC license when he was just ten years old.)

Which could be why he wears the nickname of "the industry's lawyer." Or possibly the handle is due to the fact that he also happens to be a professional musician, having studied piano and arranging at the respected Berklee College of Music.

In addition, he regularly writes contributing articles for the industry trade magazines and is often seen speaking at industry conventions.

That unique background, along with his down-to-earth attitude and pragmatic approach to the law, is what Barry sees as having helped him build a national reputation as a results-focused lawyer who really cares about his clients.

"I've been there," Barry says. "I know how to bridge the communications gap, whether it involves people from the world of radio or music, engineers, bankers and even the government."

A past panelist at the Country Radio Seminar, this year marks his first CRS appearance as a long-form presenter.

Barry is admitted to practice in New York, Washington, D.C., and in several federal courts, including the United States Supreme Court. Based in New York, he firmly believes that "life does exist outside the beltway."

His session, simply entitled "Radio and Music Law," promises to be an entertaining and informative overview of the laws that affect each of us and our industry. As Barry puts it, "This is your chance to learn to use the law, rather than have it use you."

Tanya Tucker

In keeping with the tradition that sees only the most outstanding country talent kicking off the annual Country Radio Seminar, this year's opener is yet another world class performer.

Those of you registrants who remember a country music business without Tanya Tucker surely go back to the time when the Country Radio Seminar was just a one-room schoolhouse. Having recorded her first country smash at the same time she stepped into her first teenage year, Ms. Tucker has been a household word in country music ever since "Delta Dawn" ranged up the charts in the early '70s and shook up the entire industry.

Then, while most kids her age were drinking ice cream sodas at the malt shop, and putting their quarters in the juke box, the Texas-born teen was scoring a Grammy nomination for her first Greatest Hits album, and becoming one of the first country artists to decorate the cover of Rolling Stone Magazine. Not a bad track record for a 15-year old. And one that most artists don't achieve in an entire career.

Her distinctive, powerful vocal style would become ingrained into the fabric of country music over the years, and gold and platinum albums would begin piling up, as would award nominations. In '91, after almost two decades of hit-making, she received her first CMA award as Female Vocalist of the Year. Two years later she took the Video of the Year from the Academy of Country Music as well as the Female Video Artist of the Year from CMT. Additional Grammy nominations came her way in '94 for Best Female Vocalist and for Collaboration on the Dolly Parton single, "Romeo."

Tucker became one of the first country performers to receive a seven-figure tour sponsorship when she undertook the Black Velvet Lady Tour. The past two years she also spearheaded the company's Black Velvet Smooth Steppin' Showdown national dance competition, which helped to benefit multiple sclerosis.

These days her sassy countenance can be found in special displays of Tanya Tucker Salsa in grocery stores across the country and in P.F.I. catalogs, modeling her own line of western wear.

Even with her extracurricular projects the young mother of two still maintains one of the busiest tour schedules in the business. Twenty three years after her debut hit, Tanya Tucker is still living up to her nickname "The Texas Tornado."

NEW FACES

SHOW

ARCHER/PARK

Georgia-born Randy Archer learned to play guitar so he could accompany his gospel-singing mother and aunts. Later he honed his skills in high school bands and, still later, on the club circuit. Meanwhile, Texan Johnny Park was cutting his teeth on "outlaw" country, and picking up on rock music as he worked touring the country. They came to Nashville by totally separate paths and wound up as staff writers at the same publishing company, where they struck a spark and forged a strong co-writing bond. Their rapport finally led to a four-song demo, which itself led to their deal with Atlantic and a debut single ("Where There's Smoke") that climbed into the top 30 on country charts. Half the songs on their self-titled debut album, which offers "traditional country with a jagged edge," were written by the prolific duo.

DAVID BALL

The two-steppin', good-time western dance hall tradition can be an acquired form of musical expression. So proves native Carolinian David Ball. Son of a preacher man (and a piano-playing mother), he was barely in school when his folks got him his first Stella guitar, and he was into songwriting by the seventh grade. He also undertook vocals and the string bass in his early bands, which focused on "Doc Watson-type bluegrass" and traveled around the Carolinas "hitting folk festivals, or anyplace that would have us." Ultimately the road led to Texas, where he got hooked on western dance-hall music and absorbed that flavor into his musical bloodstream. An inevitable move to Nashville, the required number of years on the waiting list, and at last he hooked up with Warner Bros. A&R Director Doug Grau. And the rest, as they say, is platinum. At least that's become the color of his first LP, Thinkin' Problem.

LISA BROKOP

Canadian Lisa Brokop already has history with CRS audiences. Last year her strong performance was the highlight of the Canadian Country Music Association luncheon. Already a longtime veteran at the age of 21, Brokop began singing at seven, and was sitting in with local groups when she was eleven. By 16 she had her own band, and a year later she won CKWX's "Nashville Songwriting Contest." Then she nabbed British Columbia CMA's Horizon Award, as well as the Gospel Performer of the Year Award, and in both '92 and '93, took BCCMA's Female Vocalist of the Year honors. A Nashville showcase at the end of '92 nailed her an immediate contract with Patriot. Her pure, forceful vocals on her first American album, Every Little Girl's Dream, have been building her a base here in the States, which will soon be hearing her new single release, "One Of Those Nights."

KEN MELLONS

What kind of career might you expect of someone who can be seen in all his early childhood photos with a plastic guitar in hand? Ken Mellons quickly provided a clue, in making his first public performance at the Hermitage Hullabaloo Talent Show while still in the first grade. During grade school he continually toured the local talent shows, and got his first airplay performing "live" over the school's intercom system. After graduating, he began performing grownup style (but still for free) at clubs in Nashville and Kentucky, until he was spotted by Grand Ole Opry manager Bud Wendell, who offered him a guest shot on the Opry. That eventually led to an introduction to producer Jerry Cupit, and finally a deal with Epic—and a self-titled album highlighted by nine of his own songs. Among the titles on that album was, of course, "Juke Box Junkie," which has become his first Top Ten chart effort.

