Our "Poor" Forefathers

How the folks back in 1776 would have celebrated the adoption of the Declaration of Independence, if they had had radios as we have them now and the glad tidings could have been broadcast all the way from Georgia to New England!

As it was, very few of the people knew anything about it for a long time, those in adjoining colonies to Pennsylvania not getting the news for weeks and the most remote colonies not hearing about it for months.

Communication was almost impossible and the PEOPLE WERE STRANGERS to one another.

When George Washington set out from Mount Vernon to attend the first Colonial Congress at Philadelphia, it took him three days to make the trip, and when the members set out from Boston, it was a journey of weeks, and when the patriots came up from the Carolinas and faraway Georgia, it was a matter of weary months.

Communication Slow

And all the time these rugged forefathers were on their way, they knew nothing of what was happening in front of them or behind them, save as they met fellow travelers who handed them news which was very stale.

Even as late as the war of 1812, as you may possibly recall, Andrew Jackson fought and WON THE BATTLE OF NEW ORLEANS several weeks AFTER THE WAR HAD BEEN ENDED by the treaty, signed at Ghent.

In our day, a senator from the Pacific slope flies to Washington in twelve hours, one sixth the time it took Washington to ride horseback from Mount Vernon to Philadelphia and whereas Washington while en route wondered what was going on, THE FLYING SENATOR from the Pacific slope is IN CONSTANT COMMUNICATION with the world by the radio on the plane which bears him above the clouds.

Before the adoption of the Declaration of Independence there was great indecision on the part of the members of the Continental Congress because they did not know how the people back home felt about the idea of severing all ties with England.

In our day, the radio would end all their doubts in a few minutes.

And when the actual voting occurred, several members declined to cast their ballots because they were bound by instructions, issued one year before!

Essential to Government

One can appreciate the utter lack of anything like a united public opinion when one remembers that members were not willing to vote for independence without positive instructions, though actual warfare had been going on for more than a year!

In other words, REPRESENTATIVE GOVERNMENT IS IMPOSSIBLE unless the representatives can know what the people want them to do and WITHOUT MEANS OF COMMUNICATION they cannot know.

If Radio had been here in revolutionary times, the Declaration of Independence would have been adopted without any delay and in all probability before 1776.

All of the sessions of the Continental Congress were held behind closed doors and all were enjoined to absolute secrecy, and this led to an amusing incident.

One of the delegates from Georgia was suspected of being a traitor and charged with divulging the proceedings to British sympathizers in Philadelphia, whereupon he was accused but denied the charges and immediately disappeared.

The rest of the members of the Congress believed he was hurrying back to Georgia to tell the British governor everything, so another member of the Georgia delegation started after him on horseback, but before either of them reached Georgia, the people of that colony had chased the British governor to a ship off shore.

If there had been any radios at that particular time, it would not have been necessary for the loyal Georgian to chase the disloyal Georgian, for with one broadcast, people would have been on the alert, all the way from Philadelphia to Savannah.

There was a lot of drama in the SECRET PROCEEDINGS of that gallant band of colonists, who did not hesitate to pledge "their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor" when THEY SIGNED THE CHALLENGE which meant war with the greatest nation in the world.

Sage Overlooks Something

The oldest of them was Benjamin Franklin, and the fact that there were no radios then was due entirely to Franklin, for he had done all the inventing for the colonies and most of the inventing for the rest of the world, but somehow he overlooked Radio.

Throughout the sessions of the Congress he did much to keep the spirits of the members high, for he had a rare sense of humor. He was particularly fond of Thomas Jefferson, the tall, gangly mountaineer of thirty-three years who had written the Declaration of Independence.

He comforted Jefferson during the sessions of the Congress as the members made changes in the Declaration.

JEFFERSON WAS A GENIUS with the pen, but he was no speaker and during the consideration of his Declaration he did not utter one word in its defense!

This work he left to John Adams, of Massachusetts, who had a choice vocabulary and A LIBERAL SUPPLY OF ORATORICAL LIGHTNING!

How the country would have rocked with laughter if the radio could have brought them the incident of the flies from the near-by stable which bit the statesmen through their silk stockings that hot summer day and caused them to hurry to a conclusion.

Humor Not Lacking

And how the colonies would have cheered when John Hancock signed his name to the Declaration and said: "Now gentlemen, we must all hang together" whereupon Benjamin Franklin replied: "Yes, we must all hang together—or we shall all hang separately!"

Nothing better than that will ever go out over any radio!

And how the widely SCATTERED MILLIONS WOULD HAVE THRILLED as the old man in the steeple of Independence Hall rang Liberty Bell and the people sang and shouted and the cannon boomed forth the birth of the Republic!

And yes, after the war was on in earnest, how the fighting Continentals would have been aided by radio!

As it was there was little or no unity of action; each army operated independently, knowing little or nothing of the fate of its comrades, and the country knowing little or nothing of the desperate straits to which Washington was reduced when he advanced twenty thousand dollars of his own money to carry on the war!

Had the people known, it would have been a different story.

Should we have another war, RADIO WILL BE ON GUARD!

Radio Goes to Jail

By Warden Lewis E. Lawes
Of Sing Sing Prison

By Exacting Payment-in-Obedience for the Privilege of Tuning-In On World Events, Warden Lawes Has Accomplished Wonders with His Convict Charges

Radio nowadays is helping to heal the warped and twisted minds of penitentiary inmates. Modern prison officials, by permitting prisoners to listen to music and other carefully selected forms of radio entertainment as a reward for good conduct, are teaching increasing numbers of life's moral derelicts to "play the game" with society. Consider the recent heavyweight championship fight as an example of the virile, clean programs that are helping convicts to reform:

The thrilling news poured out of the microphone, bringing a glow of appreciation to the ears of thousands of listening prisoners. The cells stirred restlessly as the announcer's voice cascaded over the wires, announcing to this shut-in world that a new heavyweight champion had been crowned.

For weeks the prisoners had been looking forward eagerly to this moment. As a general rule programs are announced only a week in advance, but knowing of the tremendous interest in the hearts of the prisoners for this sporting event, I had informed them far in advance that, barring unforeseen occurrences, they would be allowed to listen to the fight.

In my estimation the use of radio in prisons is one of the greatest forward social movements of the decade. It is a privilege tremendously appreciated by the prisoners and serves more effectively than any other medium in re-shaping their twisted lives.

Radio keeps their minds active and away from the hooding, bitter thoughts which usually eat out the hearts of prisoners.

Before the use of radio became a feature in Sing Sing, I waged a bitter fight here and in Albany between two widely separated factions—those who believed in over-pampering convicts, and the hard-boiled old school which believed implicitly in an unduly severe course of prison routine. The latter group was horrified at the mere suggestion that this latest offspring of science be employed in an effort to rehabilitate the unfortunate debtors to society. The former group, over-zealous in their efforts to obtain legislation favorable to the prisoners, took the other extreme and fought for an unrestricted use of the airways.

It took many patient hours of bickering before I was able to reconcile these two factions and mold the present radio system now in use.

A master receiving set has been installed in the east wing of the institution. It is from this spot that the programs are tuned in and out. All the cells except those in the death house where the corridors are equipped with loud-speakers have been wired with earphones. Through this medium it is possible to control all programs perfectly. Surprisingly enough, the doomed convicts, with the shadows of death relentlessly stalking through their cells every moment of the day, appreciate this human gesture. Radio, more than any other influence, helps to distract their minds from the ticking of the clock which inexorably dooms them to a scheduled fate. The only time that the reception is culled out is when an execution is scheduled. The turning on of such tremendous bursts of electricity at such times makes radio reception well-nigh impossible.

Thus, when a prisoner pays the supreme debt to society, the cells are cloaked in a deep silence.

Gerald Curtin, a young teacher and former college man, is in command of radio in Sing Sing. Curtin, who is Director of Entertainment, each week selects a well-rounded program of broadcasts, subject to my approval. These program lists are printed and distributed among the prisoners, thus giving them a line-up of the week's broadcasts.

The basis of selection is one of construction and entertainment value. All crime broadcasts and any reference to sex, are strictly taboo.

The broadcasts which most greatly interest this city of incarcerated souls are the news summaries. The tidings and events of the outside world are awaited avidly each day. This, of course, is easy to understand. Picture, if you can, the emotions of these men as the daily dramatic events of the world are brought to their ears—events, perhaps, which have occurred in their own states, possibly their own cities.

Sporting events, too, enthrall the interest of the prisoners. Major fights, such as the Baer-Carnera bout, and world series ball games, are the most cherished and prized events.

A case for the psychologists, perhaps, is the prisoners' interest in all organ recitals. The soothing tones of this gentle musical instrument seem to penetrate and soothe the savage instincts of this motley army, among which are included murderers, thugs, thieves and strong-arm boys of the lowest strata of society.

Warden Lawes, one of the country's leading criminologists

The radio orchestras also have tremendous following here in Sing Sing. The men are rabidly partisan, and occasionally heated debates are heard in which the respective musical merits of Paul Whiteman and Abe Lyman are compared. Wayne King, Little Jack Little, Jack Denny, Vincent Lopez, Ben Bernie and Rudy Vallee are other maestros who command favorable followings.

The use of radio in Sing Sing is a matter of privilege. Naturally, the convicts have to pay some price for the possession of such a cherished bounty. The asking price is a matter of obedience.

Prisoners who break rules, become surly and unruly and otherwise are unmanageable, do not participate in the use of the cell earphones. As a general rule several days of enforced radio silence make them docile and eager to comply with all the regulations of the institution.

I am happy to relate that since this system has been in vogue, the morale and behavior of the prisoners has rocketed skyward.

Since radio arrived in Sing Sing, fear has vanished almost entirely from the breasts of the inmates. Fear of harsh treatment has been allayed in the souls of these men. Even a rat, cornered, will fight like a lion, but happily all this has been more or less abolished by placing radio on a payment-by-obedience plan.

The social benefits attached to the use of radio in prison are tremendous.

It brings these outlawed souls closer to the outside world. It affords them immeasurable satisfaction in knowing that they are listening to the same type of program as are folks at home.

It serves to keep their minds active and on an even keel.

They are permitted to hear the greatest interests for good—music, timely and educational debates, world events, and the learned opinions of the world's great minds.

In short, due to the tremendous benefits of radio, they emerge from the confinement of prison walls with just that much more chance to be a benefit to society as a whole.

Unless they are beyond reclamation, inmates prove that months and years of listening, earphones clamped to ears, absorbing all the influences for good and decency, have not been wasted.

The cost of equipping and wiring the thousands of cells has been tremendous, but all in all the expenditure has been worth while. I know of no other entertainment and educational medium that could make a better return in reclaimed souls.

As Warden of this prison I am extremely proud of the achievement of radio here. Sing Sing was among the first institutions to try the experiment. Since then many other penitentiaries have followed suit, with similar favorable results.

The results achieved in reclamation are beyond the monetary calculation. Only a Higher Power can balance the books.

The question most frequently asked by persons outside radio probably is: "How do you get on the air?" Frankly, I don't know any formula, but perhaps the experience of an obscure Western singing team which goes under the name of "The Kings' Men" will answer the question better than I might. Here's the story:

Several weeks ago, Paul Whiteman was called to Denver by the sudden and serious illness of his mother. He made the trip hurriedly, and remained by her bedside until she was out of danger. During the time he was there he did as most radio stars do—idly he turned the dials of the handiest radio set.

One day—the day before he started East—he tuned-in a little local station. He never even heard of the station before. But before he had listened for two minutes, his ears were glued to that loudspeaker, and he listened with raft attention until the program signed off.

"You have just listened to 'The Kings' Men,' the announcer intoned, 'and this is station—'"

Whiteman jotted down the name of the team and the name of the station, on the back of an envelope. When he returned to New York, he wrote to the station in question and asked them to send him recordings of "The Kings' Men." The recordings arrived, and Whiteman listened. He had the members of his hand listen. They agreed that "The Kings' Men" were sensational.

"You'll be amazed!" he told me the other day. "Wait 'til you hear these boys. They'll be stupendous."

So next week Jack Lavin, representing Whiteman, will hop into a plane at Newark airport, and twenty-four hours later, if all goes well, the signatures of "The Kings' Men" will be on a Whiteman contract, and the boys will be packing to come to New York and big time radio.

That's one way to make the grade.

BEST LAUGH OF THE WEEK:
Ed Lowry's short, which played last week at the Radio City Music Hall in New York, is called, (could it have any significance) "Curing the Ham"!

JUST BY WAY of proving that a big name does not make a radio program, here is a startling piece of information that leaked out to one of my operators, despite frenzied efforts on the part of a sponsor to keep it quiet:

Since Al Jolson left the NBC variety program, which he built up during the past winter for a well merited vacation, the popularity of the program has risen sharply and steadily in the Crosby report—generally accepted as the most reliable barometer of listener appeal.

Now do not misinterpret what I write—I am not seeking to belittle Jolson, for everyone admits that he did one sweet job last season. But what happened was that the sponsor's effort to strengthen the program during his absence just happened to hit that elusive target—public interest. The program has been going over big.

Tough luck it is for Jolson, though, because when he returns he will be limited to a couple of song numbers only. The sponsor, with the favorable reports that have been received, does not want to upset the present balance of the show—not even for a Jolson.

JOE PENNER wanted to go abroad this summer. He knew he'd have a radio vacation, and if he could only get away from the vaudeville stage, he planned to sail overseas and see Europe. Besides, he reasoned, an ocean voyage would be a swell tonic after a tough season such as he's had.

He got a vacation from radio all right, and he arranged his vaude bookings so that the European trip would be possible. But then popped up a Hollywood movie offer that was too tempting to turn down—so the European trip was called off.

However, Joe managed to work in the ocean voyage anyway. When he returns from the vaudeville engagement he is playing in Washington, he will spend four days shopping and attending to other personal details in New York, then board a boat for the trip to the coast by way of the Panama canal. You might gyp Joe out of the trip to Europe, but nobody is going to do him out of that ocean voyage he promised himself. His mind is made up to that.

WHEN TIM RYAN and IRENE NOBLETTTE and their cast showed up at NBC for their "Going to Town" program the other Saturday night, they were notified that their broadcast would be cancelled so that NBC could air the adjournment of Congress.

This was the situation at 9:30, but at two minutes before ten NBC learned that Congress wouldn't adjourn after all.

Pages rushed frantically after Tim and Irene, but they had left the studio, and so had the cast, so a studio orchestra had to fill in the half hour period from 10 to 10:30.

AT THIS WRITING negotiations are being made for Paul Whiteman to put on a lavish full hour sustaining show over the NBC networks on Saturday night . . . Clara, Lu 'n' Em will take a month's vacation from the other waves starting early in August. Incidentally, the girls will guest star on the Palmolive show Tuesday night . . . Feenamint will not pick up their option and return to the air with George Gershwin . . . Maestro Jack Berger is presenting a new vocalist, Jimmie Harkins, on his NBC broadcasts . . . Due to the illness of *W. C. Fields is to be added to the cast of the West Coast show. However, Ted Fiorito's band will make the music . . . Signing of Block and Sully for the Autumn by that gasoline company means that the pair of comics will not be part of Eddie Cantor's stock company when he returns to the air next fall . . . Joe Cook again postponed his departure for Hollywood—until August . . . Beatrice Fairfax fades from the air June 30, but it is likely that the adviser to the Lovelorn will return in the fall . . . Reviewing Radio

By Martin J. Porter

From the week's mail comes a letter from Jacques Renard on his birthday:

"Dear Mike: I have read quite a lot this week about Dr. Willem van de Wall and his CBS broadcast, in which he demonstrated the effects of various types of music on the human mind—the same therapeutics that young David applied by playing his harp for the very blue king, Saul; the same remedy that Farenelli, the singer, applied to King Philip V.

"All of that is very true. But another cause of apathy in the radio audience, the same that causes discontent and indifference to entertainment, is the habit-forming propensities of listeners. I know in my own circle of acquaintances many people who follow a set routine every night, listening to the same things over and over—and subconsciously feed themselves up on radio.

"They might refresh their minds occasionally, and enjoy radio far more, if they went a-hunting and turned the dial for a fresh listen now and then. Why don't you and the RADIO GUIDE start a crusade in this connection?"

A MISSIVE from Paul Whiteman came also last week:

"Dear Mike: I heard Will Rogers the other night, and was not only amused but given food for thought when he pointed out that only a small percentage of listeners associate their favorite features with the sponsor's product. Rogers' own oil and gas, for instance, often may have been confused with the same type or products sold via the Ed Wynn route.

