() Denotes loss.

(*) Of this amount $1.4 million was reported as incidental broadcast revenues including revenues from providing functional music or other special services.

NOTE: In view of the difficulty in a joint AM-FM operation in allocating FM operation expense separately from AM station operation expense, licensees of such stations were not required to report FM station expense separately. As a result, FM industry totals for expense and income are not available. AM-FM licensees, however, were requested to report separately the revenues, if any, attributable to FM station operation.

Civil Rights Breakthrough Ups Interest in Negro Newscasts

By
HARRY NOVIK
General Manager
WLIB, New York

HISTORY-in-the-making and broadcasting became closer associates last year. Civil rights, and the tragedy of November 22, took the medium far beyond the realm of an entertainment, educational or informative field. To the realization of the world, the industry became an indispensable part of modern communications.

In some instances, this awakening was even more apparent to Negro-oriented stations like our own WLIB in New York; for the stepped-up tempo of the civil rights movement brought the general broadcaster into an area he had never really explored before. The Negro-programmed station which had been servicing the Negro community suddenly had a formidable competitor in its own backyard.

The breakthrough undoubtedly began with the coverage of James Meredith's enrollment at the University of Mississippi. Suddenly, the Negro story was news of primary interest and concern to all Americans. Until this time, general broadcasters had handled Negro issues largely in a cursory manner. Usually the only presentation on Negro matters was in the form of "highlights."

To get a more detailed view on the events of the day related to himself, the Negro had to turn to Negro-oriented stations. It was here that the news was more than just ripped off the wire and read. The Negro-programmed station was the Negro's only source of "complete Negro news coverage."

Civil rights legislation, the March on Washington, and Birmingham changed all this. Coverage of these stories by general broadcasters was complete and thorough, surely a magnificent job. Man-on-the-street interviews were more than fair, and the wrap-up stories were handled with sensitivity and respect.

As a result of this coverage, there is no doubt in our mind that large numbers of the Negro populace now listen to and watch this type of general broadcast programming.

But for the thoughts and attitudes on Negro issues which the general broadcaster does not provide on a continuous basis, we find that the Negro community is now turning in even greater numbers than before to stations which program specifically to these needs, creating an even greater empathy between the Negro and the responsible Negro radio station than before.

This coverage also has resulted in the Negro's becoming a more knowledgeable and critical man. Negro leaders, too, have grown in stature and readily understand and seek broadcast time for the attainment of their goals. We have requests for "special time" more than ever before, and the Negro community is "tuning in" in greater numbers to hear the thinking of its leaders.

Today and in the years ahead, this is the responsibility of the Negro-programmed stations to their listeners: To provide their larger audiences with daily intelligent in-depth news coverage of Negro issues which the general broadcaster offers mainly during times of crisis. In addition, this daily news coverage should be supplemented with the interpretation and analysis which the Negro community can get nowhere else. To this end, stations like our own and other responsible facilities are increasing their staffs to meet the need.

ETV Advances in '63 Presage 'Unprecedented' Future Growth

By
WILLIAM G. HARLEY
President
National Assn. of Educational Broadcasters

NINETEEN sixty-three was the single most important year in the development of educational television for two important reasons: It was the culmination of years of effort to provide federal assistance programs for the development of educational TV facilities, and it marked the turn of the UHF tide (in which education has two-thirds of its reserved channels).

Through private initiative and public support nearly one-third of the channels originally reserved for educational purposes were operating by the end of 1963, and the weight of this evidence convinced federal legislators that educational TV was not primarily an entertainment medium for the educated, but an important and soon-to-be-integral part of the American educational enterprise. The authorization by the Congress of $32 million in matching funds for ETV facilities in several states will significantly speed the nationwide development of educational TV.

Nearly half the states in the Union now have active educational TV commissions seeking the financial support and facilities which will make it possible for millions of students at home and in school to receive educational materials previously unavailable to them. Over nine million persons interested in home correspondence study testify to the widespread interest which adults have in continuing education programs, and TV will contribute both to expanding this interest and to satisfying it. Some 30 million people are regular viewers of educational TV and this audience will continue to expand as more stations are added to the several dozen now in operation.

An action by the Congress related to the federal ETV assistance act is the "all-channel receiver legislation," which requires that TV receivers shipped in interstate commerce after April 30, 1964, must be capable of receiving both UHF and VHF channels. Because the majority of ETV reservations are located in the UHF band, many stations operating on these frequencies have had to limit their broadcasts to schools and other specialized receiving points because receivers were not widely available among the general public.

Although it will take five to six years before most homes are equipped with all-channel receivers, the fact that most receivers sold after April of this year must be able to receive UHF as well as VHF will make a significant improvement in general audience potential for educational TV.

A gift of $5 million from the Ford Foundation to the National Educational Television Center marks an important milestone for the improvement of ETV programming. Financial assistance from the U. S. Office of Education for development of instructional TV libraries is also an indication of the growing interest in TV for educational purposes.

In 1963 the National Association of Educational Broadcasters presented the FCC with a computer-based Assignment Table which provides more channel assignments, not only for education but for commercial growth as well. That table is now under consideration by the FCC.

With the impetus afforded the movement by the infusion matching funds and the requirement of all-channel receivers, the year 1964 has proved to be one of unprecedented growth and outreach for educational television.