GEORGE DUCAS

In his first trip to Nashville, his focus wasn't on country music, but on picking up a degree in economics at Vanderbilt University. Raised in Texas and in California, George Ducas learned guitar early and wrote his first song at 12. A couple of years later he was playing talent shows and parties. Still, he embarked on a career in Atlanta's corporate banking world, a decision which he soon abandoned in favor of his first love: music. So it was back to Nashville, this time to begin working the local club scene. Spotted at work by Liberty A&R rep John Allen, he soon auditioned for label chief Jimmy Bowen, and wound up with a record deal. The co-writer of Radney Foster's hit single, "Just Call Me Lonesome" he also co-wrote all the songs on his self-titled debut album. "Left to my own devices," he confesses, "I will write a shuffle." His current single is "Lipstick Promises."

STEVE KOLLANDER

Former medical-student-turned-advertising-exec Steve Kollander comes to the CRS New Faces Show as the flagship act on one of country music's newest labels, River North Records. Steve has been writing ever since he got his first guitar (at six years old) and, understandably, long saw himself as a "songwriter first." But now he's a stylistic entertainer, an on-stage dynamo with "unorthodox stage antics." Born in Louisiana, and raised in Texas, he pursued a successful career in ad agencies for several years, creating, among other things, ad campaigns using country music beds. At last he made a demo of his own song material which led to a meeting with River North owner, Ted Thomas, and then the record deal. His self-titled first album blends '40s, '50s, and '60s country with rockabilly and jazz, and features his brand new single, "Black Dresses."

Label: River North Nashville (615) 327-0770
Agency: International Management Services (310) 278-0808

RICK TREVINO

Mexican-American-Texan Rick Trevino makes country music not only a multi-national event, but a multi-lingual one, as well, serving up his twang in two languages. The former Texas A&M student made a name for himself in his home state with the single "Just Enough Rope," the Spanish/English version of which became chili-pepper hot in Houston, and led to a sold out honky-tonk tour of the state, with overflow crowds nightly. It also produced features on the singer in Texas Monthly, as well as in a number of national TV spots. But then that was only a warmup for his "She Can't Say I Didn't Cry" single, which soared all the way to the top nationally. Even his debut album came in two flavors, Rick Trevino in English, and Dos Mundos in the Spanish version. "Looking For The Light" is the title of both the new single and the new album. (Obviously, the English title.)

Label: Columbia Records (615) 742-4321

BRYAN WHITE

Bryan White was a child prodigy who began pounding drums at five years old. And the Oklahoma City-reared youngster was eventually keeping it in the family. Keeping the beat, that is. Not only in his father's country band, but in his mother's R&B band, as well. After sharpening his skills with years of road touring, he struck off on his own for Nashville, where he was soon signed to Glen Campbell Music, singing demos. Kyle Lehning liked what he heard and brought him to Asylum in '93. Still not voting age, White has also toured the national Top 40 with "Eugene, You Genius," and is currently touring as an opener for the superstar likes of Tracy Lawrence, Steve Wariner, Diamond Rio, and Pam Tillis. And Country America Magazine recently tagged him as one of the Top Ten New Artists to Watch for '95. Bryan's also co-writer on his latest single, "Look At Me Now."

Label: Asylum Records (615) 292-7990
 Agency: Marty Gamblin/Stan Schneider for GC Management (615) 329-9886

WESTERN FLYER

With a name remindful of old-time red bicycles with fat tires, Western Flyer is a six-member ensemble that offers a "skillful mixture of traditional country sounds with music that soars across the boundaries of pop and rock." This is the first vocal group to be brought aboard Step One's roster, and the boys began building their fan base last summer with their first single, "She Should Have Been Mine," from their self-titled debut album. The band members incorporate a diverse background in musical styles, ranging from gospel to country, from Contemporary Christian to pop and rock. (Sorry, no rap.) Based on the message contained in their current single, "Cherokee Highway," this group became the only country act invited by Coretta Scott King to perform at the Martin Luther King Birthday Bash in Atlanta, this past January.

Label: Step One Records (615) 255-3009
 Agency: Hallmark Directions (615) 256-1993

JOHN & AUDREY WIGGINS

With their father John a former bus driver-turned-opening act for Ernest Tubb, the Smoky Mountain-reared Wiggins kids were singing as soon as they could talk. John Jr. made his singing debut with the Texas Troubadours when he was four years old, formed his own bluegrass band in the 6th grade, and was a weekend professional at 17. Sister Audrey sang on the Opry stage when she was 12, and by junior high she was singing with her brother at local clubs. The two won first prize as a duo in the North Carolina Folk Festival, and later teamed up with Clinton Gregory for 8 years. They moved to Nashville in '87, went home undiscovered and disillusioned, and then came back in '90. This time they landed a Mercury deal and then landed their "Has Anybody Seen Amy" single inside the Top 20. U.S.A. Today has proclaimed their self-titled album one of the Top 10 Country LPs of '94.

Diamond Rio

The Country Music Association has its own tradition building within the framework of the Country Radio Seminar with its now-annual presentation called Fire Up Your Playlist. Each year since its inception, Fire Up has been highlighted by a special showcase performance from the reigning Country Music Association Vocal Group of the Year. With its offering of Vince Gill and Mary Chapin Carpenter in its initial and its reprise outings, this year's CMA segment, Fire Up Your Playlist III, features yet another—the blockbusting headline act—Diamond Rio.

Exploding onto the country music scene just four years ago with a record-setting Arista single called "Meet Me In The Middle," Diamond Rio soon became the first country group ever to make it all the way to the top of the country charts on their first time at bat. And their self-titled introductory album promptly was rewarded with platinum recognition. Since then, they've not slackened their pace a bit, adding hit after hit to their ever-going chart-side collection and picking up plenty of accolades and industry kudos along the way.

Their second album also achieved super-selling status, which helped the group to nail down the

Country Music Association's Top Country Group title in 1992, along with the same honors from the Academy of Country Music, as well as from Radio & Records.

The following year, they duplicated the achievement with both the CMA and the Academy. They managed to accrue a pair of Grammy nominations, as well. And yet another Grammy nomination awaited the group in '94.

In addition to their powerful presence in live performance and on the international airwaves, this year's CMA's representatives are also heavily involved in charitable and community service efforts, with a sizeable amount of their energies devoted to the elderly, the homeless and the hungry, and to veterans.