"I'm sure no listeners are deliberately careless about this, but it is only fair for them to make the proper identifications. I know that Rogers is right in his contention, for I have a trunkful of letters written by members of the audience, who congratulate me on 'my composition' of the 'Rhapsody in Blue,' which of course was written by George Gershwin. Many of them even offer to supply lyrics for it."

A NOTE from Frank Black is added to the week's receipts:

"Dear Porter: Maybe I should send this to Ripley, but then I know you better, and know you will take my word for it that it is absolutely true. All last week a woman has been applying to me for auditions. She claims she is a baritone. On every visit to the studio she wore a veil. When I heard her sing, I was forced to admit she was a baritone, but not a good enough one for radio. Who do you think she turned out to be? The hearded lady from a circus, so help me!"

FROM Jack Arthur came this:

"Dear Mike: Many times I have read your stuff when you got up on your hind legs about song plagiarism and copy-cat stuff. I don't want to discourage you, but I think it is interesting that in Vienna there has been a standing offer of $25,000, for ten years, to the song-writer or composer who can produce eight bars of original music. Although thousands of manuscripts have been submitted to the administering board, no one has been able to cop the prize. Everything so far submitted, has been traced back to some earlier work."

Scene in the Death Valley that comes to listeners' homes by radio

"Death Valley" Scotty's castle, a palace fit for a king built amidst desert waste

Death Valley Gems

It isn't often that an author has a chance to argue with the very characters he writes about—but Ruth Cornwall has just done it. She returned recently from a trip to California's romantic Death Valley, where again she met—and disputed with—those real, sun-dried prospectors whose names and true stories she writes into her "Death Valley Days." Her program has been broadcast weekly for the past five years and is heard each Thursday at 9 p. m. EDT on an NBC-WJZ network.

"The desert does something to those people," says Miss Cornwall: "something that seems to make them wise, and patient—and darned good story-tellers!" From them, she collected scores of new, true tales through which these dwellers of Death Valley link the modern world of radio to the roaring days of the old West.

"It's a man's country, with comparatively few women," said this slim, good-humored young woman who writes about it. "And for the most part, the desert women who are there work right along with the men. For example there is a woman prospector called 'Happy Days.' What her real name is, I don't know—and I doubt if there are many people who do. Her partner is a man—'Rocky Mountain' George. Together they go off prospecting for a month or two, working together just like two men. 'Happy Days' can pack a burro, shoot and work as well as any man. And when George shaves—which these desert men usually do two or three times a week—it's hard to tell which is which!"

To call one of these sun-wrinkled individuals a "fine drinking man" is to pay him the supreme compliment, Miss Cornwall says. And men still tell, with a grim humor that's as hard and lean as their bodies, the story of Jack Dent. Jack was a gambler—a good man, square shooter, and deep drinker. From one end of the desert to the other he was known as the man who wanted to die drunk. He repeated this wish whenever he was drinking, and at many other times. "When my time comes, I want to pass out cock-eyed," Jack used to say.

One Fourth of July, a bunch of the boys had a binge in the town saloon—and Jack, for once, didn't hold his liquor very well. In fact, he slid to the floor and snored, till his drinking companions lifted him to a pool-table, and stretched him out there.

But they weren't content to let poor old Jack lose out on the party. "He's a good fellow," they said sentimentally, so whenever a general round of drinks was downed, someone would take a bottle of beer, prop up Jack's head, put a funnel in his mouth and pour the beer into his throat.

When morning came, Jack was cold and stiff—and drowned! They had poured the beer into his lungs.

Naturally, the boys were very sad, till one of them said: "Poor old Jack—we'll, anyway, he got his wish. He died drunk!"

Why do people live in the desert? "You wonder why, when first you go out there," Miss Cornwall tells. "But after two or three weeks you feel the charm of the place stealing into your blood. The sun, the silence, and the vast amount of room make the spell of the desert no figment of romantic fiction, but a strong, steady pull from which it's hard to break away. Many men have gone in for just a short stay—and stayed for life. It's an utterly different world. You'd think you were on some strange, bare planet, closer than ours to the heat of the sun. Someone who looked at the mountains, the salt and borax marshes and the twisted masses of brilliant rock, once said that it seemed as if nature had thrown a fit when this part of the earth was created! "There are very few fat people there; for the most part, the sun has sucked every drop of surplus moisture from their bodies. Their wrinkled necks are pleated like accordions, and deep wrinkles draw in the corners of their sun-bleached, far-seeing eyes. Their speech is slow, their words few—BUT anyone who regards them as freaks or oddities, or who tries to talk down to them, is due for a shock—for though their skins are dry, their wit is drier, and there is nothing they love so much as putting a bumptious tenderfoot in his place."

Johnny Mills, prospector, once had the job of guiding a visiting English nobleman around Death Valley and its environs. "But what did you call him, Johnny?" Ruth Cornwall asked, next time she saw him. "Did you call him Earl, or Lord, or what?"

"Well," Johnny drawled, his face a humorless mask,

"most generally I called him 'Lord,' but once in a while I forgot, an' a-dressed him as 'St. Peter.'"

Some months ago, in an interview, Miss Cornwall described Johnny Mills as a "raconteur". A copy of the magazine in which this statement appeared, found its way into Johnny's hands. "What's this word mean?" Johnny would inquire, as for days afterward he wandered up and down the valley with the magazine. But nobody knew. Nobody in or around Death Valley could tell Johnny Mills what Ruth Cornwall really meant when she called him that funny word.

"Say," he said to her, the first time he saw her during her recent visit to the Valley. "I think you're a friend of mine." Miss Cornwall insisted that she was. "Well then," Johnny went on, "what's this you called me?" And he produced a battered tattered copy of the magazine. "Oh, that means 'story teller,'" Miss Cornwall explained. "You mean liar?" asked Johnny. "Oh, no," was the answer, "I mean that you tell a good story." Johnny looked relieved. "That's all right then," he said, "but it sure had me worried for awhile. Why d'ye suppose people use big words like that, when smaller ones'll do just as well?"

Gallantry is the keynote of life in Death Valley, Miss Cornwall says. Life is hard there, and courage is needed to live it. And everybody, all the time, talks about making a strike—finding a mine. "It's in the air—it's in their blood—and pretty soon it gets into yours!" Miss Cornwall exclaimed. "After you're there about a month, you find yourself making up your mind that you, too, could find a mine, just as well as anybody else!" And with gallantry (Continued on Page 29)

Love Affairs of Myrt and Marge

Myrtle Vail, the "Myrt" of "Myrt and Marge," ran away from home at the age of fifteen to go on the stage. Her daughter, "Marge" of the famous air team, ran away from school during her fifteenth year because, as she wrote her mother, "I've decided to be like you are and go on the stage" . . .

Myrt's life with her husband, George Damerel, embraced a series of theatrical triumphs. They invested their savings in real estate, and suffered terrific losses with the depression. Their marriage tottered with their finances.

Marge married Jack Griffith. They had a son but the marriage didn't last. When Myrt's enterprise had landed her and Marge on the radio, Marge was free of matrimonial entanglement.

Then she met Gene Kretzinger.

He did. He seemed to know all about her. And he was not only good to look at. He was nice! This much Donna decided that first afternoon.

The rest came later, almost a year later, after Donna had received the final papers in her divorce from Jack Griffith.

Meanwhile, she saw him frequently at the studios. Several times, when a singing part was needed for "Myrt and Marge," Gene Kretzinger joined the cast as Gene Glenn.

In the spring of 1933 Myrt and Donna went to Hollywood to make their talking picture "Myrt and Marge." They visited young George, whom Myrt had sent to California to attend an exclusive military school and be near his father. They also saw the older George. That meeting crystalized certain ideas with which Myrt long had struggled. George Damerel was succeeding on his own, just as she was on hers. The team of Vail and Damerel irrevocably was split. Was it not better for both of them to break up also the team of Myrtle and George?

Yet she hesitated. The children adored their father. And a union of such long duration and so many happy memories is precious even in retrospect.

The picture "Myrt and Marge" was based on Myrt's radio program—two actresses in and out of difficulties, out of difficulties and into romance. Somehow Myrt was not particularly proud of that picture. But it played to enthusiastic audiences in every talkie palace throughout the country.

Donna stayed on in California for part of that summer, but Myrt hurried back to Chicago. She must be ready when the program opened again the following August. And she had a new idea. Why not give Myrt and Marge the additional appeal of a strange and exotic setting? Mr. Wrigley was impressed with the plan. He insisted that the locale should be first-hand and authentic.

With Bobby Brown, her director, and Mrs. Brown, Myrt set sail early in July for South America. That trip was one of the thrills of Myrt's eventful life.

Scarcely had the good ship Southern Prince steamed out of New York harbor, than the Salt Water Investment Company was formed in anticipation of a long, and possibly a dull, voyage. Its sponsors were Bobby Brown, John Hegeman, builder of Radio City, and "Dr. Seuss," the Ted Guisel who is responsible for the weird insects which adorn the bug-exterminator ads and pages of the comic magazines. They canvassed the passengers, sold shares at three dollars apiece and with the proceeds provided a varied program of entertainment throughout the trip. One of their first investors was Mrs. E. M. Gilmer, "Dorothy Dix" to the lovers, and first prize for the masquerade party went to a man in an umbrella, a bed-sheet and dark glasses, representing—three guesses—Mahatma Gandhi!

The Southern Prince sighted Cape Frio on July 27. Myrt and the Browns passed ten days in Rio de Janeiro, went on to Buenos Aires, Sao Paulo and Santos.

Strange people, strange customs, remnants of a dim past and landmarks of a history that is unfamiliar yet significantly connected with our own—all of this she saw. It was all new and exciting, rich copy for Myrt's busy pencil and cherished notebook!

Her biggest thrill, however, came when the party crossed the Andes. Myrt must fly across. The Andes loom 25,000 majestic feet in height, and the weather was none too propitious. But Myrt must fly, nevertheless. The Browns, not being so inclined, embarked on a Trans-Andean train and promptly were snowbound in Mendoza, Argentine, a tiny town in the foothills, which seems to make its living from just such misfortunes.

plane. One of her companions was Dorothy Dix, also out for the adventure of this trip. Gayly they started. High winds they encountered, air pockets as they rose over the foothills, and then snow. More snow. The plane was forced down in a tiny town nestling in the mountainside. Mendoza! And lo, here were the Browns to greet her! That was a laugh!

For a week they endured Mendoza, shut in by snow and icy erags, far from the rest of the world. For amusement they made a regular morning trip to the railway station and airport.

"Any chance of getting out?"

"Tomorrow!" Always tomorrow.

When the weather did clear, Myrt once more stepped aboard the plane. Would she let a snowstorm scare her out of the biggest thrill of her life? Not Myrt!

The Browns were told their train would leave at seven-thirty the next morning. It left at seven-twenty. But for their eagerness to depart, which brought them to the station some minutes early, they would have had another week in Mendoza!

The weather was not yet ideal for flying—always treacherous, the atmosphere over those superb 25,000-foot peaks. Several times it seemed they must seek refuge again in the unfriendly bosom of the great mountains. But they made the crossing. The excitement and terror of that trip Myrt put graphically into one of her recent scripts.

West of the mountains she awaited the Browns. Together they saw Montevideo and Santiago, Chile. They progressed up the coast, took a transport through the Panama Canal and so returned by way of New York, Late that August, when "Myrt and Marge" again went on the air, listeners began to relive that trip with the two actresses.

And Myrt found herself confronted with a new chapter in that continuous drama going on away from the footlights and behind the microphone: Donna and Gene, two stars of radio, already blessed with success, looking together toward a future beyond depression, and very obviously falling very much in love with each other.

Did Myrt's thoughts turn to George Damerel in those days made bright by the reflected happiness of Donna? Toward the young George whom she had loved at sixteen, yes. But only to show her anew what she must do.

Donna was married to Gene Kretzinger on December 30. The crowds, gathered in front of the People's Church, on Chicago's north side, tried to make it a spectacular wedding. But they did not succeed. A few friends were there. Young George, sixteen years old and resplendent in uniform, had come from California to see his big sister get married. The Four Norsemen sang. Dr. Preston Bradley, whose sermons are broadcast each Sunday morning over WBBM, performed the ceremony. Immediately after, Donna's cousin, Evelyn Karrar, was married to Gene's brother Charles. A quiet, decorous wedding: four young people launching a new life with the new year.

The only spectacular thing about it was the sight of Donna walking slowly down the aisle on her mother's arm. Gray eyes and brown looked steadily, hopefully forward. Two good troupers enacted one more scene in the real drama behind the microphone. Myrt and Marge!

Of what was Myrt thinking as she walked that church aisle? Of the joy of youth, the beauty of love, the happiness that results when love can share work and success as well as kisses?

Two months later Myrt filed suit for divorce against George Damerel. The charges were desertion. She asked for no alimony, only for custody of their son.

The team of Vail and Damerel, once a combination to thrill theater-goers with anticipation and swell box-office receipts, was no more.

Ask Myrt about it. She will smile with pity at your lack of understanding. "There's nothing to tell," she will say. "We're still excellent friends. No, there's no other romance in the offing. I do not intend to marry again."

And she will add, her smile lending her words significance: "You must remember, George is still my children's father." Even the hectic processes of divorce procedure, even the fact that the greater part of the width of a continent divides them, cannot minimize the importance of this aspect of the team of Vail and Damerel.

As soon as their program was off the air for the summer, Donna hastened out to California to visit her dad. She returned only recently, and husband Gene journeyed out to his native Kansas City to meet her and accompany her the rest of the way back.

And now that his military school is out for the summer, young George is to leave California and visit his mother in Chicago.

Meanwhile Myrt is having a real vacation, the kind of a vacation she has long vainly imagined for herself and never before realized. South American tours are all right, too, Myrt will admit, but after all there's nothing like just staying home and putting up strawberry jam.

Her mother is spending the summer with her, and the apartment near Lincoln Park may be somewhat crowded when young George joins them, but Myrt doesn't mind.

Week-ends you have to accept invitations to visit these friends at this resort and those friends at their country place, but in between you are free to lounge around at home and try out new recipes.

And plan new scripts.

You can't take leisure in straight doses when you're in Myrt's profession. You don't want to. It's part of the vacation, planning the stories in which Myrt and Marge will return to the air next October 1.

The next chapter in the absorbing serial "Great Loves of Radio Stars" will be devoted to the romantic career of Morton Downey, the Irish lyric tenor who started life as a railroad "candy butcher" and became a foremost radio favorite over night.

Who Shall Be Queen?

Election of the Queen of the Air for 1934 is by Readers' Choice. Have YOU Cast Your Vote?

in full from the time she entrains for New York until she returns to her home after her coronation.

The dower rights of a Queen will go with the coronation! In addition to her transportation, Radio Guide will defray all the expenses incidental to a golden round of entertainment, as well as hotel accommodations for the Queen. The expenses of her traveling companion also will be included in the generous budget which Radio Guide has appropriated for the visitor.

From the four corners of the country the stream of votes already has started to trickle into the office of Radio Guide. For the next nine weeks an augmented staff will be busy tabulating the votes so that the identity of Her Majesty, Queen of Radio, 1934, will be revealed in time for the Exposition's opening.

The ramifications of the contest are simple. Here is how the Queen will be selected:

The 229 newspaper radio columnists of the country have been invited by Radio Guide to submit for nomination names of radio performers on stations in their vicinity. Each columnist may submit as many names as he wishes. There is but one qualification, namely, each nominee must have been a regular performer on a

Nominee Maxine Marlowe, the CBS star heard every Wednesday

The far-flung Radio Empire is preparing to do homage to its Queen!

Radio Guide's search for Her Majesty, the Queen of Radio for 1934, is well under way toward a smashing climax.

There are thousands of radio stars, but Radio Guide's Cinderella Slipper will fit but one dainty foot. Whose will it be?

Will she hail from some little town and station to be wafted on golden wings into instant fame and fortune? Or will she be some established favorite?

THE REGAL RULER OF THE RADIO ROOST, 1934, MUST BE FOUND IN THE NEXT NINE WEEKS!

The coronation of the new Radio Queen will take place in all its pomp and splendor at the National Radio and Electrical Exposition, New York, next September.

She will be there because you have put her there. She will be there by popular acclaim.

This is not to be a dictatorship!

In the past, Radio Queens were placed on precarious pedestals by a minority group of individuals, which in no way reflected the wishes of the nation.

