BROADCASTING BASEBALL SCORES

We can't all go to the baseball games when our home team plays, but we all wish to know the results as soon as possible.

This interest in baseball extends far beyond the cities where the big league teams play, and in every little village the scores are awaited anxiously each evening. Even in the most isolated places, where the daily paper doesn't arrive until the next day, there is a general interest in baseball.

Radio broadcasting makes the scores public almost as soon as they are made. Many times the scores are known a thousand miles away before the spectators have all left the grandstands.

The farmer's boy, coming in from his work in the fields, can get the complete story of the big leagues long before the baseball extras are on the streets of the city. The tired business man can sit cosily in his easy chair at home, with cool breezes from an electric fan playing around him, and get the baseball results by radio.

We even know of one or two business offices where receiving sets have been installed to get the results by innings. We shouldn't be much surprised to hear of some of our farmer boys having portable sets for the same purpose.

Thus radio broadcasting is performing a great service to those interested in our great national game.