They have inaugurated an annual Celebrity Golf Tournament in Nashville, with benefits going to selected charities, and also become deeply involved in a number of other organized efforts to raise money or to offer assistance to those in need.

Tracy Lawrence

Another of the highlights of the Country Radio Seminar for most of the past decade has been the ASCAP luncheon, which traditionally features some of Nashville's most successful song-writing performers. This year's luncheon offering, co-headlined by Atlantic's Tracy Lawrence, continues that tradition in tall order.

Since shortly after he first came to Music City this young feller has been riding a whirlwind. And without undergoing the traditional generation of "spinning wheels" that is the bane of most stars-in-waiting.

Less than five years ago he arrived in town, totally unknown, and lugging an all-too-common dream of making it big in the universe of country music. Today his well-established career ranks him among the genre's biggest current sellers and prolific hit-makers.

At the tail end of '91 his debut Atlantic single, "Sticks And Stones," premiered on the national charts, entering the first stages of the rocket ride that would launch him into the heady atmosphere of Number Onedom. And, he hasn't come down since, with an ever-growing list of chart-topping singles that now numbers eight, and total sales of singles and albums of over eight million units. His initial album (by the same name as the single), scored a hat trick, producing a total of three of those Number One singles and striking "gold" in the process. And still the ride didn't stop. The next album, Alibis, went to the platinum level, lifting him to the most rarefied of all country air. He followed that by taking Billboard's Best New Country Artist Award and the Best New Touring Artist honor from Performance Magazine, and in '92 and '93, the Top New Male Vocalist honors from the Academy of Country Music.

And this past summer, he entered the dimension of motion pictures when his first self-produced single, "Renegades, Rebels and Rogues," was incorporated into the soundtrack of the big screen revival of Maverick.

His current single release, "As Any Fool Can See," was threatening, at press time, to further expand his Number One total. Meanwhile, his latest LP, I Can See It Now, having camped a while in the upper chart reaches, is readying perhaps another platinum award for the talented singer.

Tracy gives a lot of his time and efforts to charitable and social causes, including literacy, hurricane relief, hunger causes and cancer fund-raisers. He was also the first male country star to speak out concerning the AIDS problem.

Little Texas

Question: What driving, twelve-legged country act has the looks of Bon Jovi, the smooth vocal touch of the Eagles, teen-infested audiences packing the house far and wide, and was appropriately named for an outlaw town? If you guessed Little Texas, then you've won the opportunity to do lunch with the boys (and a small handful of country broadcasters) at this year's ASCAP midday blowout. And we'd suggest you not pass up this Friday noon feed, unless you don't mind missing out on a dynamite show.

Actually the bill will be split between two red-hot, but totally diverse country entertainment packages—Little Texas and Tracy Lawrence—making this an affair to remember. (In fact, it's a CRS reunion for the two, who were freshmen together in the 1992 New Faces Show. Tracy is featured in a separate spot in the program book.)

There's no doubt that these former "freshman" have graduated. Since their New Faces introduction to the CRS crowd, Little Texas has been kicking more than a little butt, musically speaking. (Could be a song title buried in there, somewhere.)

Writing most of their own material, they've become the current spokesgroup for driving, "big-haired" country, and have been making mighty big waves with "Young Country" America.

They scored gold certification, a Grammy nomination, and three number one hits from their first Warner Bros. album, First Time For Everything, and followed up that little jewel by placing their second album, Big Time, into platinum status.

Just a few of the crowns and credits that they've accumulated for themselves in 1994 alone include Top Vocal Group of the Year from the Academy of Country Music, Band of the Year from R&R, and Group of the Year from CMT. They also won Billboard's Country Video of the Year for "What Might Have Been" (which also happened to hit Number One on both TNN and CMT).

Little Texas had more CMA nominations ('94) than any other group, and was the only group to reach Number One on the Billboard and R&R country singles charts. But one of their neatest tricks was to chart four different songs (with three different vocalists) in three different formats at the same time. (Take our word for it. We don't have space here to go into the whole thing in detail.)

They've played for President Clinton and the first lady, on ABC's Live With Regis and Kathie Lee, and were named World Ambassadors of the Great State of Texas by Governor Ann Richards.

"We're always proud to showcase our finest ASCAP songwriters," says ASCAP's Connie Bradley. "And this year we're especially proud to present two outstanding and quite different writer/performers that we believe will complement one another beautifully."

Prescott Brown

Two Prescotts and a Brown, or a Brown and two Prescotts. Or a Prescott, a Brown and a Prescott. No matter how you break it down, it fits back together snugly as Prescott Brown, one of Canada's tightest and most harmonious new offerings to the country music scene, and stars of this year's Canadian Country Music Association Luncheon.

Did we say new? Well, yes and no. Yes, maybe it's new to Stateside country lovers, but it comes with a pedigree unlike any other "new" act you've ever seen.

Once upon a time this was the heart of The Family Brown, Canada's premiere country act, and, more recently, Tracey Prescott and Lonesome Daddy. But the sound has changed, and the name is now Prescott Brown. It's an award-laden threesome that has already taken just about every trophy and kudo that the maple leafdom has to offer, and has now turned its eyes toward the U.S. country market, via its recent affiliation with Sony/Nashville.

The distaff side of the group comes in the form of Tracey, who was the youngest sibling in Family Brown, once Canada's premiere country act, and who centers the trio. Without question, she exudes a stage presence that can only come with long years at the performing trade.

Husband Randall Prescott, who does vocals and plays a number of instruments in the band, is a multi-award winning producer and songwriter north of the border, with a list of honors that includes Big Country Producer of the Year ('89 and '90), Procan's Songwriter of the Year ('88), the Canadian Country Music Publishing Association's Songwriting Award ('89), and was co-writer of the CCMA's 1989 Song of the Year. As if that wasn't enough, he nailed the CCMA award as Producer of the Year seven straight times ('88 to '94)!

Now, that's a mouthful, regardless whether you speak Canadian or United Statesian.

Eh?