Thus, for the first time, THE VAST ARMY OF RADIO GUIDE READERS AND FANS WILL HAVE A DIRECT HAND IN SELECTING THE RADIO QUEEN OF 1934!

RADIO GUIDE BELIEVES IMPLICITLY IN THE INTELLIGENCE OF THE RADIO FANS!

As the official publication of the National Electrical and Radio Exposition, Radio Guide has been entrusted with the task of discovering the Queen of Radio and bringing her to New York for the coronation.

Hundreds of thousands of the faithful will witness the triumphal coronation. The officials of the Exposition are planning a stupendous round of honors for the new Queen. As the regal guest of Radio Guide, her expenses, and the expenses of a companion, will be paid radio station for three months prior to June 1, 1934.

In addition to the columnists' nominations, individual balloting on the part of radio listeners and readers of Radio Guide will constitute a nomination. However, every candidate nominated by readers must receive at least ten listener-reader votes, cast on the ballot provided on this page. No candidate will be considered a nominee until ten votes have been cast. The ten votes will be counted in her total of votes.

Each week the nominations will be announced in Radio Guide. At this point individual selection ceases. From then on the selection of the Radio Queen rests solely on the collective shoulders of the Radio Guide audience. Her Majesty will be a ballot queen elected by votes which bear the ballot signatures of her subjects.

Rudy Vallee's Recent Success in the Star of Stars Election Makes Him a Timely Choice for "The Doctor's" Character and Vocational Analysis

The photograph of Rudy Vallee from which "The Doctor's" analysis was made. Hear him Thursdays, NBC-WEAF

Rudy Vallee!—Here is a man, a gentleman without conceit and without love of power. I know that many people have called him conceited; but his photograph tells another story, when analyzed properly.

Mind you, there is a vast difference between conceit and self-esteem. Conceit is based on ignorance. Self-esteem is self-confidence in knowledge possessed. Mr. Vallee does have self-confidence, though not at all one which a man very much less of a celebrity would develop in similar circumstances.

The mental trait which has made Rudy Vallee his intuition; his instinctive sensing of what the public wants and the way in which it could be presented most pleasingly. His intuition, large as it is, operates all the better because it is not in constant conflict with a high love of power and self-esteem. His personal feelings are really very shy. He has deliberately developed showmanship. I rather imagine that he sometimes now finds himself miserably lost in a maze of unpleasant but necessary exploitation.

In all faces the index of intuition is found in the nose, on the sides, down toward the base. There are many faculties in the nose, and necessarily they must all be small. But they are easily read when you know how. Notice those fullnesses on Mr. Vallee's nose, along the side, down toward the base, working down toward the tip.

Now, Rudy Vallee is artistic; yet he is also a good business man. Yes, he is an artist; that is self-evident. But he has considerable executive power. And that power helps him in the handling of the men in his orchestra, and in the many business deals which he necessarily must conduct. He has great endurance, without which he could never stand the numerous performances and continuous rehearsals which are requisites of his daily routine. He has a strong vital tendency, and this at times can overshadow his good judgment. Often he allows his emotions to rule his reason.

With all of his engagements, he finds the energy to do many thoughtful and helpful things for others. There are many such cases, which Mr. Vallee chooses to carry out unsung and unpublicized, just for the satisfaction of helping those in need. This tendency has detracted from Rudy Vallee, the business man; but has made him the human, lovable philanthropist—artist and gentleman.

The one thing which is most damaging to the competent character-analyst is the person who has a mere smattering of the subject, yet believes he knows all about it. Such persons go around attempting to read character, when they are wholly incapable of such a practice. They make the mistake of classifying all people as belonging in a certain place on a picture chart, and have the temerity to "analyze" their associates after ten minutes' study of the subject.

It is impossible to look at a man, say he has a concave or convex face or something equally as general, and immediately place him in a certain class, giving him all the attributes which your chart tells you that class should have.

I could give such inadequate lessons in my radio programs, telling people how to read character and find certain qualities in their own and their associates' faces; but that little knowledge is dangerous, and is worse than none at all. The only practical method is to trust your character reading to someone who is sure of accuracy—and to forget about generalization.

Following are some of the facts in Rudy Vallee's career, which in the main are exemplification of the tendencies and traits found in his face:

Rudy Vallee has one god and that god is the God of Knowledge. The crooner-maestro never goes off on a tangent; never attempts to develop half-baked ideas or futile ambitions. But when he desires to master a task, he doesn't rest content until his endeavors have been crowned with success.

He is a tireless taskmaster. Go to the men in his musical organization for proof of this statement. Some of his rehearsals have stretched to twelve and fourteen hours, long after other bandleaders would have thrown in the towel and gone off to look for relaxation. The reason for his untiring efforts at rehearsals is obvious—he hates slipshod work. He is the man to be satisfied, and his exacting nature demands perfection.

Oddly enough, Rudy achieved his first success in England. He quit Yale in 1926 to accept an offer from the Savoy Hotel in London, where his personality and his talent won for him the plaudits of the English and the applause of another exacting person, H.R.H., The Prince of Wales.

Returning to America, he astounded his friends and musical associates by turning his back on music. His ambition to increase his mental agility and his knowledge prompted him to return to Yale, where he received his degree two years later.

Armed with the Yale diploma, he returned to New York and music but this time his reception consisted largely of setbacks. He tried to sell himself and his band, but there were no takers.

The curly-haired Maine youth from Yale finally managed to get himself a spot in the Heigh-Ho Club. The management engaged him with some misgivings regarding music but with none, they thought, regarding his singing. His first contract stipulation was that he was to stay away from the megaphone and confine his endeavors to leading his musical organization.

With the Vallee determination, however, Rudy convinced the manager that he had "something on the ball," and the manager finally consented to permit him to try his voice. So a crooner was born.

A small station thenceforth carried the music to the outside world. After the first broadcast, telegrams, letters and phone calls began to arrive. Here was a new era of vocal rendition. Rudy's story is history.

Vallee's tastes and his quiet, unassuming character are reflected in his dress. He usually wears dark, conservative suits and coats.

Hits of Week

The musical tastes of the nation's bandleaders are as changeable as the sands of the desert. The song "All I Do Is Dream," far down in last week's bandleaders' list, made a rapid climb to head the current week's listing. The number "I'll String Along With You," while relegated to the runner-up position in the bandleaders' selections, jumped into the lead in the list of songs played most often on the air.

The weekly tabulation compiled by RADIO GUIDE is as follows:

Theme Songs that "Click"

"In the Modern Manner," that program of sophisticated music presented under the direction of the talented and versatile Johnny Green, is ushered into the consciousness of the radio listener to the theme tune of Green's own original composition. "In the Modern Manner," you must know, makes its how to the airwaves every Friday from 9:30 to 10 p. m. EDT.

In the search for a theme song, a director-pianist-composer such as Johnny Green could hardly be expected to go further than his own works; especially since they have won the praise of exacting critics of modern music. The Green theme, therefore, was chosen from his own "Night Club Suite" which bears the somewhat ponderous sub-title, "Six Impressions for Orchestra with Three Pianos."

"Night Club Suite" was written more than a year ago. It was inspired by Paul Whiteman and written at the instigation of the famous and rotund maestro who has long been an exponent of modern music that is almost revolutionary. Since its composition, "Night Club Suite," with its descriptive fantasies and musical humor characteristic of scenes at a fashionable mid-night-supper rendezvous, has won widespread popularity.

It is a vigorous composition of six impressions titled as follows: "Linen and Silver," "Ladies and Gentlemen," "Table for Two," "Dance on a Dime," "Tango at Midnight," and "Corks and Bubbles."

The theme for "In the Modern Manner" is the love theme from the "Table for Two" impression. While the theme is robustly romantic, it lacks an impression of rowdiness evident elsewhere in the composition, notably in "Corks and Bubbles."

The "Night Club Suite" has been received enthusiastically by audiences of the radio networks. Paul Whiteman's orchestra played it as a feature of his gala program in Carnegie Hall on January 25, 1933. He played it again, later, at Symphony Hall in Boston. It was made a part of an important concert in the famous Lewisohn Stadium in New York City last summer. It has been received with acclaim by audiences wherever it was played.

Meanwhile, its fame has spread, along with the fame of the young conductor. The British Broadcasting Company's Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Stanford Robinson, performed the suite recently for the English radio audience with gratifying response.

The highlight of the career of the composition was achieved when three impressions from the suite were dramatized on the initial "Voice of Columbia" program recently. The dramatization featured Georgie Jessel as the young East Side, New York, artist, and Francesca Lenni as the debutante. Their tangled love-affair, under discussion at a night-club table, is straightened out finally as the now husband-to-be orders champagne for the club, and the orchestra concludes with the "Corks and Bubbles" impression amid the crashing of cymbals and the popping of corks.

Of such prodigious effort was Johnny Green's theme song born.

From the torch songs of "Three's a Crowd," the Broadway hit that starred Fred Allen, Clifton Webb and Libby Holman, to the performance of a work by the most discriminating symphonies in the country, was the road traveled by the tunes of Johnny Green. But whether it was the glamorous Libby throatily chanting "Body and Soul" or the first violinist of the Philharmonic carrying the melody, the musical notes of the Green compositions made a hit.

Open Door to Beauty

By V. E. Meadows

A base cream is not a vanishing cream. It is not a cold cream. It is not a tissue cream. It is a greasy cream, very thick; and it has a color. I mention all this to make a correction in what I said recently about base creams. The correct color of base cream and the correct color of face powder combined should match exactly the color of the skin, giving life to the skin if necessary, or subduing where necessary.

Base cream is the most important product for the protection of the skin. If put on in sufficient quantities for the length of time you are going to be exposed to the sun, it will prevent painful sunburn, horrible freckling and excessive and badly advised tanning of the skin.

Many women feel that they cannot use a base cream because they have tried various kinds and have always found their faces to be spotty or flaky, looking much as if their face powder were put on in spots. They also find that when they perspire, their makeup becomes spotty and their faces seem to have films around them.

This is not true if you get the right kind of base cream. It is also necessary for you to apply it correctly. First your face must be washed with soap and water to remove any surface oil or any application of cream that might have been put on the night before. The face must be made wet with skin tonic and then the base cream applied. As stated previously, it should be applied in six dabs—one on the forehead, the nose, the upper lip and the chin, and one on either cheek. Keep your hands wet with skin tonic and spread from the center of the face outward in either direction. I would like to warn you that the base cream is the foundation of your entire makeup and it must be applied smoothly.

The skin tonic helps this greatly.

After you think you have it on perfectly, look between the eyebrows, around the bridge of the nose, on the upper lip and on the chin. See if there is not a little excess cream. If there is, smooth it out, still keeping your hands wet with skin tonic. Your face should feel just a trifle moist and also a little sticky after the base cream has been applied. If you are going to be in the sun all day long, on the beach or in a boat, I suggest that you put on a very much heavier coat of base cream than you would ordinarily, and pat your face powder on quite a little heavier. You won't look so well but you certainly will be protected.

If you have been so unfortunate as to have allowed yourself to sunburn, or if any of your children or your husband have become sunburnt, I want you to think first of your base cream and apply it liberally to the sunburnt skin. Within fifteen or twenty minutes the fire will be gone, and in at least 65 per cent of the cases the skin will not peel but will tan.

For the naked arms for summer protection I suggest that you use finishing lotion. This can also be applied to the legs while bathing as it will not come off in salt or fresh water.

Again let me warn you: If you are going to be in the sun for a long time, put your application of finishing lotion on a great deal heavier. Many people think it is a grand idea to go out in the summer time and get sunburnt, and some light blondes get the idea that a sun-tan makeup is becoming. First I do not think that a great deal of sun at one time is good for anyone. I am a firm believer in outdoor sports, lots of fresh air and a certain amount of sun; but not all at once.

I also believe that it is very much to your advantage to be your own type. That is, do not ever try to make up lighter or darker than you naturally are. It is always artificial looking and very bad taste.

Inasmuch as this article is one that grows out of the difficulties of keeping beauty unmarred in summertime, let me definitely warn you about your hair. I know that the average person takes less care of the hair in the summer than in the winter. Too much sun on the hair will discolor it very badly.

The regular shampooing of the hair is necessary every two weeks, and the regular brushing every day. The setting of the hair with a wave-set tonic such as I have described to you, non-gluey, non-alcoholic, is absolutely essential, for the hair dries out quickly in the summertime.

If you go in bathing and your hair gets wet, it is mighty bad for you, especially if you go bathing in salt water. The hair will have to be rinsed out with clean water, non-salty, after a soluble olive oil shampoo.

Your hair must be dried with towels each time it gets wet. This last statement does not give you a license to go in swimming and get your hair wet every day. I would much prefer that you attempt to keep your hair dry by the use of hair bands and caps rather than get it wet at all.

The following will answer a few of the numerous questions RADIO GUIDE readers have asked:

Q. Please advise me how to get rid of wrinkles. I have them under my eyes, and around my mouth.

A. I wish I knew. Many things are claimed to remove wrinkles. But since they have been formed by the break in the muscles under the skin, the skin merely is conforming to these indentations. I know of nothing, massaging or the application of any cream, that will remove wrinkles from anyone's face, as disappointing as it may seem.

The Dish I Like Best

By Bill Baar—"Grandpa Burton"

My favorite dish is Holland Fruit Soup—yes, Holland Fruit Soup. Most of my friends never have heard of it, and so far as I know, the recipe never has been written, but I like it, anyway. Maybe it's because my parents were born in Holland.

Here is the way my mother makes it: Wash three table-spoonfuls of coarse barley and then boil slowly in three quarts of water for an hour and a half. Stir often.

Then add a small cup of dried prunes, a cup of apricots, a half-cup of seedless raisins, three tablespoons of brown sugar and a small glass of claret wine. Boil it all together for half an hour until it reaches the proper thickness. That's all.

It may be enjoyed either hot or cold, and once you try it, you'll want to head for Holland—or did some one say in the opposite direction?

Radio Road to Health

By Doctor Shirley W. Wynne

House Fly Pests and Their Menace to Health, Makes Doctor Wynne's Topic One of Seasonal Importance

Charming Mary McCoy, photographed recently with her favorite pet. Doctor Wynne has something to say about dog bites in summertime. Miss McCoy may be heard any Saturday night over an NBC-WEAF network

We give a cordial welcome to the warmth and brightness of the summertime. But we must post a "not at home" sign to the flies and mosquitoes. They are pests. They are carriers of disease. They are dangerous, even though they look harmless enough.

Swat the fly and mosquito and save your health. House flies are born in filth, live in filth and feed on filth.

The average fly lays about 120 eggs at a time and may lay several times during the summer. The adult female fly lays her eggs in organic refuse, and it takes from ten to fourteen days for the flies to be born.

If you were to examine the common house fly with a magnifying glass you would see that the insect is covered with hairs and bristles which easily entangle dirt, dust and bacteria.

The fly alights on bad food, garbage, refuse, decaying material, rotten fruit and tainted meat. Anything used by a sick person will soon become the fly's camping ground if rigid cleanliness is not observed.

Flies are responsible for carrying many diseases, including typhoid fever, diphtheria, measles, scarlet fever, chickenpox, smallpox, infantile paralysis, summer complaint. In a typhoid fever epidemic in Chicago, typhoid germs were found on five out of eighteen house flies lurking near the sickroom. Fifteen per cent of the cases in an army camp in 1898 were believed due to house flies.

If the flies are kept out of the sick room and yet proper disinfecting methods are not used, flies alighting on objects coming from the sick room may carry the disease.

Some time ago an experiment was conducted in

New York to discover the relation between the presence of flies in the house and the presence of summer complaint in infants. The results proved that almost twice as many infants exposed to flies were attacked by the complaint as were attacked among those children who were kept carefully protected from fly invasion.

Screening, fly traps, poison and a diligent search and removal of breeding places, are measures to be employed in fly elimination.

Screen your home in a thorough manner with wire screening.

Keep your garbage can covered.

Always clean your garbage can thoroughly after it has been emptied by the collector.

Keep several fly swatters on hand and use them diligently.

Guard the children. Protect them with netting while they are sleeping.

Keep your food covered. Wash all fresh fruit thoroughly. Disinfect all material that comes from a sick room. Remove all organic filth and bury it properly if you have no other means of disposal.

Remove the fly menace to health!