And finally, but not leastly, brother Barry Brown, who picks guitar and writes a good portion of the group's material, is also a multi-award winner, having carted off four CCMA Song of the Year Awards, as well as four Country Music Publishing Awards. Oh, and he also has over 50 Canadian top ten singles to his credit.

The group itself copped the Juno Award in '93 as the Country Group of the Year, and has been nominated for that same award for '94.

A stateside album, co-produced by Sony/Nashville's Executive Vice President, Paul Worley, is scheduled for release in early June.

"CRS is the perfect opportunity to help launch a career with American radio," says Sheila Hamilton, Executive Director of the Canadian Country Music Association. "This opportunity has helped many other Canadian artists in the past, and we hope it will kickstart Prescott Brown's career in the U.S."

Greetings from Canadian Country !

For close to 20 years the CCMA has been encouraging, informing, and promoting Canadian country music on an international basis. A strong Board of Directors and a small, dedicated staff tackle the job with energy, determination, enthusiasm, and an open door policy. As a result, those of us who have been around for some years can now take particular satisfaction in the growing acceptance of Canadian country artists around the world.

The CCMA is especially proud of our representation at this year's sixth annual Canadian Showcase Luncheon at CRS — Sony recording artists Prescott Brown.

Prescott Brown's current album, Already Restless, is awaiting release by Sony Music in the U.S., although it's already been highly successful at home and the first single release, "There You Go," was already charted at country stations across Canada. The group consists of singer/songwriter Barry Brown; his sister, lead vocalist Tracey Prescott; and her husband, multi-instrumentalist and producer Randall Prescott. [See separate article on Prescott Brown.]

I would like to take this opportunity to invite you to our annual convention—Country Music Week '95—to be held in Hamilton, Ontario, September 15-18, 1995.

Country Music Week is the focal point for the organization and provides an opportunity for professional development; a showcase for the highest calibre of Canadian country music talent; and an opportunity to heighten public awareness and increase audience appreciation for country music. During the week, CCMA conducts various panels, seminars, artist showcases, and luncheons. Our annual awards show, the highlight of Country Music Week, will be televised live across Canada and re-broadcast on TNN and CMT.

The CCMA luncheon here at CRS will feature clips from this past year's Canadian Country Music Awards show, televised from Calgary. In addition to hosting the Saturday luncheon and showcase, produced by its international affairs director, Bart Barton, CCMA will have a booth in the CRS Exhibit Hall to provide registrants an opportunity to obtain additional information about the Canadian Country music industry and its Country Music Week.

We hope the lunch is to your liking. We know you'll love the entertainment!

Sincerely,
Tom Tompkins
President, CCMA

Country Radio Power Goes On Tour

by Tom McEntee

There's no doubt of the power of country radio to reach and influence a major portion of the listening audience. There's no doubt at all—except maybe in the eyes of those major commercial advertisers who still see country as a niche format, targeting an audience of beer-brandishing bubbas, basking in the 'burbs of Butcher Hollow (that's pronounced Holler, y'all).

That particular aggregation of not-so-formatically-correct businessmen, though diminishing ever-so-slowly over recent years, still represents an enormous volume of ad dollars that historically has been excluded from country radio stations.

Enter the Power of Country Radio Tour, a 21st Century Chautauqua with the highly specialized function of changing some minds about Today's Country. Charged with the mission of promoting country radio, and sporting a highly effective, education/entertainment agenda, the tour has already made significant inroads toward changing the attitudes of over 1,000 country-resistant advertising people in barely a year's time.

It's been a challenge, of course, but one that its director, Interep's Hank Mandel, seems to relish.

"The purpose of the tour has been to educate advertisers about why they should use country radio," explains Hank, who has been with the program since its inception.

"It helps the sales staff, and it helps the clients, the agencies, and the entire ad community."

—Mick Anselmo, VP/GM KEEY—Minneapolis

The Power of Country Radio Tour is the brainchild of the Interep Radio Store, who brought it into reality in New York in late '93. Highlighted by a Radio City Music Hall stage performance by Clint Black and Wynonna, it had an immediate effect on many of the invited members of the audience, including Mick Anselmo, VP/GM of KEEY-Minneapolis.

"It was a great evening for country music in New York," says an enthusiastic Mick. "So, when I got a call to become part of the '94 tour, we 'cowboy'd up,' as they say."

The '94 production kicked off at a CRB-hosted luncheon during last year's Country Radio Seminar. Keynoting the event was Reba McEntire, the tour's Celebrity Host for '94, who then launched it into a six-city touring mode of the midwest and far west—

Dallas, Detroit, Minneapolis, Chicago, Los Angeles, and San Francisco—armed with panel discussions and cogent presentations of demographic updates so vital to ad buyers.

"The buying community...really needed to be brought into the '90s, and I think the Power of Country Radio Tour did that."

—J.D. Freeman, GM, KZLA—Los Angeles

Among the highlights of the tour thus far has been the creative and promotion panel, with Tom Hripko, winner of the Mercury Award for his ad campaign ("We'll leave the light on...") for Motel 6, fronting a segment on the importance of radio creative. In addition there have been keynote addresses by Ed Benson, Executive Director of CMA, and Lon Helton, Nashville Bureau Chief for R&R, who discussed the power of country music and the power of country radio.

Target Stores, which has long since discovered country as a major force in popular music, had representatives in two of the cities offering presentations on some of their country radio campaigns in marketing their stores.

Each stop on the tour pulled together about 150+ buyers, planners, account executives, brand managers, and even some local retail clients. In most cases, those people who had already made up their minds that what country was is what country is. They were in for some surprises.

Rod Eaton, Director of Sales and Promotion for Target, participated in San Francisco and also attended the tour in Minneapolis, where, he says, many of the creative people in attendance had already stereotyped country as being "a southern, rural thing, and didn't think of it as metro, or an urban, hip thing.

"People in advertising are not necessarily country fans, or are coming to country kind of late," Rod explains. "A lot of them were pretty surprised at the magnitude of country radio and country music. [The tour] definitely had an attitudinal effect."

That effect continues to ripple out benefits on radio. "It helps the sales staff, and it helps the clients, the agencies, and the entire ad community," says KEEY's Anselmo. "It helps everybody see the format in a different light."

THE COUNTRY MUSIC DISC JOCKEY HALL OF FAME

For twenty one years, the Country Music Disc Jockey Hall of Fame Foundation has been the lone organization to pursue the specialized function of honoring those air personalities who have played an integral role in helping to develop country music's rich and enduring history.

The agency has been giving its awards since inducting its first honorees, Grant Turner (WSM), Eddie Hill (WLAC), and Nelson King, during the annual WSM Birthday Celebration in 1975. Hill and Turner tied that year for top honors in the living category, while King became the first winner in the posthumous category.

Since that time, an additional 33 individuals have been inducted into the Hall. At least two awards have been presented every year, with the exceptions 1986 and 1987, when none were given.

Of the two plaques made for each new Hall of Famer, one is given to the winners, or their families, while its duplicate is added to the growing display in one of the main corridors of the Opryland Hotel.

Voting for entrance into the Hall of Fame is handled by a nine-member board, of which four are new each year, while four rotate off. A minimum of 25 years in the country music industry is mandatory to qualify for the board.

Board members cast their ballots for three nominees that have made significant contributions to the development of both country music as we know it today and to the development of the careers of its performers. Anyone who wishes to initiate a nomination may do so, and nominations are open all year long.

The CMDJ Hall of Fame was conceived by trustee Chuck Cheilman in 1974, who also nurtured the project through its formative years. "Many radio personalities of the past," he says, "can be likened to national treasures. These are the people who blazed the trail for all of us who earn a living in the country music industry today."

The voting board boasts an impressive roster of industry executives, compiled over its two decades. One notable exception from the list is Hall of Fame originator Cheilman himself, who is prohibited from voting by the original charter of the CMDJ Hall of Fame.

Any industry member with a legitimate reason for inspecting lists of nominees, winners, past selection board members, etc. may do so at 1201 16th Avenue South, Nashville, TN.

1994 CRB Humanitarian Award

One of country music's all-time most successful performers, Garth Brooks was targeted at the 1994 Country Radio Seminar as the recipient of the fifth annual CRB Humanitarian Award.

Already becoming well-known for his generosity, Garth was honored for his philanthropic contributions to a seeming world of needy causes and charitable organizations, and for his open-handed posture that extends well beyond the glare of the publicity spotlight. In addition to, and perhaps far more telling than, his gifts toward the more structured, corporate charities are his quiet, and far more private acts of giving that sometimes come to light. In one example, the list includes the redirecting of a truckload of gifts from fans upon the birth of his daughter, Taylor Mayne Pearl, to various children's hospitals and charities in his vicinity. And the list continues.

In his presentation of the award, CRB President Ed Salamon stated, "While artists are often honored for their contributions to their art, Country Radio Broadcasters wants to ensure that they are also recognized for their efforts toward assisting the fellow man, as well as their selfless contributions to society in general."

The first CRB Humanitarian Award was given to Alabama in 1990, with Rosanne Cash being cited the following year. Willie Nelson was named winner in '92 and Charlie Daniels in '93.

It took four years for the Country Radio Seminar to build up its "client" base, from out of the country music marketing world of broadcasters and record labels, to the respectable level of 234 registrants. It took only one for CRS SouthWest to dash beyond that. Just one more example of the child outdistancing the parent.

CRS Rides Again, SouthWest Style

by Tom McEntee

Dallas was the site for the CRB's first ever road probe into the great southwest—sometimes known as the great grandparent-in-law to country music. And the shot was dead on.

Its immediate effect was to pull together a corps of 215 serious-minded broadcast and music executives from a seven-state area, plus another 30 panelists, sponsors, volunteers and staff, who converged late last August on the Harvey Hotel in Big D. They came to the first CRS-SW to crystal-ball a vague and slightly out-of-focus future for country music radio. After a day and a half most left with a lot more of both answers and insights, better armed for whatever was on the horizon.

The Son of CRS

The mostly regional group partook of a full helping of choice morsels from a well-rounded program. And no one went home hungry. The schedule was ingrained with all the key attributes of its parent, from cogent educational sessions (the DNA of CRS) to relaxed and informal presentations of Nashville's hottest export, country music, cut from the same cloth as the earliest New Faces Shows. There was even a generous helping of the informal, shoulder-to-shoulder co-mingling of country broadcasters and country music-makers that has always been a hallmark of the Country Radio Seminar.

As a garnish was one of the Seminar's brightest and most attractive attributes: business networking.

CRS SouthWest was the image of its parent from beginning to end. The event kicked off on Friday evening (Aug. 26) with a welcome reception for attendees, sponsored by Jones Satellite Network, and featuring entertainment by Warner/Reprise Records artist David Ball. Saturday morning began with a continental breakfast, sponsored by Shane Media, followed by an opening session that consisted of a performance by Orral & Wright (Giant Records). Then on to a full day of panels and educational presentations, dealing with a number of meaningful issues for today's country broadcaster, ranging from a close look at the modern country radio listener to legislative issues affecting broadcasters today.

CRS-SouthWest offered a plethora of appetite satisfying morsels for information-hungry country broadcasters, record labels and affiliated business persons. Presentations and educational sessions were in the forefront, of course, including this panel discussion, entitled "Radio, Labels, and Artists."

RCA's John Randall takes an appreciative audience through a musical interlude during the first CRS-SouthWest program. A number of Nashville's most promising new recording acts made the trip to Dallas, providing a perfect counterpoint to the seriousness of the day's business sessions.

A buffet lunch, sponsored by Tribune Entertainment, was also spiced with music. In this case, acoustic performances by Brother Phelps (Asylum Records), Susie Luchsinger (Integrity Records), and Jon Randall (RCA Records).

Hripko Leads Panel

Leading the top caliber lineup of panelists for CRS-SW was one of radio advertising's stellar names, Thomas Hripko, winner of the Mercury Award in '92 for his highly successful "We'll Leave The Light On" commercial ad campaign for Motel 6. Hripko fronted a session called "Commercials That Sell," and was followed by a number of the industry's top radio individuals and associated business reps. That lineup included Ann Arnold of the Texas Association of Broadcasters, who moderated "Legislative/Regulatory Issues," Maria Cooper Brunner of Insight Management, moderating "Radio, Labels & Artists," Charlie Cook and Bob Lobdell of the Cold Spring Harbor Group (and consultant for CMA), with a presentation called "The Country Audience Today." Broadcasters leading sessions included Jerry Frentress of KRMD-Shreveport, with "Building The Local Sales Staff," Dene Hallum of KKBQ in Houston, McNeill of McVay Media, presenters of "Programming Basics" moderating "Dealing With The FCC," and Katie Wellman of KAYC/KAYD-Beaumont, moderating the promotions panel.