Here are some of the questions propounded to Dr. Wynne by readers of RADIO GUIDE:

Q. Is cauterization necessary in the case of dog bite? In other words, are all dog bites dangerous? A. If the dog is known and can be kept under observation for signs of rabies, the violent treatment is not necessary, provided the dog shows no sign of having contracted the disease. If, on the other hand, the patient has been bitten by a stray (Continued on Page 23)

The Child's Hour

By Nila Mack

The Director of All Children's Programs for CBS, Devotes Her Attention to the Highly Strung, Tense Child

The nervous, high-strung and intense child is one of the major problems of child psychology. In the rearing of children there should be no room for this nerve-consuming and vitality-sapping condition.

High-strung parents many times beget children with the same fault. When such cases are presented, it takes months of loving guidance and care to relieve this unhappy tension. Unless corrected, it may lead to decidedly unbalanced behavior later in life.

Many parents note this condition in the early stages of the child's life, and instead of commencing immediate corrective measures they over-indulge the child, or perhaps take the opposite path of harping on tiny nerves that are already stretched to the breaking point.

It has been most interesting to me to note the defense mechanism employed by intense children. Outwardly, defense mechanism would seem to have no part in child life, but children are more cunning than most parents realize.

In a child this defense mechanism is harder to analyze than in a grown-up. We sort of expect it from grown-ups and make allowances for it, but alas, parents can't seem to fathom the depths of their own children.

I have in mind one little girl who has been with me for about four years. This tot so successfully employed her defense mechanism that for more than one year I had her catalogued in an absolutely wrong channel.

For more than a year she held herself aloof from the other children. Cold and reserved, she displayed none of the ordinary play and herding characteristics of most children. She was grumpy, and would fly off the handle at the slightest pretext.

Finally, I decided to stage a scene from "Romeo and Juliet," and selected this unruly child to play the part of the tragic heroine of the story.

The child's emotion and depth astounded me. True, the portrayal was a bit off balance, but the zest and vim for the make-believe role amazed me.

It was really one of the happiest moments in the tot's life. For the first time in her career she had responded to a corrective treatment.

At the conclusion of the play she came to me voluntarily and thanked me for letting her take an active part in the playlet. Her enthusiasm was really and truly spontaneous. Never before had the child addressed me in any but a touchy, aggrieved manner.

It was then that I discovered her amazing defense mechanism. The little lass had adored me so much that she hadn't dared talk to me for fear that I might have discovered her affectionate nature. The play was the vital spark that tore her defense mechanism to shreds.

Even now, after all the years that we have worked and played together, there is no outward show of her sincere affection for me.

I have formed a nice understanding with the child. Occasionally, after I have allowed her to do something that has pleased her particularly, she will run up to me and kiss me hastily. She then attempts to hide for days, as if ashamed.

I send her to camp every summer, and usually she takes her departure in a matter of fact fashion. Then the letters start, and each missive is more cordial and responsive than the last. Finally, her letters contain a few kiss marks—but we never mention this to each other once she returns. Even a chance remark on my part would be fatal to the results.

A child such as this need not fear a distorted nervous makeup later in life, provided parents heed Miss Mack's advice

Your Grouch Box

Your likes and dislikes in radio are very important. Radio leaders strive constantly to smooth out the rough spots which cause listeners to develop radio grouches. But broadcasting still is the baby of the arts—therefore many radio faults are still to be corrected.

Will you help to free the air of flaws?

If something in radio annoys you, send your criticism to Your Grouch Box, in care of RADIO GUIDE. For if some practice or method in radio irritates you, the chances are that it bothers thousands of other listeners, too—and by stating your grievance frankly, you not only will get your grouch "off your chest"; you may be instrumental in getting the cause of your grouch off the air, besides.

"More old-fashioned music!" this fan demands.

Dear Editor: My pet peeve is lack of old-fashioned music on the air. Every time a nice, good, old-time program gets under way, and I get my mind made up to enjoy it, they take it off! Or else they put it on at such an hour at night that nobody can hear it, unless they stay up half the night. And anyone who gets up at six o'clock every morning and works hard all day, doesn't fancy staying up till midnight.

If they would only take some of the orchestras or other junk off! I think they might let us have one old-time program a day, anyway—and now even Bradley Kincaid is gone. So I say put the Westchester Hillbillies back on again, or Pie-Plant Pete, or some other old-timer.

Norwich, Conn.

MRS. VERA BUSCH

Another listener objects to local stations' cutting into chain broadcasts.

Dear Editor: Who wouldn't be a grouch? A pet station of mine announces a good chain program and after about five minutes it is cut out, and we get a "canned" announcement about someone's coffee. The chain program is resumed for another five minutes and then is cut out for someone's long-life motor oil.

Do we have to put up with this mixture of high-powered salesmanship ruining programs that we enjoy?

St. Joseph, Mo.

D. J. TALBOTT

This listener probably will welcome the forthcoming closer co-operation between Washington and broadcasters, to prevent unfairness in advertising.

Dear Editor: Why not renovate the advertising? Many superlative claims are disgusting, and an insult to average intelligence.

Lavinia, Minn.

MRS. H. T. PATTON

Honest English and no affectations, poses or mannerisms is what this fan demands of radio stars and announcers.

Dear Editor: This will knock your dial for a spin. When I listen to Phil Harris and Leah Ray with their soft voices, and then the fashion reporter steps up to the mike with her "cawnts" and "honds" (hands?) then I se requested: "Why can't they speak U. S. A. and above all, he natural?" Temple, Texas

MRS. F. R. PETERSON

Radio could progress more rapidly than it is doing, says this critic:

Dear Editor: My radio grouch is this: Why can't we have some of the wonderful things right NOW that are prophesied for radio in 2034 by the eminent scientific gentlemen RADIO GUIDE recently quoted?

For example, one of those scientists says that in a hundred years people will be able always to select the programs they want, because certain kinds of programs always will be confined to certain wave bands. Splendid! But why can't we do it now? Station ABC could stick to classical music, Station DEF to jazz, et cetera. Advertising could be permitted, and this improvement would be of great benefit to advertisers, since they could select wave-bands carrying entertainment that appeals.

Murder And The Vanities

Dear VOL: Lynbrook, I. I., N. Y.
I've just been listening to Joe Penner. I just thought I would try to tolerate it once to see if I could find anything really funny about him and I couldn't, for the life of me, do it. I think it's a crime to give him all the votes and credit when there are so many other better and deserving ones.

There are three I have especially in mind. Eddie Cantor, Fred Allen and Phil Baker are comedians who are really good and say something when they're on the air. They're really funny and usually are original. Penner and Ed Wynn (who is sometimes good) would be better off if they didn't laugh at their own jokes.

I guess if I went over the list I'd have many more but these are the main pests. It calls me to think how they get away with murder

Grayce M. Healy

What Price Glory?

Dear VOL: Oakland, Calif.
I am a steady reader of Radio Guide, and watched the popularity contest with a great deal of interest. One discovers many surprising things, in reading the stars' standings.

To me, the most astounding thing was the number of votes received by Bing Crosby, as compared with those of Lawrence Tibbett. I believe that Tibbett is the greatest voice of the generation.

I asked some of my friends who voted for Crosby to explain this; asked them if they honestly considered his voice better than Tibbett's. All of them gave different reasons. One said he liked him because he wasn't high-hat. Another, because he wasn't always figuring in notoriety, and getting divorced, like so many of the celebrities.

This confused me more than ever. I thought people voted for their favorite singer, because of his superior voice, not because they liked a singer's smile, or approved of his home life.

Rhumba Rumbles

Dear VOL: Virginia, Minn.
Miss Jean Mackenzie stated in her recent letter that most American bands should take a lesson from South Americans on the rhumba or tango technique. In that, I disagree with her.

If you listen to a mediocre orchestra you are certain to hear South American songs played poorly, or incorrectly. Earl Burnett's, Hal Kemp's and many other U.S.A. orchestras disprove her point.

After all, the South American orchestras should take a few lessons from our band leaders as to how to play a real American jazz number. I'm just an all-American girl. Barbara MacDonald

Of Thee, Husing

Dear VOL: The Bronx, N. Y., N. Y.
May I take RADIO GUIDE to task for just one thing, outside of which I think it is perfection, itself? Thanks. Why do you have to have a woman's picture on every cover? After all, we women do most of the listening and we should be considered a bit, when you are selecting cover pictures.

Personally for your first "male cover" may I nominate Ted Husing. I know from my personal contacts that most women go for his suave and sophisticated style and he is certainly deserving of a lot more publicity than he gets.

Of course I get to hear him quite a bit but I just live from Thanksgiving to Thanksgiving to hear him do those thrilling Penn-Cornell games. I wish he could have done the Baer-Carnera fight. So I urge you again, give us an occasional man on the cover, but Husing first.

Popular Juvenile

Dear VOL: 166 West 85th St.
New York, N. Y.

The future will bring a reversal in the order of things, the radio adults in dramatics today were the stage children of yesterday; the stage adults of tomorrow will be the radio children of today. The little girl who plays the child part on "Just Plain Bill" is chubby eight year old Lynn Mary Oldham. It is hoped she will retain her naturalness and simplicity, which is an unusual quality among radio children. We take off our hats to her for she has given us another beloved "Sooky" in the form of a little girl.

Pines For Cohan

Dear VOL: Eagle Pass, Texas
On every side you hear the question, "What's the matter with radio?" I doubt there is anything seriously the matter with it save that in its development stage there is a lot of experimentation without much consideration for the listener's point of view. Take the case of George M. Cohan as an example. Wherever listeners talked they seemed to agree on him as the ideal radio performer, yet he was on but about three weeks and then his sponsors replaced him with someone else. Why, when they have a natural entertainer like Cohan, don't they leave him on long enough to satisfy his hearers? I'll be happy when advertisers make up their minds.

The Delphine Oracle

Dear VOL: 3407 Granada
Tampa, Fla.

First, I must say that among the leading dance orchestras, I think Harold Stern has the best. His vocalist, Bill Smith, certainly has that so-called radio personality and it is quite a treat to listen to him.

What ever has happened to Billy Jones and Ernie Hare? They have been my favorite "happiness pair" for years but I have failed to hear them now for some time.

Perhaps it's a bit foolish for me even to mention the enjoyment a Fred Waring program brings; for who could possibly find fault? And last but not least, I extend my sincere congratulations to you, RADIO GUIDE, for publishing the Voice of the Listener and keeping us in touch with our good old U.S.A. neighbors.

Orris Gets At The Root

Dear VOL: 803 West McClure
Peoria, Ill.

I wish to commend the Samuel Saloman of Washington, D. C. on his stand for the better things in radio broadcasting. I heartily agree with him that "rubbish" forges to the front.

I have been a student of voice for over eight years, concentrating on opera and the concert stage, and have done considerable radio broadcasting.

The trouble with radio today is too many crooners, too many women trying to sing bass who don't know how. We could get along very nicely without some of the nerve wrangling jazz orchestras. If the so called jokes put out over the air by the majority of the comedians such as Penner, Wynn, Cantor, etc., were really good, it would not be so bad, but they are so silly, generally speaking, that they are disgusting.

We can use more artists of the caliber of Lawrence Tibbett, Richard Crooks, Reinold Werrenrath, Jessica Dragonette, and many others that I might mention.

I cannot help but feel that the trend of our radio listeners will someday turn to the higher type programs.

Orris W. Hipple

Unorthodox Jackie

(In response to a letter signed "A. Hellerite" in a recent issue, Little Jackie Heller addresses a note of appreciation to be forwarded to the writer. Because she failed to sign her name the letter cannot be forwarded. Since it is so characteristic of some artists to accept such letters as their due and completely ignore the writers, RADIO GUIDE bows to Jackie's fine sense of gratitude and prints his letter herewith in the hope that it will reach the eyes of the person for whom it is intended. It is RADIO GUIDE's hope that the audience-snubbers' union of radio talent will not boycott Jackie as unfair to organized egotists.)

Little Author: I enjoyed reading your comments on my programs and am always mighty interested in knowing the other fella's version of my broadcasts. No matter how busy they are, all of your favorite artists behind the mike are ever grateful for your opinions. So glad to know you have been hearing my programs and I hope that you will continue to hear and enjoy them all.

Thanks a million for your sincere interest and with my very best wishes believe me to be sincerely, Your little pal,

Tex Us To Task

Dear VOL: 914 East 167th St.
New York, N. Y.

Several weeks ago many of Tex Ritter's fans wrote to RADIO GUIDE requesting a picture and an interview about him. The request has not been granted.

Tex Ritter, in my opinion, is the best and most interesting singer of cowboy songs on the air today. I am certain that the many thousands of listeners to the "Cowboy Tom's Roundup" and "Maverick Jim" programs would greatly appreciate a picture and a story about Ritter.

I hope RADIO GUIDE will grant this request. How about it, Tex Ritter fans?

The Old Standby

Dear VOL: Mt. Angel, Oregon

I have been monkeying with radio ever since it was started. I worked with the old style sliding coils, the old sparkers and with the little old crystal sets. I enjoyed many a happy hour. Now we have our modern remote control sets and now I have a squawk to make. We have too much phonograph and dance music on our radio programs. My favorite music is pipe organ music but I realize that it is impossible to suit everyone.

J. W. Frank

In Praise of Humber

Dear VOL: Washington, Penna.

I am writing this letter in the hope that one of the finest orchestras on the air will receive some of the praise which is due it. I refer to Richard Humber and his Ritz-Carlton Orchestra. It has been more than surprising to many how the votes for this orchestra have steadily mounted in the RADIO GUIDE poll. After March 31, when I first saw your great magazine, the votes for this orchestra increased ten fold, while Wayne King did little better than double his votes. During this time Richard Humber outstripped many orchestras and is now rightfully among the leaders. This was accomplished without the benefit of publicity or fan-fare. In fact, many orchestras which receive wide notice in the magazines trailed far behind him.

Certainly the beautiful harp interludes (now copied by less capable orchestras) and the distinctive voice of Joey Nash (which cannot be duplicated) should win the hearts of all.

Dear VOL: Bancroft, Neb.
I certainly would like to compliment Evelyn Keelin on such a fine letter from a girl of fourteen years. I am fifteen and will be a junior in high school. I agree with her in one sense about advertising but in another I don't.

Everyone admits radio is one of the most capable ways of advertising and reaches much further than any other way. After all we should have enough patience to withstand a few minutes of this.

I hope to find something taking the place of your detective stories soon and let's hear something about Fred Astaire. I am interest in tap-dancing

Stars Thank Radio

Dear VOL: 483 Park Avenue
South Haven, Mich.

I have recently become a steady reader of your magazine and think it is splendid. I wish every fan in this country would read your article on "Yankee vs. British Radio". And we complain about a little advertising and a few stale jokes!

I think we should all thank our lucky stars for the system of broadcasting used in the good, old U.S.A. The only thing I could wish for is perhaps a few more full-length dramatizations of plays. Those of the Radio Guild are excellent.

Was disappointed by not hearing Elder Michaux with WBBM, last week. What has happened? May your publication continue to prosper and grow in circulation.

Mrs. Wm. Henderson

In Daze of Old

Dear VOL: Hillsdale, Mich.

I hope you will print my reply to Max Kimberly whose letter appeared in a recent issue. Here is what I want to say to him:

"You say you have sold songs for over 30 years and yet you criticize songs of today which you are supposed to sell to Mr. and Mrs. General Public. I suppose you are in business to make money so remember some of your customers may like to buy "My Dog Likes Your Dog" which you say is not a good song.

"Music stores here carry all popular sheet music, any song that you want. If they do not like a number they do not start knocking it. They keep it to themselves. You may like current popular songs but you know the music producers are going ahead, not back to 30 years ago."

Cut Off Detail

Dear VOL: Junction City, Kan.

Mrs. Agnes Larkin

The Lost Roundup

Dear VOL: Richmond Hill, N. Y.

May I express my sincere regret concerning Cowboy Tom's Roundup being taken off the air without any definite reason being given?

I can't see any reason for doing so. I am sure the program rated A-1. It isn't fair to take it off the air.

I enjoyed it immensely. According to my estimation we should have more cowboy programs such as Cowboy Tom's Roundup. Don't we all love the cowboys, especially this group. Tex Ritter, Chief Shunatona, Skoakum and Pocalontas?

They are always so happy and cheerful and make everybody feel the same way with their beautiful songs, fun and adventures, always trying to please. We want Cowboy Tom's Roundup back again.

Another Thrilling Detective Story in the Series "CALLING ALL CARS"—Actual Crimes Portraying Radio as the Defender of Law

By Moorehead Green

Broad, awkward fingers painstakingly tapped against the key: "CG 249 reporting—". The faint radio signals sped out across the great green swells of the Gulf Stream, coming at last to the Coast Guard headquarters on the Florida sands.