A Musical Close

The closing reception was sponsored by the Interep Radio Store, with yet another musical showcase—this one featuring MCA Records' Terry McBride & the Ride.

Then, informality was the order of the day at the hospitality suites, which offered appearances by George Ducas (ABC/SMN suite), Rhett Akins (Decca Records suite), The Wiggins (Mercury Records suite), and Larry Stewart and Wade Hayes (Columbia Records suite).

Event sponsors also included the Country Music Association, FirstCom, Polydor Records, and Sony Music/Nashville.

The Country Radio Broadcasters' Board of Directors were also on hand for the event, taking advantage of the opportunity to meet with the large number of Southwest regional broadcasters in attendance.

Providing space for networking and sharing of ideas, a vital attribute of the Country Radio Seminar, has been passed along genetically to CRS-SW SouthWest (aka Son of Seminar). A group of conferees at left has no trouble getting into the spirit of things at the Dallas event.

CRS Exhibit Hall Takes It To The Next Level

by Valerie Hansen

In keeping with the overall theme of this year's seminar, the CRS Exhibit Hall is "Taking It To The Next Level." In this case, however, that's a literal statement as well as a figurative one. The Exhibit Hall will not only be expanding in size, it will also move to Ryman B convention center this year—to the right and down four steps from the old location in Ryman A.

"Moving the Exhibit Hall to Ryman B not only gives us room for more booth space," explains Dave DeBolt, Exhibit Hall Manager and Special Projects Director of the CRB, "but allows us to consolidate the silent auction and antique radio display in the same room as the exhibitors."

When booth space sold out two years in a row, DeBolt saw a need for expansion. However, he intentionally limited the increase to only 16 more booths (up from 100) to maintain one of the most attractive elements of the CRS Exhibit Hall: its intimacy.

"I've studied a lot of trade shows," DeBolt says, "and I think our convenient, medium size Exhibit Hall makes the CRS one of the most effective for the broadcast industry. For example, the CRS Exhibit Hall is open the same number of hours as the NAB, but we have 116 booths compared to more than 400 at NAB. That means that our exhibitors not only have a greater chance of being seen more than once by the registrants at CRS, but potential customers can locate the booths they're interested in more easily than at a larger show."

Communication is the whole point of CRS, and the Exhibit Hall facilitates communication on many levels:

- Registrants can see firsthand the newest in technology and promotional opportunities for the broadcast industry.
- Exhibitors interact with each other to share valuable information, not only about their products and services, but their displays themselves.

- The Hall provides a convenient meeting place for registrants to discuss business.
- The walk-around luncheon and cocktail reception are good opportunities to run into friends from previous seminars in a brightly lit room whose atmosphere is conducive to conversation.

The majority of exhibitors this year are repeats from previous years, which is a tacit statement about the effectiveness of the CRS Exhibit Hall. Some, like Tapscan and Radio Computing Service, are perennial CRS supporters.

Two of the first-time exhibitors this year will be impossible to miss: the Anderson Merchandisers' semi-truck-turned-performance stage and Measured Marketing's Airstream Trailer, which houses a mobile diner and promotional remote vehicle, will bookend the Exhibit Hall.

"Between our innovative exhibitors, the silent auction and antique radio display, the expanded CRS Exhibit Hall will be more attractive and dynamic than ever," DeBolt predicts.

The CRS Exhibit Hall will be open from 10:00 a.m.–6:00 p.m. on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday this year. Events and attractions in the Exhibit Hall will include:

- Seminar registration on Wednesday, 10:00 a.m.- 6:00 p.m.
- TNNR-sponsored Walk-Around Lunch on Thursday, 12:00-2:00 p.m.

Bill Boyd

"All of us in country radio should be grateful to Bill Boyd for helping create a larger audience for the music we program, through his successful television productions and his work with the Academy of Country Music."—Ed Salamon, President, Country Radio Broadcasters

It's been said that it was difficult to differentiate between Bill Boyd and the Academy of Country Music. That it was almost impossible to think of one without the other. For almost three decades Boyd maintained a deep hands-on involvement in that organization, and served as both its President and its Chairman of the Board. And in '81 he was named Executive Director, a position which he held up until a few short weeks ago, when he died at his home of a massive heart attack.

Boyd left behind a legacy that few behind-the-scenes promoters of the genre of country music are likely to surpass. A legacy that ties directly to all of the major events in ACM's history, becoming a common thread running from its earliest years to the present, and perhaps on into the future. And it strings together his direct involvement in virtually every new step, or area of growth within the 3,000-member organization.

"I don't know if the guy ever took a vacation," says legendary broadcaster and publisher/producer Cliffie Stone, a member of the Country Disk Jockey Hall of Fame, as well as a longtime associate of Boyd's. "Bill devoted his entire life, all the time I knew him, to country music. I'm telling you, the guy was involved. He was like a bulldog. He'd hold on to something and not let go of it."

Beginning his involvement with country music during a stint with Armed Forces Radio, he conducted over 1,000 on air interviews with every top name in country music. The relationships he formed during those years became the foundation for a career that made him a major figure in the business of country music—especially on the West Coast.

"He was the number one man in this whole area," muses Cliffie, himself a major force in the West Coast country music scene. "Because we have no Grand Ole Opry. The Academy of Country Music has been the only real thing—real consistent thing—we've had out here."

Equally difficult to separate were Bill and his widow, Fran, who still serves as Executive Secretary of the Academy. Both became involved in the late '60s in what was then the Academy of Country Western Music, and remained deeply involved in its operation ever since.

"The great thing about them is that they were fans," suggests Stone, whose own involvement with the Academy also goes back to its embryonic stage. "And in the beginning they worked for nothing, working to fulfill the dream of promoting country music."

Bill helped organize the first taping and syndication of ACM's annual awards show in 1972 and was a prominent force in bringing the show to television in 1974, making it the more attractive to the network by convincing country artists to perform for free.

He was also a force in establishing the ACM Celebrity Golf Classic, which to date has raised some quarter million dollars for the T.J. Martell/Neil Bogart Memorial Laboratory for cancer and leukemia research, and the American Heart Association. And he pushed hard to establish FanFest, which debuted last year at the L.A. County Fairgrounds. (Starting with FanFest '95, the event will henceforth be dedicated to Bill's memory.)

He served as talent executive or consultant on almost 50 TV specials in the last 15 years, including among others, Willie Nelson's Farm Aid, The Golden Globe Awards, The U.S. Magazine Awards, Lou Rawls Parade of Stars Telethon and, for the past 29 years, The Academy of Country Music Awards, as well as the NBC-TV series Hot Country Nights.

Boyd is quoted as expounding, "Country music is in better shape today than it's ever been." And those around him say it's in no small part due to his efforts.

One of his dreams was to have the Academy build a retirement home for country artists, similar to that of the motion picture industry.

Bill is survived by Fran, as well as his daughter, Shari, and his son, Bill Boyd, Jr. In his memory, donations can be made to the Bill Boyd Memorial Fund, c/o The Academy of Country Music, P.O. Box 508, Hollywood, CA, 90078. The fund will be used to further stimulate the growth of country music.

John Katzbeck

With barely an inkling of country music in his storehouse of attributes, John Katzbeck was not the likeliest candidate for air personality work on a country station, let alone a choice to become one of the most-listened-to country morning personalities in the U.S. Yet he would ultimately become both, as part of one of the Windy City's favorite morning teams, J.D. and the Katman.

Last October, with five years involved as half of that team, the Katman died as a result of a brain aneurism.

After being hired by WUSN (US 99) as roving reporter, Katzbeck "went to school" on country music, attending concerts, promotions, and other station events, learning everything he could about the genre. "He really got into it," remembers his eventual morning team partner, J.D. Spangler. At length, the station united the two, and the morning team of J.D. and the Katman was born. An excellent musician, John played saxophone and became a skilled parodist. His song lampoons would become a station staple.

The morning show was ranked 18th in the ratings when J.D. and the Katman debuted, and over the last three years Arbitron ranked them as high as number two, and always in the Top Five. "In all the places I've worked, nobody did I enjoy working with more than him," said Spangler.

The pair, accompanied by 1,000 listeners, celebrated their fifth anniversary at a party in a local nightclub with Joe Diffie. The next day he suffered a brain aneurism at home, and a week later he was dead.

After his death, the station held a sold-out benefit concert to aid a trust fund established for his widow, Leslie, and 7 month-old son, Maxwell. The event was headlined by Billy Ray Cyrus and included Rick Trevino, David Ball, Mark Collie, and Neal McCoy. An album of several Katman parodies was introduced the night of the concert. The concert raised over $200,000 in ticket sales and over $25,000 in album sales.

Scott Parker

Scott Parker joined the Great Empire Broadcasting chain in the late '80s, working his way from air talent to program director of the company's Omaha outlet, WOW, a position he held for the past five years.

After a short battle with spinal meningitis, he died on December 30, 1994.

Nebraska-born, Parker studied broadcasting at Brown Institute in Minneapolis, and from there joined the world of radio at WCKL in Catskill, New York. Returning to his native state of Nebraska, he went to work at KOGA in Ogalala, where he rose from air personality to program director.

He also worked in North Platte and Grand Island, as well as at KHAK in Cedar Rapids, and in '88 he joined Great Empire Broadcasting. WOW newsman Joe Nittler, who worked with Scott for a number of years, says that his working relationship was "like watching a little brother grow in the business."

A reserved individual, he spent most of his spare time in gardening and handiwork on his home. Former Country Radio Broadcasters Agenda Director Gene Bridges hired Parker as an air personality at WOW/FM and made him his assistant.

"I was pleased to see him named program director when I moved on. Scott had a really smooth, comfortable on-air delivery and was quiet, soft-spoken, positive influence on the radio station.

"I had a great deal of admiration for Scott and was heartbroken to hear of his death. Country music radio has lost a wonderful friend and an excellent programmer."

Parker is survived by three children, a mother and father, two brothers and a sister.

Jeannie Ghent

Anyone who knew Jeannie Ghent, from her years as a record promoter for ABC/Dot or her tenure as publicist for the Mandrell Sisters, will always remember her gentle, caring manner. It's a quality too often missing in the rough-and-tumble music business. On August 1, 1994, Jeannie lost a five-month battle with cancer and passed away in her Nashville home.

Jeannie began her music business career in 1971 as an assistant to Larry Baunach, vice president of Sales and Promotion at ABC/Dot Records. It wasn't long until she had earned a promotion to national promotions coordinator for the label, a position that brought her in contact with radio broadcasters across the country. A few of the artists whose careers benefitted from her presence at ABC/Dot in the seventies included Roy Clark, Joe Stampley, Tommy Overstreet, Donna Fargo, Freddie Fender, The Oak Ridge Boys and Barbara Mandrell.

The Mandrells recognized Jeannie's promotional and organizational talents and hired her to head the publicity department of Mandrell Management in 1982. Jeannie remained in this position for the next 12 years, becoming much more than a publicist to the Mandrell family.

"Mr. and Mrs. Mandrell often said she was like another daughter," commented co-worker Kathy Gebhart. "Words cannot express how greatly she will be missed."

Wayne Edwards

Wayne Edwards enjoyed a colorful, multi-faceted, 30-year career in the music business that included stints as a radio DJ, performer, record promoter and artist manager. Tracy Lawrence and Clay Walker were two of the artists he developed. He had just begun working with another young singer when he became ill last September and died a month later, on Oct. 2, 1994, of heart arrhythmia.

Wayne began his career at WMQM radio in his hometown of Memphis, Tennessee, in the sixties. While at WMQM, he became friends with Sun Records' Dewey Phillips, an association that opened the door to Wayne's brief career as a performer, during which he opened for Jerry Lee Lewis and Elvis Presley.