"Sanderlin reporting, position 35 knots off Point Idlewild—Have just captured speed boat with cargo of contraband liquor, taken two prisoners—Impractical to proceed to Bimini with Federal Agent Webster as ordered—We await . . ."

"Spat!"

Boatswain Sanderlin of the Coast Guard never heard the shot which cut him down. The big man was struck by an unseen bullet in the small of the back, and fell awkwardly forward across the telegraph key, his stiffening body closing the switch in a last incoherent signal.

His report never was to be finished. The bo's'n was proud of that report, too. He had something to tell the brass hats about, something that would make his superior officers back at Fort Lauderdale sit up and take notice. The rum-boat which now rocked easily against the side of the Coast Guard cutter long had been a thorn in the flesh of the entire service.

The V13977 had been nabbed, quite by accident, as she headed home toward the Florida coast with her hold full of Bimini rum. One shot had been fired across her bows by the one-pound gun on the deck of the cutter, and then the two men aboard the rum-boat had shut off their motor and come on deck with their hands in the air.

It all had been as easy as that. Sanderlin had congratulated himself that if an officer had been on board, the capture couldn't have been made with any more deftness. The cutter had nosed alongside the helpless rum-boat, and the two prisoners, small, inoffensive looking persons who seemed scared out of their wits, had been taken aboard. Nobody had bothered to search them, for both captives wore only white duck trousers and loose flannel shirts, and there were no tell-tale bulges in their pockets.

Sanderlin, with two of his five men, had gone aboard the rum-boat and surveyed the sacks of whisky and rum bottles. This time the speed boat had no aliens aboard, preparatory to dumping them upon Uncle Sam's back doorstep. There might or might not be a cache of narcotics somewhere on the rakish craft—most of the rum-runners dealt in "happy dust" because the drugs could be purchased in Bimini from the innocent native dealers, using almost anything for money. According to rumor, even Confederate dollars, tobacco chain store coupons, and the like could be passed freely. Certainly there was a good outlet for paper money of the "homemade" variety, which never had come from government printing presses. Indeed, it was upon an investigation into the passing of some of this counterfeit money that Secret Service agent Robert A. Webster happened to be aboard the cutter.

He was to have been deposited at Bimini to carry on a course of investigation which already had taken him several months, and which had turned up a number of beautiful engravings and wads of money perfect in every detail except that the eyes of Lincoln were a bit crossed in the center engraving. It was at Bimini, thought Webster, that his trail would end.

But Robert A. Webster was wrong. He was wrong about several things. For even if Boatswain Sanderlin, a minor petty officer, had not realized the necessity for searching all prisoners, an experienced operative like the crisp and keen Mr. Webster should have done so. Even such harmless looking fellows as these two who called themselves Alderman and Weech should have been frisked. Webster, of course, was only a semi-passenger aboard, but his training in the Secret Service should have taught him watchfulness.

But Robert Webster was leaning idly against the rail of the cutter, watching the coast guardsmen as they turned out the cargo of contraband booze from the hold of the captured boat. Near by stood one seaman, Victor Lamby, who was watching the prisoners. The pair stood huddled dispiritedly near the forecabin hatch of the cutter. Nobody had bothered even to tie them up.

It was at that moment that Horace Alderman, a small, hairy man of fifty-odd years who blinked at the world through thick spectacles, underwent a strange transformation. His hands slipped beneath his loose flannel shirt, and came out with a pair of vicious, snub-nosed .38's.

One quick leap took him to the door of the pilot-house, where the commander of the Coast Guard cutter was sending his radio report of the lucky capture. Alder-

Alderman and his wife and six children, seen as he lived the better half of his Jekyll-Hyde existence man shot from the hip, without warning. The bullet ripped through the body of Boatswain Sanderlin, who went down with a thud which shook the boat.

The meek little prisoner suddenly had been transformed into a raging madman, a killer gone berserk. He gave a roar, and leaped to the rail of the cutter. "Line up, you scum!" he shouted. "I'm in command here now!"

Came a moment when everybody stood paralyzed, from sheer surprise. It was impossible!—as if a prisoner in the police lineup suddenly had whipped out a sub-machine gun and covered the detectives who stared at him.

Besides Webster, only Seaman Lamby stood within sight of Alderman. He was unarmed. But there happened to be a rack of rifles in the cabin. He made a plunge for the door, and a bullet from Alderman's gun flung deck splinters into his face.

Another shot whistled past his ears, and in a frantic effort to get out of range Lamby flung himself head first through the engine-room hatch. He almost made it—but not quite. A third shot from the mad-

James Horace Alderman, photographed in his cell, as he wrote the last of a long series of letters to his wife dened pirate on the deck struck him in the right side, paralyzing his legs. He fell on a heap of oily waste in the engine-room platform. Desperately he hitched himself with his arms between the two engines, where he had some protection from the frothing madman who leaned through the hatchway above.

Alderman wasted a couple more bullets without finishing the job, and then turned his attention to the deck. He was in command of the Coast Guard cutter now, backed up by Weech who had been his accomplice in rum-running. The crew of the Coast Guard boat all were aboard the captured vessel. Only Webster, the Secret Service man in plain clothes, stood braced against the cutter's rail.

"What are you doing with this outfit?" demanded Alderman.

Webster was unarmed—and he had just seen what had happened to the bo's'n and to poor Lamby. He swallowed.

"They're friends of mine—I came out for some sea air—" he said.

"You'll get it!" Alderman told him.

He wheeled suddenly and went back into the deck house. He came out with Sanderlin's service pistol, firing it once into the deck—"to see if the thing would shoot," as he bawled at the top of his voice.

One of his own guns was empty, and he hurled it into the sea. The other he offered to Weech, his henchman, but Weech shook his head. "I—I'm no shot," he said.

By this time a little huddled group of Coast Guardsmen had gathered on the deck of the speed-boat. Unarmed, dazed by the sudden loss of their leader, the men shook their heads and fumbled. The impossible had happened. They never had been taught what to do under such circumstances. They weren't sure what had happened. One moment they had been tossing bags of liquor bottles onto the deck, and the next they had heard a sudden fusillade . . .

They knew pretty well what the situation was when Alderman appeared at the (Continued on Page 30)

Music in the Air

By Carleton Smith

(Time Given is Eastern Daylight) Symphonies . . . and more symphonies! Just now over twenty hours of network time is filled with broadcasts by large orchestras.

The Chicago Symphony starts under Assistant Eric DeLamarter this week. A new conductor is to be provided every seven days and Frederick Stock, the orchestra's own director, may return to finish the series. NBC provides an hour every afternoon of the week and half-hours at 10:30 on Friday evenings and at 9:30 on Saturday evenings. The afternoon broadcasts will be from 4 to 5 on Sunday and 4:30 to 5:30 every week-day. Details of programs are not yet available.

Mr. DeLamarter is known as an organist and composer, and is also a clever writer, having been a music critic in Chicago. He is well-liked and is respected by the orchestra musicians, though he has never found particular favor with his audiences.

Sibelius' First

Victor Kolar and the Detroit Symphony continue to entertain large audiences at the Ford Gardens on Chicago's Lake Shore. Gabrilowitsch's first assistant shows his catholicity of taste, and imposes no limitation on his choice of compositions, except that they be short.

He has chosen music at random from Bach to Sibelius and Gliere, and as the audiences sit in devoted attention, evidently his theory is justified. You can present any type of music, even the least familiar, if the doses aren't too long.

This week Mr. Kolar departs from his practice, to broadcast two symphonies, the first of Jan Sibelius and the fifth of Tschaikowsky. The latter work speaks for itself (Thursday, July 5, CBS at 4 p. m.), but the earliest symphony of the great iconoclast calls for comment.

Sibelius is without doubt the greatest living symphonist, and yet he has still to make his public in this country. His influence has spread very slowly in view of the power and individuality of those close-packed scores. He has been the victim of a certain familiar critical legend: "Bleak, harsh, cold, grey, austere . . . rugged, severe, lonely . . ." These are the rubber-stamps that have obscured him.

Many make the mistake of supposing that Sibelius is destitute of feeling. Reserved, yes! And, also, tense with emotion!

"Dreamer and poet of nature. I am." Sibelius is not a poet of the sentimental tradition. His dreams may seem to turn "inward upon themselves . . . unable to find relief in the legitimate exercise of anguish."

But they are the product of a deeply emotional nature, the most personal, the least derivative of living composers.

The first symphony is the proper place to begin a study of Sibelius. Listen Sunday (CBS at 3 p. m.) and hear this embryonic work and Liszt's "Les Preludes" that follow.

Mr. Kolar's Tuesday afternoon program (CBS at 4 p. m.) includes: March "Swedish Procession" by Soderman; Overture to the opera "Le Roi L'A Dit" by Delibes; Two Humoresques (A flat major and E flat minor) by Dvorak; Alsatian Scenes by Massenet; and selections from Victor Herbert's "The Fortune Teller."

Galician Singer

THERE is nothing synthetic about the Galician singers in the Spanish Village at Chicago's Century of Progress. They strike your ear at once as genuine. And they are. Members of the non-professional singing society, Anaquinas Torres de Galicia, (small pieces of Galician earth) they left their regular occupations as bank-tellers, surgeons, clerks and so on, to have a vacation in America.

The Spanish Republic provided funds for their regular appearance in the Official Government Village at the Fair, and large crowds of discriminating music-lovers gather to hear them. They have been heard every day for two weeks on NBC, and are now scheduled for a broadcast Sunday at 3:30 p. m.

A FOURTH of July international re-broadcast brings us the voices of Lauritz Melchior and Frida Leider from Copenhagen (NBC at 10 a. m.). The tall king of Denmark, Christian X, will speak and Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, our Minister to Denmark, will translate his address, which is to celebrate the 25th Annual Danish-American Day in Copenhagen.

Doris Doe, a native of Bar Harbor, Maine, has become a valuable member of the secondary corps at the Met. In addition to her roles in the great German music-dramas, she has a repertory of more than thirty roles, and she created the role of Herodias in the American premiere of "Salome." The second broadcast in her current series (Friday, June 29, NBC at 10:30 p. m.) includes "Voce di donna" from Ponchielli's "La Gioconda"; Tchaikowsky's "None But the Lonely Heart";

Albert Spalding played his final recital for the season last Wednesday, and departed for a well-earned rest. He has completed the longest series of continuous radio recitals yet played by any major concert artist.

THEIR meeting with the unfortunate Saxophone while on their way to the home of the Brass Instruments forms the foundation of another adventure in Orchestra for Alice and Hugh (Friday, June 29, NBC at 5:45 p. m.). These "Alice in Orchestra" dramatizations are based on Ernest LaPrade's books.

Mary Eastman, that charming lyric soprano, sings the coloratura air "Una Voce Poco Fa" from Rossini's "The Barber of Seville"; Rohm's "Calm as the Night," and "A Brown Bird Singing" (Friday, June 29, CBS at 8 p. m.).

NBC Program Lines

Nicholas Vasiloff sings the "Don Juan" Serenade with balalaika accompaniment (Sunday at 10:30 a. m.) . . . Guila Bus-tabo, youthful violin prodigy, with beautiful hands and long, flowing curls, joins the Concert Artists (Sunday at 2:30 p. m.) . . . The Mediaevalists, under Father Finn's direction, will sing the great hymn of Palestrina, "Tu Es Petrus"; Dettler's "Ave Maria"; and "We Sing the Glorious Conquest" by Young (Sunday at 6 p. m.).

A "pop" concert under the direction of Christiaan Kriens is broadcast from Washington (Wednesday at 4 p. m.) . . . Lucy Monroe sings with a string trio (Thursday at 12:15 p. m.) . . . Cyril Toubin violins Sarasate's Romanza Andaliza, Scott's "Lotus Land," and Schubert's "Moment Musical" (Friday at 9:45 a. m.)

Henry Jackson will play the finale to Rachmaninoff's C minor Concerto with the Milwaukee Philharmonic Orchestra (July 6, midnight to 12:30 a. m.). The orchestra will play Paderewski's Minuet and Rimsky-Korsakoff's Caprice.

This day was inaugurated 25 years ago by the Danish King, and the broadcast of this anniversary program on America's Independence Day will be given under the auspices of the Raebild National Park Board of Copenhagen. This program will be rebroadcast over a CBS-WABC network at 4 p. m.

On Saturday, June 30, there will be a special broadcast from station KFZ in Little America, at 9 p. m. EST. On Short Waves

Unusually rich for short-wave listeners are the days just ahead. Fans of this increasingly popular branch of broadcasting shortly will hear the voice of a European king, a new poem by Rudyard Kipling set to music, a special message from Admiral Byrd, the details of a sham-battle aerial attack on London, a record-breaking broadcast linking the Arctic and the Antarctic, and an address in Paris to be made by a leading American feminist.

The Federal Radio Commission has just assigned the call letters KILS to the CBS temporary station located in Northwestern Alaska. This transmitter is the northern point of Columbia's attempt to link the Arctic and the Antarctic by short wave. This new transmitter, the most powerful in Alaska, operates on 1,000 watts. It will complete the circuit of 17,000 miles and will carry voices from one end of the earth to the other. The voices are to be transmitted by KILS, will be picked up by the RCA communications either at Point Reyes, Cal., or Riverhead, L. I., for relay to Little America and simultaneously to the nationwide Columbia network.

Short wavers may pick up the many tests which will be put on before July 11, the expected date of the broadcast.

Another interesting short wave broadcast will be made from the fourmasted schooner Effie M. Morrissey, now heading northward. She is equipped with a 100-watt radio-telephone transmitter and has been granted an experimental short-wave license by the Federal Radio Commission. The call letters are W10XDA. Tests will be made this week.

Interesting broadcasts will come from the Old World, and will be available in their entirety only to short-wave fans. Parts of the programs only will be picked up and rebroadcast by the networks.

On Saturday, June 30, there will be another of England's annual military pageants—this time that of the Royal Air Force Display. More than 200 aircraft and 3,000 flyers will take part, and it will be described by the British Broadcasting Company from the Hendon Flying Field, located just outside London. Special maneuvers, including an attack on London by fighting planes and bombers, will feature this spectacle. The city will be "defended" by smoke screens and will be "attacked" by planes in unusual formations, including a massed flight by nine planes chained together by elastic ropes. Exhibitions of synchronized acrobatics will be included. This program will be presented over stations GSG on 16.86 meters and GSF on 19.82 meters at 9 a. m. EST and will be rebroadcast over an NBC-WEAF network.

On Monday the closing scene from the "Pageant of Parliament," the impressive and colorful review of the history of England's governing body, will be presented by RBC over stations GSD on 25.53 meters and GSB on 31.55 meters, at 5 p. m. EST. This program will be picked up by NBC over a WJZ network. It is on this program that a new poem by Kipling will be sung by a chorus of the Royal Choral Society—having been set to music by the well-known composer, Roger Quilter. Leslie Bridgewater will direct the orchestra.

On Wednesday, July 4, King Christian X of Denmark will be heard in a special program celebrating the 25th annual Danish American day in Copenhagen. Ruth Bryan Owen, American Minister to Denmark, will translate the speeches of the King and of Thomas Stanning, Danish Prime Minister. The huge audience of 40,000 people in the great park of the Danish Capitol will sing their own and the American national anthems, and Lauritz Melchior and Frieda Leider, Metropolitan

Peeping into the Local Studios

By Murray Arnold

Clyde Morse, WIAM program director and announcer, resigns to devote his time to teaching and concert piano work . . . Sam Targan and his WIP-wired Silver Grille orchestra begin engagement next week at the Silver Slipper, in New Jersey, with spot at Silver Grille filled by Del Lee and his renowned band . . . Martha Lawrence, of the WGY "Martha and Hal" duo, at one time teamed with Alice Joy, the NBC star, on the Keith vaudeville circuit . . . WEEI is expecting big things from Little Helen Young, the Boston song-bird. WBAL staff still growing, latest addition being Philip L. Franklin, a direct descendent of the historically-famous Benjamin, to the announcing staff . . . Also a recently appointed employee is Georgie Dalin, formerly connected with the Irving Berlin office in Philadelphia. He is now music librarian of WCAU . . . "The Romance of Dan and Sylvia" switches airing time at KDKA to every week day at noon . . . Charlie Kerr and his band leave the River Drive Casino this week to music the Municipal Pier at Cape May, his place to be filled by Barney Zeeman and his Kentucky Cardinals, with the WIP intact.