In 1975, Wayne was hired as Southwest Regional Promotion man for RCA Records. He remained with RCA until 1983, when he left to work with his wife, Johanna, in her company, Big Country Promotions.

Wayne moved his family to Nashville in 1987. Three years later he met Tracy Lawrence, began developing his career, and continued to manage him until last June. Wayne also managed Clay Walker for a short time and was instrumental in getting Walker signed to Giant Records and in landing his first #1 record.

Betty "Mama" Gibson

It's doubtful that there is a program director working in country radio for more than a year who hasn't gotten a call from Betty Gibson at one time or another over the last two decades. Affectionately dubbed "Mama" Gibson by the industry she called home since 1971, the seasoned record promoter died on October 27, 1994, of pancreatic cancer at the age of 66.

"Mama" Gibson paved the way for women in the field of record promotion. She began promoting records on independent labels at a time when their position in the industry was no less competitive in terms of charting records than the "majors." After getting her feet wet with Prize Records in 1971-72, she went to work for Cinnamon Records in 1973 as national promotion director. During that time, Narvel Felts enjoyed his first hit, "Funny How Time Slips Away," under her direction.

From 1974-1989, "Mama" Gibson handled national promotion for Nationwide Sound, where she worked with her husband, Joe. Among the artists who had their first hits promoted by "Mama" in the seventies were Gene Watson, Con Hunley and Ruby Falls. As the eighties dawned, an unknown group called Alabama hit with a little song "Mama" promoted titled "My Home's In Alabama."

by Valerie Hansen

“He was way ahead of his time, with respect to country radio, and that manifested itself in the success of WMZQ.”—Bill Figenshu, President, Viacom Radio

Paul Wilensky

In 1988, the Country Radio Broadcasters board of directors voted to waive a stipulation in the bylaws calling for an individual to have served at least two years on the board to be eligible for nomination to the presidency of the organization. The unusual move was made in order that they might elect a particularly bright and forceful station manager named Paul Wilensky to head the organization, even though he had only one year in grade. Prior to that election to the presidency he had also served for a year on the Agenda Committee, helping to plan the 20th annual CRS.

Paul died on January 2, this year, after an exhausting battle with AIDS.

He prepared for his broadcasting career at Montgomery County Junior College, followed by Towson State University in Maryland, and American University in Washington, where he studied communications. He landed his first job in radio at WMZQ, in his home town of Washington, D.C., and eventually took over as station manager. His success with that outlet was such that, at 29, he became the youngest vice president at Viacom Radio. It was during that same period that his peers in the country radio and music industries elected him to head CRB.

“At a crucial point in the organization’s growth,” notes CRB’s current president, Ed Salamon, “the Country Radio Broadcasters were fortunate to benefit from the same leadership that made WMZQ so successful in Washington.”

In 1990, in the middle of his tenure in that office, he accepted a position with a non-country station. When he moved to San Francisco to take on the role as GM at KDBK/KDBQ, also known as Double 99, he regretfully resigned from the CRB board.

It was not long after taking over the reins of the San Francisco outlet that he became severely ill.

Paul was noted for his activity in community projects. Especially those concerning the homeless and the hungry. And he was known for giving unstintingly of his time to work in shelters and in relief kitchens. He also organized a number of food and clothing drives, including the “Come in From the Cold” project, but his greatest efforts were focused on the fight against AIDS. Toward that end he was responsible for organizing and producing several major fund-raisers for local support organizations. In 1993 he was heavily involved in producing a program on the wall in Washington, D.C., dealing with the unveiling of the NAMES Project AIDS Memorial Quilt; AIDS Awareness Month; the AIDS Walk and an AIDS Dance-a-thon.

He is survived by his two sisters; his foster parents, and his foster brother, and his partner, Jim Gutschick.

Vic Willis

Vic Willis, the youngest and last surviving member of the legendary Grand Ole Opry trio, the Willis Brothers, died in a one-car accident on Sunday, January 15, 1995. Mr. Willis, 72, was returning from his godson's funeral in Mississippi when his car ran off the road outside Hohenwald, Tennessee.

With his brothers Guy (1915-1981) and Skeeter (1917-1976), Vic Willis began his career on KGEF radio in Shawnee, Oklahoma, in the thirties, when the boys were calling themselves the Oklahoma Wranglers. The trio, with Guy as the front man, Skeeter on fiddle, and Vic playing accordion and piano, went on to The Brush Creek Follies on KMBC, Kansas City, Missouri, and the Midwestern Jamboree on WLW, Cincinnati.

Their star was just peaking over the horizon when WW II intervened. All three brothers joined the service for four years. Vic was injured during the Normandy invasion on D-Day, 1944, and was awarded a purple heart and a bronze star for his bravery.

When Vic reunited with Guy and Skeeter as the Willis Brothers in 1946, the trio hit the ground running. That year they became members of the Grand Ole Opry, were hired by Fred Rose to back Hank Williams on his Sterling Records studio recordings, and became Eddie Arnold's back-up band. The Willis Brothers stayed with Arnold until 1953 and, during that time, made country music history by being among the acts for the first country concert held at Constitution Hall in Washington D.C., formerly a venue solely for classical music.

The Willis Brothers left the Grand Ole Opry in 1949 but returned in 1960. During the sixties, they recorded a handful of charting singles on Starday Records, including their only Top Ten hit, "Give Me 40 Acres (To Turn This Rig Around)," in 1964.

Following Skeeter's death from cancer in 1976 and Guy's retirement, Vic formed the Vic Willis Trio and continued as a popular Opry entertainer right up to his death. In addition to performing, Vic Willis was active in other areas of the music business as well. He managed the Starday Music Catalog, chaired the Association of Country Entertainers for 19 years, and served as secretary of the American Federation of Musicians, Local 257, for 13 years.

Mr. Willis first joined the union in 1946 and became a member of the Local's executive board in 1974. One of his accomplishments through the union was the formation of the Nashville Association of Musicians Emergency Relief Fund.

"Vic was a soldier for his country and a soldier for the Nashville musicians," commented Musicians Local 247 President Harold Bradley. "Now he's a soldier for the Lord."