The first piano solo broadcast over KDKA back in the early days was played by Francis Conrad. Today Francis Conrad is manager of KDKA.

WDRC each Wednesday at 7:45, are Adeline Swanson, Mildred Lagerloff, Hazel Anderson, and Signe Lagerloff.

HAROLD KNIGHT and his band leave the Cathay Tea Garden in Philly for a southern tour, spot to be filled by orchestra led by Eddie Pryor, former trumpeter with Meyer Davis . . . Honeyboy and Sasafra, blackface comedy team, through with engagement at KDKA, and on to New York where they have signed for new network series . . .

ELIZABETH SIEDOFF, renowned pianist, inaugurates a new series of Sunday evening recitals over WAAB and Yankee network at 8:30 p. m. . . WPEN will start broadcasting on its new wave length of 920 kilocycles the last week of July, with a gala program directed by the genial Bill Bailey to inaugurate the new lay-out . . . The Kelly Sisters, who made their debut on the Pittsburg Variety Program, begin a net set of thrice-weekly shows over KDKA . . . Over 2,500 women and children attended the WIP annual "Home-makers' Club" picnic last Thursday, with hundreds being turned away due to over-subscription of the outing. Not a little of the astounding success of this affair was due to the adept handling of details by Jerrie Crowley, WIP program director and publicity chief . . . Baseball fans can now get complete returns through WDRC and the Yankee network from Monday to Friday at 6:30, and on Saturday and Sunday at 6:15.

BERT EGIZI, musical director of KDKA, is an Italian by heritage, was born in Constantinople, and attended French schools for the first dozen years of his life . . . Paul Mason clicking big at the Tony Shane "Sky Rendezvous" of the Walton Roof . . . The new voice heard on the Gimbel sponsored "Five Truthful Minutes" program, aired over WIP daily at 10:30 a. m., belongs to Alvin Grauer, Gimbel ad executive, and brother of Ben Grauer, of NBC announcing fame.

Reviewing Radio

is from a radio artist who prefers to remain anonymous for reasons you will soon perceive:

"Dear Mr. Porter: I have just written a letter to an artist who is going to succeed me on a commercial program. Here is what I wrote:

"I do not hesitate to recommend the Oshkosh Velvet Underwear Company to any radio artist seeking a commercial. It was a great pleasure for me to give sixty-two auditions before the contract was originally awarded to me. Further, when I discovered that the aunt of the president of the company liked my style of work, I didn't mind at all furnishing a 45-piece orchestra at a price which caused me to lose five hundred dollars each week. At each broadcast I thought of the sponsor's aunt, and the memory of her face made me forget all about my loss.

"I must mention also how happy the sponsor made me when he insisted that I call my orchestra "The Oshkosh Velveteers." The name has become so famous along the airwaves that now all other sponsors refuse to hire me for fear my former sponsor will cash in at their expense. So now I am faced with the prospect of being without a job for the next two or three years.

"It is a great pleasure for me to recommend the Oshkosh Company to all prospective artists. Let me tell you that such sponsors are few and far between—thank Heaven."

That winds up the letters, and nearly winds up my weekly chore, but before signing off I must tell you of a bit of history that seems to be in the making.

Last week Local 806, the Musicians' Union, announced that steps were about to be taken to stifle free studio performances by radio orchestras. The complaint was mainly against Fred Waring whose band entertains the studio guests after each broadcast—and two other bantoneers. The Local took up the issue, it is understood, because such free performances tend to keep people away from theaters—where other musicians are eking out a living.

Right in the midst of this impending action by the Musical Union word comes that Continental Oil, which sponsors the Harry Richman-Jack Denny broadcast Wednesday nights, has applied to the National Broadcasting Company for permission to charge an admission fee to guests. If granted, this proposal will provide a neat sum each week, the total of which will be turned over to the Musicians' Benefit Association.

So, in signing off, may I give three rousing cheers for Continental Oil, whether the plans goes through or not?

Plums and Prunes

By Evans Plummer

Having taken you to a depot to meet a train carrying Maestro Ben Bernie, the next lowdown on the radio writing business is that of attending celebrity parties. This is a most serious industry, and brings with it steak sandwiches by the score and beer by the large, foaming schooner. Also headaches.

Celebrity parties are very plumful to take—except that the radio writer generally has to report at work the next morning at 10 a. m. and the parties generally last until three or four a. m. The late hours never bother the celebrities, however, as they generally have breakfast in bed at 12:30 p. m. ("Make the eggs exactly three minutes, Bottle"). At any rate, the latter is the accepted legend.

And what is a celebrity? Well, we aren't sure ourselves. It may be anything from a trained dog (fleas included) to a soprano with one sustaining program per week on a 50-watt local station. But nobody seems to care. And each and every celebrity party is "bigger and better than ever before." Yeah?

In fact, we attended a celebrity party recently. Maybe you've been there? They call it the Midnight Flyers. It happens every Monday at the Blackhawk Restaurant in Chicago, with a WGN plekup.

BUT THIS WAS a bit bigger than the mine-run of events on the steak-sandwich circuit. The reason was bandleader Hal Kemp's return to the spot. Pierre Andre took charge of affairs at midnight. He did a plumful job the whole evening through (as he always does), except that we query his claim that this was the "greatest night of them all." We dislike superlatives. But it's all in the spirit of ballyhoo.

Before the fireworks, however, a properly trained radio writer must do a bit of table hopping. He must go the rounds and shake hands with everyone—being sure to miss no one, not even a music publisher's representative—so that he will be known as a "good fellow" who is not "highhat" . . . We make the rounds.

NOW THE SHOW starts. Vernon Craig limps over to the stand and demonstrates a Crosby-like voice, only deeper. He does it well; gets several encores . . . Number two is a chap named Travers. Also a Crosbyer but not so Crosby. Too many encores taken for his applause . . . Then the Doring Sisters. Maybe smoke got in their eyes, or something, but the trio didn't sound up to snuff to us (right back of that big pillar).

Comes Betty Boop (Mae Questel) to the floor. She looks as much like Betty of the animated cartoons as Mike Porter does John Dillinger. Mae panic's 'em. Takes two encores and could have had more. Three plums . . . Dick Stabile and Eddie Oliver demonstrate their musical educations. The girls' hearts flutter, especially that of one handsome blonde. Two plums . . . Molly Picon takes the stand. Three songs, two of them Jewish character numbers, win her salvos of applause. Three plums.

An intermission, and Lum and Abner are announced. The two lads come to the floor, do about four lines in character, and bow. It wasn't enough. Celebrity nights are tough on the sketch stars who can't jig or sing. One plum . . . Larry Adler now has his harmonica in hand, and what he doesn't do with it! Three plums for something different . . . So it goes on and on, with Boh Pacelli's warbler Judy Talbot and Earl Burnett's blonde Ruth Lee catching several plums each. Romo Vincent, Roy Smeck, Stanley Morner and Dorothy Miller raise their voices in song and do as well . . . And there you have it. A celebrity night. Not bad, but—

There ought to be a law against 'em. And radio writers.

Personal Nominations:

FOR THE BEST clothing model of the latest in men's wear—Buddy Rogers . . . For the neatest selection of good music now tunable these melting nights—the Detroit Symphony pickups . . . For the slickest hair and straightest part on the knob of any bandsman—Frankie Masters . . . For the wildest looking gent in a full dress suit—Eddy Duchin . . . For the most artfully plucked arched eyebrows—Leah Ray . . . For the nuttiest voice in radio—Poley McClintock . . . For the oddest collection of sounds yet to be tagged music—Hessberger's Bavarian Ensemble . . . For a hot night—Byrd's broadcasts from Antarctica.

Plums and—Guess!

WELL, WELL—right in this streak of hot weather, what should the postman bring but a report from "Stooge No. 13," in charge of our Fort Wayne, Ind., outpost. Here goes:

"A nice plum pudding to NBC or a sponsor who gives Little Jackie Heller a regular night spot—or does Bernie have him under contract?"

"Plums to Graham McNamee for the omission of the usual stumbling and Oy Ratwellisms in his good broadcast of the Baer-Carnera fight. This from one who always has contended that as a sports announcer, Graham was a swell stooge for Ed Wynn.

"Plums to the Old Mousetrap for failing to 'Shoot the Works' in plugging his picture and its songs on his broadcasts—as many a performer (remember Cantor!) would have done if given a band of his own and a regular air spot.

"Prunes to Rudy Vallee for his rendition of 'The Man on the Flying Trapeze.' Walter O'Keefe should have heard it!"

"We hope that by the time the plums on our tree are ripe to pluck, we can award them for the return of the Harmonica Rascals. Willard Robison's haunting rhythms, a regular late-at-night spot for Ann Leaf's organ artistry, and the melting away of enough Alexander Woollcott that he can again get into a studio.—STOOGES 13."

Ice Cold Column-ade

AND NOW (boy, are we getting help?) quench your thirst at the fount of Sylvia's wisdom and opinions:

"Joe Sanders is finally making a vocation of his pet avocation, that of song-writing, mingling it with some picture writing on the west coast, but some of these days the Old Left Hander will be 'How Ja Doing' in the Windy City . . . Pepsodent's boring ad copy has been lifted no end by Sen Kaney's substitution, don't you think? . . . I hear rumors that Seymour Simons' Ballad Band may be at the World's Fair later this summer, so here's hoping—for a long stay the next time . . . Maybe you don't agree, but prunes to Jan Garber for aping the 'sweetest music this side of heaven' and more of the wrinkled fruit to Emrie Ann Lincoln for a suspected (maybe I'm wrong) but very poor imitation of Irene Taylor . . . And more prunes—to Jimmy Durante for not living up to his 1933 standard . . . Who can help but love Henry Busse's theme 'Hot Lips' and his ever popular rendition of 'When Day Is Done?'—SYLVIA."

WELL, HOW did you like that column? Huh? As Admiral Martin Porter would say as he lit a ten-cent cigar, "It's a gift!"

Bandstand and Baton

The current trend to re-moralize this country, which has hit the movie industry with such highly-publicized results, has not been diverted into the night club field as yet. It may be shortly, because the business needs it in certain respects, but it certainly cannot affect it enough to make any difference to the public.

Music may be as suggestive as words or pictures, authorities claim. The rhythm in which these numbers are written gives them their salaciousness, they say, and several currently popular songs have been placed in this category. Some people have gone so far as to declare that the distinctive style popularized by certain orchestras is based upon this appeal.

But it is very doubtful if anything as far-fetched as a revision of song writing is recommended by even the most fanatic of reformers. Floor shows, of course, which in many instances have descended from slightly suggestive jokes into plain smut, must change, but the broadcast of dance music need not be affected.

CONTRARY to published reports, Jan Garber will not go to New York this fall, but will return to the Trianon ballroom, in Chicago. And he is still working under his former booker. Jan's return has been postponed somewhat, but he will be back some time in September. Meanwhile, he is breaking all sorts of records on his present barnstorming tour, while on the road to California and a summer stand at Catalina Island. Garber's arrangements are really done by himself and Freddy Large, and are not Lombardo's.

WAYNE KING returns to the other Andrew Karagas ballroom this Saturday, June 30, and Aragon fans are planning a big party in celebration. Beginning Sunday, July 1, Wayne will be back on all the Lady Esther shows. Meanwhile, Bernie Cummins remains at the Trianon until later in July, when Anson Weeks takes over the south side Chicago ballroom and its WGN wire.

PHIL HARRIS' orchestra and an exceptionally beautiful setting are expected to draw the crowds in a big way to the West End Casino, near New York spot. Crowds were turned away when Harris opened there lately. Leab Ray, of course, and the Three Ambassadors trio are to continue as vocalists with this outfit.

LARRY TATE, singing orchestra leader from Philadelphia, is the only sustaining artist who broadcasts over both NBC and Columbia. Victor Young is on both networks now with his NBC auto show and his Columbia beer account. Don Bestor uses three theme songs, "Teach Me to Smile," "Dancing on the Roof-Top" for the roof-garden broadcasts, and the new "What Good is the Good in Good-bye" to close. It's Audrey Blaine now with Roger Wolfe Kahn on his NBC broadcast from the Sun and Surf Club; she dropped the Joan to avoid conflict with another singer using the same name.

HARRY HORLICK opens vaudeville shortly for the first time since he began broadcasting ten years ago. Reggie Childs will establish some sort of a record when he goes into New York's Palace in August for his third week of vaudeville appearances at the same theater this year.

RUMORS HAVE placed everyone from Duke Ellington to Vincent Lopez in the Blue Ribbon Casino at the Fair for its long-postponed opening. But it is Charley Straight, former CBS maestro, last heard in Chicago over a year ago, who opens the former Ben Bernie spot with a new band. Other World's Fair offerings at present include Jesse Kirkpatrick from Merrie England, Frankie Sylvano in the Hawaiian Village, and George Devron at the Spanish Village, all with no radio pickups. The refusal of owners to pay line charges have kept these maestros from broadcasting, and, 'tis said, is resulting in a good deal of discontent among the maestros.

THAT BIG COFFEE hour from the Pacific coast, sponsored by MJB, has always given the public the very best available in dance music. Its leaders have included Guy Lombardo, Duke Ellington, and Ted Fiorito, among others. Gus Arnheim is doing that work now. Fiorito is supposed to take over the assignment on the Carefree Carnival when and if that show goes commercial. Jimmy Grier seems to be grabbing most of the commercial shows which have switched to the west coast lately; his present shows include the Hall of Fame and Jack Benny's hour, and he has worked behind Bing Crosby. Deane Janis, formerly Hal Kemp's featured singer, may be heard with Carol Loffner from San Francisco on his many west coast chains and a nationwide Columbia Saturday night pickup.

dog which cannot be found for observation, a physician should be consulted for the usual precautionary treatment.

Q. What is the best treatment for "athlete's foot"? A. The condition known as "athlete's foot" is an infection which usually is picked up by walking on dressing room floors and floors surrounding pools, without slippers. The best prevention is to wear a bathing slipper to and from the pool. Many of the firms have antiseptic solutions in which to dip the feet to prevent this condition. A person who acquires the infection should seek competent medical advice.

Q. I am 5 feet 6 inches tall, 36 years old and weigh 130 lbs. I realize that I am underweight and would like to know how I can gain weight. I eat pretty regularly but I don't seem to get any slouter. Any information you can give me through your articles in Radio Guide will be greatly appreciated. A. Height and weight tables, while they are a valuable method of roughly estimating nutrition, are after all but a table of averages. Some people are endowed with heavier bones or more muscular contour than others, and there are racial and family differences just as there are between a race horse and a dray horse. For that reason it is impossible for a person to judge of your nutrition from a statement of your height, weight and age. The important questions are—Do you feel well? Do you get up in the morning feeling rested? Are you able to complete your day's work without feeling unduly tired? Have you lost weight recently or has your weight been stationary?

For years the medical profession has been urging persons, particularly those 35 and over, to have a complete physical examination made each year. It is one of the most valuable services one can render one's self. We have an automobile looked over regularly, a plant owner has his machinery regularly inspected, but few of us have that most valuable, most complicated and most remarkable machine, the human body, looked over except when illness causes a wreck and they send it in for repairs. Give as much care to the human body as you do to the automobile. Perceptibly, I would suggest that you ask your doctor to give you a thorough physical examination.

Every week Doctor Wynne will answer questions concerning health, sent to him by his radio audience, as well as by readers of RADIO GUIDE. These questions will be answered here, and not by direct mail.

Doctor Wynne cannot prescribe in specific cases. He will, however, answer such questions as will be of interest to all. Address YOUR health questions to Doctor Shirley W. Wynne, in care of RADIO GUIDE, 551 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas blots up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute, 25c at drug stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

Now for the Poll Medals

Despite his years of triumph on the air, Rudy Vallee finds that Thursday night, June 28, promises to be the event of events in his life. On that date, during the Fleischmann hour broadcast, RADIO GUIDE will present a beautiful gold medal to him as the ruling personality behind the air's most popular program. Voters in RADIO GUIDE'S Star of Stars Election may tune in and share a sense of satisfaction in knowing that they personally had a hand in bringing top program honors to Rudy and his Variety Hour. In addition to the gold medal, engraved certificates will be given to each person representing an integral part of the Fleischmann program.

Joe Penner, the irrepressible duck salesman, acclaimed as Radio's Star of Stars by an avalanche of almost one hundred thousand votes, will have his meteoric rise to the top crowned by being presented with his gold medal during the course of his regular Sunday night broadcast on Sunday, July 1.

Thus far Joe's heart has been too full to make any audible comment anent his sensational victory over the air's established favorites. The loyalty of his supporters in boosting him to the top of RADIO GUIDE'S contest, however, has reached his heart, and he's promised to send his heart-felt thanks into the loudspeaker of every listener who had a hand in bringing him radio's greatest honor.

Arrangements for the presentation of medals to Amos 'n' Andy, voted the most popular team on the air, and to Wayne King, whose orchestra was elected the most popular by a wide margin, are being negotiated and are near completion. Announcement of the presentation dates will be carried in a forthcoming issue of RADIO GUIDE.

Along the Airialto

IT'S BAD ENOUGH when smoke gets in your eyes, but when it comes out of your coat pocket, people run away. The other day at the World's Fair, my Chicago operative reports, a crowd was standing around watching the mechanical antics of the robot of comedian Fred Allen which his sponsor is exhibiting. Suddenly wires inside the big contraption became crossed, and smoke gushed from the coat pocket of the mechanical man, whose antics abruptly ceased. The crowd ran for safety, but nothing happened.

GERTRUDE BERG and the entire cast of "The Goldbergs" will open for one week in a Chicago Theater, Chicago, starting July 13. Other cities will be added to their personal appearance itinerary... If there seems to be a greater amount of gypsy music flowing over the airwaves during the next few weeks, it is because Harry Horlick graciously loaned the NBC staff his complete musical library... Yes, there's romance in the air all right. Any day now Frances Langford and her business manager Ken Dolan will announce to the world that the lovelight in their eyes goes beyond the business stage. Ken went to Florida to meet the folks and brought Poppa Langford back with him to see the Baer-Carnera fight.

Kate Comes Home

KATE SMITH returned to the big city after an absence of seven months, stopping off in Banff for a brief but deserved vacation. The Smithy is readying plans to say "Hello Everybody" via the airwaves within a few weeks... Eddie Peabody carries a spare with him to all his broadcasts just in case a string on his banjo happens to break. Don't think it hasn't come in handy more than once.

ALBERT SPALDING finishes his current radio engagement on Wednesday, June 27, when the Castoria program bows off the airwaves. The series will return September 3... Columbia will pick up real Hawaiian music from the Steel Pier, Atlantic City, this summer... Ah, folks, lend your ears to the radio this Sunday when Raymond Hackett, the famous movie and stage star, will do a scene from Booth Tarkington's "Seventeen" on the Family Theater program.

Chesterfield Low-Down

ONLY THE PRINCIPALS—Ponselle, Stueckgold, Martini, and Kostelanetz—were advised that their services on the Chesterfield series would be retained in the fall. That is the entire present set-up intact. The musicians and chorus believed that when the program went off for the summer on July 14 the program terminated.

During a recent rehearsal on the stage of the Radio Playhouse, Rosa Ponselle let the cat out of the bag.

In the middle of an operatic aria she suddenly stopped and asked a production man: "Is this the same place we'll all broadcast from in October?" The rehearsal was disrupted with shouts of joy (whoopee!) from the musicians and the chorus.

Sportcasts of the Week

SCHEDULE OF EVENTS

(Shown in Eastern Daylight Time)

FRIDAY, June 29: 4:10 p. m., British Open Golf, CBS-WABC network. SATURDAY, June 30: 4:15 and 6:15 p. m., N. A. A. U. Track Meet, CBS and NBC networks. TUESDAY, July 3: 11 p. m., wrestling, WGBF (630 kc); 9:30 p. m., Boxing Bout, by Benny Leonard, WJLN (1010 kc). WEDNESDAY, July 4: 4 p. m., Brooklyn Handicap, from Aqueduct, CBS-WABC network.

Another of the world's major golfing titles, the British Open, is up for decision Friday, June 29, and CBS will again cooperate with the British Broadcasting Corporation in giving Americans the latest flash on the standings.

At the mike again will be Bernard Darwin, eminent English golf expert, who earlier this year brought the British Amateur and Walker Cup matches to listeners. His period on the air will be for twenty minutes beginning 4:10 p. m. EDT.

Among the prominent Americans in the field are Denny Shute, title defender, Gene Sarazen, 1932 champ, and MacDonald Smith. Henry Cotton, British pro, and a band of formidable native sons will be trying to keep the invaders from taking the trophy off British soil.

CONTINUING their barnstorming tour of the country's big track meets, all the major cinder performers will be found at the Marquette University oval on June 30, where they will compete for top honors in the National A. A. U. Track and Field Championships.

A CBS-WABC hook-up will pick up the main events in two sessions on the air, one at 4:15 and another at 6:15 p. m. EDT, and Ted Husing will again serve his public with accounts of the main events. For the National Broadcasting Company, WTMJ, in Milwaukee, will be at the scene of action and feed an NBC-WJZ chain at 4:15 p. m. and an NBC-WEAF network at 6 p. m. Russ Winnie, Badger sportscaster, will make these airings.

With Cunningham, Bonthron, and Venke again in the starring roles in the mile run and Ralph Metcalfe, Marquette sprint king, dominating the dashes, the usual large following is expected to tune in.

HERE'S SOME good news for the folk who follow the national pastime via their radio sets. Although neither New York team allows broadcasting of its home games, Kenesaw Mountain Landis, fiery mogul of the sport, has announced that the second annual classic between the best in the National and American baseball leagues will be given nation-wide airing by both NBC and CBS networks.

Cities in all parts of the country are sharing in the selection of the stars who will participate in the game at the Polo Grounds, home of the New York Giants, on Tuesday, July 10, and fans in these towns will be served by the local stations which are to obtain their play-by-play reports from the big chains.

Already Graham McNamee, Ford Bond and Tom Manning, of the NBC staff, have been named for duty and they will collaborate in bringing this thriller to the multitude of listeners all over the country.

MAX BAER made another trip to the microphone, Sunday, June 24, this time as an entry to the Hall of Fame, as guest artist for that NBC program. Demonstrating his versatility, the new heavyweight boxfight king took the lead in a dramatic sketch and sang a few ditties... Advancing to the finer points of tennis, "Court Tactics and Strategy," Ellsworth Vines gives another of his interesting lessons on the court game over an NBC-WEAF hook-up at 9:30 a. m. EDT. Throw away your golf bags and listen to some worthy tennis theories as expounded by this youthful sensation... Here go a couple of prunes. (borrowed from Ev Plummer) to CBS for cutting off the final of the National Collegiate Track Meet's 100-yard dash just as the starting gun exploded. Many tuned in especially to hear Ralph Metcalfe do his stuff... and they didn't.

KARL LANDT of the Landt Trio and White soon will be heard strumming his guitar on the early morning programs of this singing comedy ensemble. Karl has kept his virtuosity a secret up till now, for fear he'd be accused of being another hillbilly imitator. But now with his brotner Dau studying the mandolin and Jack playing the banjo, don't be surprised if the boys blossom out any day as an instrumental as well as a singing aggregation.

and enterprise go friendliness and hospitality towards the stranger.

In appearance these people are a good deal like New Englanders—long and lean. Few of the men wear whiskers, perhaps because of the heat. Many of them have bad teeth.

Perhaps the most colorful character in all the desert is Death Valley Scotty, the prospector who built a sumptuous palace in this wasteland! Scotty's spectacular stunts have made the front pages of newspapers from coast to coast—but one thing he keeps strictly private is the location of his gold mine. Many people have tried to follow Mr. Walter Scott to his mine, but none ever has succeeded—perhaps because they didn't keep closely enough behind him, out of consideration for the two six-guns he wears strapped low for quick action.

The Home of Peace

The theme song of the desert, Miss Cornwall says, might well be "Home on the Range". The calm philosophy of the people brings a wealth of truth to the line: "Where never is heard a discouraging word." Even in their attitude towards time and money, Death Valley people are different from the rest of the world. They have an almost Oriental indifference to time. Witness:

"Two old prospectors who had been friends for years, one morning set out for Goldfield, a mining camp. One of them had just bought a car. "Why say," he drawled to his friend, "I'll be in Goldfield in two hours. You an' your old burros won't make the town till tonight!"

The man with the burros leaned over and spat. "Uh-huh," he said. "You'll be in Goldfield in two hours—and what're you gonna do when you get there?"

Many people keep track of the days of the week by watching the trains come and go. The little railway, sonorously named "Tonopah and Tidewater" because it goes neither to Tonopah nor to Tidewater, runs three trains in and out every week. Is today Wednesday or Thursday? You can always figure that out in the desert by remembering how long it has been since the last train!

It's because of this indifference to time that Mrs. Smith never got her curtains hung. Her name, incidentally, is not Smith—but there's no use hurting her feelings by publishing her real name. Back in 1907, her husband refused $1,000,000 for a gold mine.

Packed for 27 Years

"I was sitting right in that chair," he told Miss Cornwall, pointing to a wide, lounging old rocker, "when this fellow offered me the million. I had just sent East for Mrs. Smith, and she got here, bag and baggage. But I told her not to unpack; I was going to sell the mine, and I told her that most likely we'd be moving right out. Well, when this fellow offered me a million, it got me to thinking. You see, I'd only intended to ask half a million—so when he came through with such a big offer, I changed my mind and asked for five million. He wouldn't pay it, and I haven't had a real good offer since."

And then Mrs. Smith apologized because there were no curtains on her windows. "You see," she said, "I'm not unpacking the curtains because we're apt to move out any day—just as soon as Henry sells the mine." For 27 years that woman has kept her curtains packed and her windows bare, always believing she and her husband might move out "any day"!

No more are they slaves to money than to time—these desert dwellers. Billy Murray, the "mayor" of Virginia City, used to be a cashier for Tex Rickard, in the town of Goldfield. Billy has handled literally millions of dollars for miners, prospectors, gamblers—keeping account of it simply in an old grocery-store order book—and not once did anyone think of questioning Billy's figures.

Billy's system was the height of simplicity. Men would come to him and ask him to act as banker. Many an individual, bent on a spree, would park his money with Billy first, for safety's sake. And Billy simply would write the man's name at the top of a page, and place the amount owing to him underneath. If the money wasn't all withdrawn at once, he would subtract whatever sums were taken, so that at a glance he could always tell just how much any one of his neighbors had coming to him.

Forgetting $1,000

One night, a rangy Westerner shoved $1,000 into Murray's hand. "Chicken feed, Billy," he said, "but it's all I got, an' I'm going to get roaring drunk tonight. Will you keep it for me?" Billy did—and it was some weeks before he saw the man again. "Billy, I'm broke—can I have ten bucks?" he said. "Sure," said Murray, handing him the ten, and deducting it, in his book, from the man's thousand. In a few days the rangy one came back and asked for another ten. "That'll be twenty I owe you," he said. Murray looked at him. "Say," he said, "have you forgot you left a thousand dollars with me to take care of? You've got $980 still coming to you." "Yeah?" said the desert rat casually. "Guess it musta slipped my mind. Keep it for me, will you, Billy?"

But this desert indifference to money applies only to the money actually on hand—not the money a man expects to make. Making it is a game that's played to the full, for its thrills. Only when it is accumulated, does cash become unimportant. Everybody, young and old—and the dry desert air lets people live to be very old—thinks and talks and dreams about prospecting, making big strikes. The day Miss Cornwall arrived, the Chinese restaurateur in a nearby town had made a fortune, and everybody was talking about it, and wondering if the desert were going to lose a good cook. The Chinese had "grub staked" a prospector on shares, and the old sourdough had struck it rich.

A One-Man Town

And in the ghost town of Bodie lives Old Jim Cain, who is trying to get rich another way. Years ago, Bodie was a thriving mining camp. It has many stores and houses, all empty now, all standing on the desert's dusty face, well-preserved but indescribably lonely. There are many towns like Bodie, close to Death Valley. People would leave whole towns behind, sometimes in one big migration when a vein of ore worked out, or another strike was made somewhere else, starting a new stampede.

And now Old Jim lives all alone, in Bodie. He owns the town. He has bought it up, dollar by dollar at tax sales. And as gaunt Old Jim walks through the deserted schoolhouse, which still has faint chalk-marks of uncompleted sums on its blackboards, he has perfect faith that Bodie will "come back" some day—and that when the day comes, he will be a rich man, with stores and building lots and houses to sell. He's been waiting about 40 years for that to happen—but time means so little on the desert. And besides

The Cover Girl

Doris Robbins—the pretty colleen who decorates the cover this week—is a red-headed Irish-American who starts things. In fact, it was she who started all this female vocalizing that goes on with dance bands; for her "blues" and "hot-cha" numbers made such a hit when her rich voice first mingled with orchestral overtones, that today no "name" band is considered complete without at least one blushing balladeer. Furthermore, she it was who taught Chicago the Charleston—that mad, dervish-like gyration which twirled the tendons of dancers several years ago.

This makes Doris sound like a veteran trouser—which she is; but actually she was born just 22 years ago. Brooklyn, New York, is her birthplace. She left the city of churches for the city of night clubs, and now is the featured vocalist with Ben Pollack and his orchestra over CBS from the Hotel New Yorker, and over NBC from the Casino de Parez.

While going to school, the little Robbins girl also took dancing, singing and elocution lessons. Soon her Irish parents (from whom she inherits her red hair) discovered that this training was pointing their daughter straight for the stage—and instead of becoming alarmed, they gave her ambition every encouragement.

She was in her teens when she Charlestoned into Chicago's heart—and stayed there. For many years she was a vaudeville and night club favorite, one of the midwest's most popular. Three years ago she played the lead role in "Whoopie" when that extravaganza came to Chicago.

Doris obtained her present job while on vacation, which proves that a little play is good for a girl. Holidaying at White Bear Lake, she was revelling in her two hobbies—riding horseback and eating corned-beef and cabbage; and she's so fond of both that she even thinks she might be able to do them simultaneously. Instead, she met Ben Pollack, who heard her sing and persuaded her to join his band as featured vocalist.

Recently, Doris was signed for a three-reel musical picture by Warner Brothers, so that listeners soon may see her as well as hear her.

—he owns the graveyard, too.

And so Ruth Cornwall goes among these philosophical, kindly, hard-living people and gleans from them the stories of a life very remote from most of America. She respects these men and women, and they know it, and talk to her. What's more, they listen to her program more eagerly than any other on the air, and argue with her bitterly when she selects one version of an old story as against another version. But they like the way she makes them talk, over the air—and so thoroughly have they accepted her as one of themselves that they even forgive her for being a New York girl with a Vassar degree. But then, the code of the West is like that—a man's past is his own business.

rail of the cutter which he had commandeered single-handed, looking down at them and waving a gun in either fist.

"Stick your hands up and keep 'em up!" Alderman yelled furiously.

There were five guardsmen aboard the rum-runner. Four of them—Tuten, Hollingsworth, Lehman and Caudle—obeyed the order. The fifth, John Robinson, snatched up a wrench from the deck of the speed-boat and hurled it into the face of the man with the gun.

Alderman ducked, and the missile sailed on to smash a port in the cutter's deck house.

He raised his gun, and Robinson turned and dived overboard. A torrent of hot lead followed him as he went beneath the surface, but Robinson was a good swimmer and he knew what would be waiting for him when he came up. He went deep down, fighting his way under the rum-boat, and finally came out on the weather side, where he was out of sight of the man with the gun.

Here Robinson clung by his fingernails to the cracks in the side of the boat, and prayed that no shark would come swinging near by to notice his plight. Yet compared with the little man who stalked the deck of the commandeered Coast Guard cutter, a shark was a mild and friendly beast.

"Come back aboard your hell-ship, you scum!" he ordered the four remaining guardsmen. They had no choice for it, but clambered over the rail. Alderman was giving instructions to Weech, waving his gun . . .

The last to come was Lawrence Tuten, Boatswain's Mate. He managed to dip out of sight for a moment, snatch up a bottle of whisky from the broken cases, and dump its contents into the carburetor of the speed-boat. Afterwards he was never sure just why he had done it, but the idea struck him that it might be a good thing to try to put the rum-boat out of commission. It was a feeble and desperate effort, but its effects were to be far-reaching.

The Guardsmen and the Secret Service man were lined up in the stern sheets of the Coast Guard cutter, while Alderman stalked up and down before them, waving his brace of pistols.

"Go on below and smash the gas lines!" he was roaring at Weech. "I've got two of 'em already, and I'm going to blast the rest of 'em with their own guns and set fire to the tub!"

It was a pretty combination of charges that the rum-runner was laying himself open to—at first he had faced nothing worse than two to five years for violation of liquor laws, but now he had added murder, barratry, piracy, assault, to say nothing of attempted arson.

Weech slid down the engine-room hatch of the Coast Guard boat, and found Lamby moaning under the engines.

He kicked the guardsman into consciousness. "Smash the gasoline lines!" he ordered.

Lamby shook his head. "I—I can't move!" he moaned.

Weech didn't know his way around the engine room. He picked up a pipe-wrench and began to beat the wounded man. "Do what I say or I'll smash your skull!"

Lamby weakly tried to pull himself away from the other. His voice came faintly through the open hatch to the little group who waited in the stern sheets under the menacing guns of Alderman.

"I can't do it—not if you kill me!" screamed Lamby. "I can't move!"

Weech could waste no more time on the wounded man. He took the pipe-wrench and smashed blindly at the pipes and valves near him. By sheer luck he struck one of the gasoline lines which run between vacuum tanks and carburetors, and was rewarded by the spurting of gasoline.

"Got it!" he yelled triumphantly, and hoisted himself aloft.

He found Alderman alone on the speed-boat, but still covering the men on the cutter. "I got the engine room full of gasoline," reported Weech.

He was ordered to get Lamby up on deck. "He can't move, Horace. You crippled him. Let him lay . . ."

Alderman didn't like the looks of that. "You take this gun and go down and blow his head off!" he demanded.

Weech shook his head.

"Go on! You're in this as much as I am. Take the gun!"

"I can't hit nothing with a gun," complained Weech.

"If you're going to fire the boat that'll take care of the guy in the engine room."

The captive guardsmen listened to this dialogue helplessly. Webster tried to argue. He pointed out that it was insane to murder eight men over a cargo of liquor.

"That cargo's worth two thousand dollars!" said Alderman savagely. "And there'll be none of you to bear witness against me!"

It was the old doctrine of "dead men tell no tales." The man intended to shoot them down in cold blood, fire the cutter, and then speed away in his own boat. A blackened hulk would sink beneath the surface, and sharks would do the rest. No word of the crew of the CG 249 would ever get back to Fort Lauderdale.

"Hurry it up!" Alderman ordered. "Fire the boat!"

Weech was in the spirit of the thing by this time. He saw at last that they had a really good chance of getting away with it . . . cargo and all. Nothing ever could pin the crime on them, once this cutter went gas lines and thus had failed to empty the tanks as had been planned.

But one thought flickered in the brain of Victor Lamby. He knew that he was through—knew that there was no hope for him with his shattered spine.

But still duty urged him forward—the same impulse which had made him make a blind and foolhardy rush for the armory when the prisoner suddenly murdered his superior officer. The flame crept toward the gas . . .

Somehow—it is almost beyond human imagination—Coast Guardsman Victor Lamby hitched and fought his way across the oily, gasoline-soaked deck and beat out those menacing tongues of flame with his own hands, with his own body!

Then he passed out, a blackened, charred object—but a hero.

Up above, the madman's plans were nearly perfected. Robinson, the man who had hurled the wrench, had been hauled aboard and lined up with his comrades. Alderman was going to take no chances of a body floating back to shore—he knew that burned bodies sink to stay sunk.

Robert Webster, the mild-mannered and scholarly Secret Service operative, made another plea for the lives of himself and his fellows. "For the love of Heaven let us get into a small boat and pull for shore," he begged.

That gave Alderman a huge laugh. "You slob," he roared back. "I'm going to kill you first. You're one of those snoopers who sneak around trying to get something on good, decent citizens . . ."

Webster realized that his secret was out. "If you're going to fire the boat and run for it, hadn't you better start your own motor and get a safe distance away?" he shouted then.

He made the suggestion in hopes of saving them from the bullets of the madman. The flames beneath their feet would be bad enough, but to burn to death while lying wounded and helpless . . .

Alderman retorted that he wanted no suggestions from the Coast Guard and their like. But all the same, on second thought, he realized that the suggestion was a sane one. When the flames which, as he thought, would soon pour from the hold of the CG 249 were sweeping the cutter, his speed-boat would best be several lengths away.

He sent Weech below to start the motor, still keeping his gun trained on the men who stood in the stern sheets of the larger boat. A long delay came. The motor started, roared, and then died away. Tuten smiled grimly to himself. That whisky which he had dumped into the top of the carburetor had done the job.

Weech didn't know enough about gas engines to try draining the carburetor of the speed-boat. He fussed with the motor interminably. Once again he got it started . . .

Then it died. Alderman was fast losing patience. He turned to stare down into the hold of his own boat, and at that moment Special Agent Webster went into action.

He had stood helpless long enough before the guns of the killer. His pride was at stake. He had watched while two of the Coast Guards had been shot down in cold blood—and now, desperate and blind, he flung himself down to the deck of the rum-boat, and grappled with Alderman.

Hardly a step behind came Lawrence Tuten, followed by the others.

Now the attention of the madman had been distracted for a moment. It was a desperate chance against terrible odds, but they took it.

Webster grabbed Alderman's left hand, in which he was holding a .38. He tried a jiu-jitsu hold, twisting the arm back . . .

It was a noble try, but the odds were too great. Alderman, the wild and hairy little demon, jerked from his pocket the .45 which he had taken from the holster of his first victim, and pressing the muzzle against Webster's forehead he pulled the trigger.

Boatswain's Mate Tuten by this time had grabbed Alderman's other arm, and they wrestled across the deck. He was flung away by a quick shift on the part of the wiry little man.

Hollingsworth was the third Coast Guardsman to land on the deck of the rum-boat. He dived for the legs of Alderman, who raised his gun and sent a bullet through Hollingsworth's shoulder, flinging him backwards so that he toppled helpless into the water between the two boats, which were drifting apart.

Caudle, another of the Coast Guardsmen, by this time had dived head foremost into the hold of the rum-runner, where he was having a hand-to-hand battle with Weech.

into the fathomless depths of the sea with her cargo of dying men . . .

He lit a match and tossed it down into the engine-room hatch. It flickered . . . and caught suddenly as a bit of oily waste took fire!

Victor Lamby, the man who lay broken and beaten between the two engines of the cutter, was awakened from his death coma by the acrid smell of smoke. There were five gallons or so of gasoline sloshing in the hold—as luck would have it Weech had missed the main

of the situation still because of the two guns in his hands, stood like a wolf at bay—a sea wolf ready to rend its prey. In spite of the desperate sacrifice of Webster, in spite of Hollingsworth's brave attack, he still held the balance of power.

John Robinson, the fat, good-natured cook of the Coast Guard boat, because of his size was last over the rail of the cutter. Meantime, he had dashed into his own galley and come out with an ice-pick—the handiest weapon.

He hurled it, from the rail of the CG 249—and his aim did not fail. Straight and true the missile went, striking Alderman on the forehead just as he raised his gun to shoot down Tuten.

Alderman staggered, dazed by the force of the blow. He fired, blindly, and the bullet ripped across the waves beyond the boat.

But Robinson really went into action now. His long submersion in the water did not improve his temper. He leaped to the deck of the rum-boat, snatched up his ice-pick, and buried it six times in the chest of the would-be pirate!

Coast Guardsman Lehman in the interim had armed himself with a triangular boat-scraper, which he swung with such hearty good will upon the back of Alderman's skull that the man measured his length upon the deck.

All hands rushed to secure the remaining desperado, who came flying out of the forward hatch of the rum-boat, saw his partner lying helpless on the deck, and promptly dived overboard . . .

A stiff wind by this time had blown up from the east, and the mooring lines snapped. The two boats drifted apart.

Somehow, anyhow, the remaining guardsmen fished Hollingsworth out of the water where he had been paddling feebly with one arm. They lowered a dinghy which was on the deck of the rum-boat, and so got a line to the drifting cutter. Next they recaptured Weech, who was swimming out to sea.

It might have been better for Bob Weech if he had been able to make his escape and had gone on to take his chances with the Gulf Stream and the sharks. But he was hauled back aboard the Coast Guard cutter and put in irons.

Beside him on the deck lay Alderman, the quiet little man with the thick spectacles and the thick black hair on chest and arms. He, too, had been put in irons, for though wounded he still breathed.

Two prisoners in irons—Webster and Sanderlin stiffening under tarpaulins—Lamby and Hollingsworth dead or dying from their wounds—and the Coast Guard cutter disabled and drifting . . .

They were far off the regular course between Florida and Bimini now, with a whipping north-easterly gale howling around their ears. The CG 249 was disabled completely from Weech's deft work with the pipe-wrench, and the rum-boat was in almost as bad condition.

Commanding officers dead—half the crew disabled—the men aboard the CG 249 drifted helplessly down toward the Gulf of Mexico.

And then, over the horizon, like an answer to unspoken prayer, came the sharp prow of a ship . . .

The radio operator back at Fort Lauderdale couldn't understand why Boatswain Sanderlin didn't complete his message and stand by for orders. He spent a few minutes trying to call back to CG 249, and then reported to his superior officer.

"It's not like Sanderlin to be slipshod about a thing like that," the officers decided. They knew the course he had been given, which would take him to Bimini with his official passenger. They knew the drift of the Gulf Stream, and the force of the rising gale . . .

Finally a captain put his finger on a certain spot on the chart. "Go get 'em," he barked gruffly.

That was how Lieutenant Beckwith Jordan happened to come splashing through the gale, straight as a ruled line to where the helpless Coast Guard cutter drifted with her captive rum-boat.

Horace Alderman's desperate attempt to beat a rap for liquor-smuggling by murdering eight men and burning their vessel, had taken less than three-quarters of an hour. But Boatswain Sanderlin's suddenly cut off radio message had contained enough information to set a course for the rescuers, and now everything was under control again. An officer—a real commissioned officer—walked the deck of the CG 249.

Lieutenant Jordan looked down at the hairy little man who had tried and failed. He knew him as a respectable business man of Tampa, a grandfather, a church member, and a member of the Chamber of Commerce!

"Mr. Alderman," he said, "I'll really enjoy seeing you hung."

But there still remained the law's delays. Public sympathy was raised for Alderman because of his civic standing in the community. He only had acted in self-defense after the Coast Guardsmen fired on his boat, said some. People pointed to his wife, his five children and two grandchildren . . .

There was a trial, where the Coast Guardsmen swore to the black and horrible truth of that 45 minutes aboard the CG 249. Mute witnesses were Sanderlin, Webster, Lamby and Hollingsworth, the four dead men. Weech saved his life by turning State's Evidence, but he was permitted to spend the rest of it only behind the bars of the Florida state prison.

After a long, drawn out legal battle, Horace Alderman, in spite of the tears and pleas of his wife, his daughters and granddaughters, was sentenced to hang.

Here another snag was struck. The State of Florida refused to hang him, although the Federal government prescribes hanging as the penalty for a capital offense against the government. But Florida had just adopted the electric chair as a means of execution.

"No electric chair for Horace Alderman," said the Coast Guard grimly.

Alderman waited in a cool and airy cell, amusing himself by writing long letters to his family, and by intensively going in for religion. But in spite of his pious frame of mind, he was dragged from his cool and airy cell one dull Florida winter's morning, and taken to Fort Lauderdale.

There at the Coast Guard base, in sight of the windows of the radio room where had been received the oddly cut-off message of Boatswain Sanderlin, Horace Alderman looked upon a gibbet erected in the doorway of an airplane hangar.

He whimpered and wailed and cried upon the God whose creed he had forgotten, to perform a miracle and save him. But the would-be pirate was doomed.

He stepped off into thin air before an audience which included every one of the men he had planned to murder in the midst of the Gulf Stream—and the last things he saw were the stern faces of the buddies of the four men he had slain.

In the radio room at Fort Lauderdale, a young dispatcher tapped his key and sent a message into Nowhere . . .

"Calling Boatswain Sanderlin," he said. "Reporting mission fulfilled—everything okay . . ."

He broke off suddenly. "I wish Sanderlin could tune in on that message, wherever he is," he said aloud.

Lieutenant Beckwith Jordan pulled a green shade at the window, shutting away the sight of the twitching, hooded thing which dangled from the gallows.

"How do you know he can't?" snapped the Lieutenant.

HARRY RICHMAN

As Seen Under The MIKEroscope

By Lee Mortimer

Harry Richman is known as "The Beau of Broadway." He gets that monicker for two reasons. First—his clothes are the most startling in town. Second—more than any man in New York, he finds his name romantically linked with members of the so-called frail sex.

Richman doesn't talk about his clothes. They speak for themselves. But as for affairs of the heart, he says he doesn't plan to marry again until he retires from the stage. And that won't be until he has paid up his million-dollar annuity. He was married once. Also divorced.

During the past three years Harry Richman has been engaged—according to the gossip columnists—to at least five hundred women. Among them was Clara Bow. Richman doesn't like it. But the ladies do. Most of them are proud to be mentioned with him. That's because he is very much of a ladies' man.

The Beau of Broadway was born 800 miles away from the Main Stem—in Cincinnati—on August 10th, 1895. He didn't see Broadway until twenty years later.

Harry's stage career started in 1911. He made his debut then as a member of the team of Remington and Reichman, violin and piano. He was the Reichman. He played the piano. Remington and Reichman first appeared before the footlights at an amateur night in Chicago. Fewer over-ripe tomatoes were hurled at them than at the other tyros on the bill. So they obtained a contract.

New York first saw the young singer as a member of the Jewel City trio direct from the Panama-Pacific Exposition in Frisco in 1915. But he didn't hit the Palace Theater until six years later. That was in 1921 when he appeared with Mae West. He played the piano, sang and did bits. This was the same year he first headlined, on the old Orpheum circuit.

Stardom came in 1926. He was in George White's Scandals when New York finally decided that he belonged in the top rank of theatrical luminaries. He has remained there ever since.

Harry Richman is one of the oldest radio entertainers in point of service in the country. He sang over WJLN in New York in 1921 when he was appearing at the old "Wigwam." He has been on the air steadily ever since; for many years he broadcast from the Club Richman.

The singer seldom eats meat. His chief article of diet consists of fresh vegetables and fruit juices. He finds that a vegetable diet best helps him keep his health and his voice.

His favorite color in wearing apparel is green, but he goes in for anything loud and flashy. You may see him in a light tan suit, size 38; dark blue shirt; cuffless trousers; and tan suede shoes, size 7 1/2.

He wears nothing in bed. This makes him sleep more soundly.

Harry is athletically inclined. He flies his own plane, and goes in for swimming and boating. Sports keep him looking young. He appears eight years younger than he really is. Not a trace of grey is in his black hair, which he keeps well greased, but not enough to take out the curls.

He smokes cigarets incessantly. They don't bother his throat. He is a very light drinker. When he drinks it's mostly beer. His greatest passion is swearing. He can swear all evening without repeating himself once. Finds that it gives him immense relief. He gets so tired being the suave fellow.

Harry will not play in any cabaret in New York City unless it bears his own name.

He weighs 175 pounds and is five feet, eleven and a half inches tall. At first glance you think he is several inches shorter. Jewelry is a passion with him. He wears too much of it; but it's nothing to what he's going to wear when he gets the million-dollar annuity all paid up. Then he's really going to live.

HARRY RICHMAN

The Terror of the Mike

Boners . . . they are the dread, the nightmare. The creeping horror in the life of every radio artist and announcer! No one who speaks over the air, no matter how careful he may be, ever can be perfectly sure that sometime, somehow, he won't slip up and give the audience a shock, or at best a bit of entertainment that is absolutely impromptu, original and unexpected.

Frederic William Wile, noted Washington commentator, once let his pince-nez glasses fall to the floor just after opening a program with "Good evening, my friends." The next thing the listeners heard—as Wile stooped to rescue the things—was: "— those glasses!" It was only at the close of his scintillating political talk that the poor fellow, met at the door by a wild-eyed station manager, learned that the station had been flooded with telegrams of protest—the telephone wires cluttered with indignant calls!

Don Ball, when an announcer for WABC, once had to cut in on the end of a remote-control program with the announcement "This is the Columbia Broadcasting System." Something went wrong, and he got the signal three times to say the same thing. The fourth time he said: "For the fourth and last time, this is the Columbia Broadcasting System"—and of course, THAT had to be the only announcement that went out!

George Hicks once said "Pill of Princeton" when he should have said "Prince of Pilsen"—and once again he announced a waltz number as being entitled "Jump the Waltz" when these words originally had been used merely to signify that the waltz was to be eliminated from the program!
