Medal of Merit

CAPTAIN HENRY brought his Show Boat back down the river last Thursday.

To us it sounded delightfully like the good old Show Boat of 1933 and 1934. The crew was new, the mythical ship was afloat in Hollywood instead of New York, but the spirit of the program had the lilt and zoom of old.

We who listen can thank the Captain Henry who is Charles Winninger for that spirit. It is no secret that the old program began to flounder when Charlie Winninger left the Show Boat for a new career in the movies. The vigor of his voice, the upswing of his "It's only the Beeee-ginnning," and the rollicking touch he imparted to even the slightest proceedings were sadly missed. Listeners complained that, without Winninger, it wasn't the same old show.

Well, Charlie Winninger is back. Once again he is directing scenes, helping unfortunate young men, lending a spry hand to this tender romance or that, and selling with all his might and main his favorite coffee. He is back with Jack Haley, Thomas L. Thomas, Patricia Wilder, Nadine Conner, Virginia Verrill, Warren Hull, and Meredith Willson.

These are bright talents in the world of radio, but it is Charlie Winninger's gift that he can polish them to an even more dazzling luster. For remember, he has done it before.

Recall those early days when his crew were Lanny Ross, Muriel Wilson, Annette Hanshaw, Tiny Ruffner, Conrad Thibault, Rosaline Greene, Molasses and January. There, indeed, was young love and ambition. Some climbed to amazing heights and some faded quietly into broadcasting history, but all glittered brightly enough as long as Charlie Winninger was at the helm of their brave little ship.

Yes, radio has a new Show Boat and a young, untried crew, but the skipper is old in wisdom and wiles. Those who brought him back to radio's most romantic river believe he will do again what he did before. Those who loved the old Show Boat hope so, too.

Captain Henry is back on the river in a shining new packet. With the magic that is his special talent he has already painted a glittering and colorful picture on the curtains of a million minds; he has peopled his scenes with virile and alluring personalities. He has begun to give to a nation hot and weary from the urgencies of strikes and wars and violence the means of happy escape into crinolined yesterdays.

Radio Guide's medal of merit is reserved for programs and performers who render great service to listeners. It is our belief that Charles Winninger and his Show Boat are rendering such service. We give, therefore, to Charles Winninger and the Show Boat, our highest award, the Radio Guide Medal of Merit.

lief that Charles Winninger and his Show Boat are rendering such service. We give, therefore, to Charles Winninger and the Show Boat, our highest award, the Radio Guide Medal of Merit.

Charles Winninger: His Show Boat wins Radio Guide's Medal of Merit!

"DIXIE"

A SAD MINSTREL ONCE WROTE A
SONG TO MAKE MEN LAUGH—
BUT IT MADE THEM KILL INSTEAD!

BY JAMES H. STREET

IT IS a cruel shock for us unreconstructed southerners to learn that our beloved "Dixie"—the anthem that makes us whoop and yell and cut crazy capers—really was written as a gag song by a Yankee minstrel man.

And it was written in New York, sung first in New York! Now get ready for the saddest blow of all, for— if some historians are to be believed—the original Dixieland is not our dominion of cotton and corn likker, tobacco and 'taters, mud and mortgages and mules, but is a grubby little patch of earth in old New York!

Before you take your pen in hand and write a blistering letter to the editor, hear me, please! I'm a Mississippian and it hurts me more than it does you to write this. Also, the story that Dixie was named for the Dix bills or "Dixies" of New Orleans certainly is credible. But the contention of some historians that Dixie got its name from a Manhattan farm is worthy of consideration, and the story is worth telling.

Old Dixie was a man, a good old man. A jolly Dutchman, he went to Africa's Congo basin, bought some Krumen slaves and brought them to New Amsterdam in America.

HE RECKONED he could grow tobacco on the rocky land of Manhattan, so he bought a farm out on the Island, on the banks of a little river named Haarlem. But the winters were too long and the winds were too keen and old man Dixie's slaves couldn't earn their keep. Then, too, there was talk that England would take New Amsterdam. So old man Dixie shipped his slaves to the Carolina country, sold them on the block, and Dixie's Negroes were sent to the tobacco plantations of the Piedmont section, where the sun beat down, where the days were long and the work was hard.

The Krumen were unhappy. They wanted to get back to the Haarlem. And one day, a blistering day when the sun grinned and blazed on their bare black backs, the Dixie Negroes began hoeing a long furrow.

"I wish I wuz back on Dixie's lan'," chanted one, as he scraped his hoe.

"Ol' man Dixie wuz a fine ol' man—Lawdy, Lawdy," echoed another.

Up one row—"wish I wuz back on Dixie's lan'"—down the next—"Ol' man Dixie wuz a fine ol' man"—"Lawdy, Lawdy, didn't have to wu'k on Dixie's lan'"—"Caus' ol' Dixie wuz a fine ol' man."

A work song it became—a plow song, a hoe song. The other Negroes took it up, scraping their hoes, plowing with their mules, singing—"Wish I wuz back on Dixie's lan'."

THE original Dixie Negroes died, but their melody lingered on. The English took New Amsterdam and made it New York. The Colonies made the United States. The cotton-gin came, America became a bustling, lusty little republic. Slavery was barred in the North. Men spoke of abolition. Some spoke of wars. There came strange words—secession! Confederacy! Everything changed, except the old work song—"Wish I wuz back on Dixie's lan'."

Then came Daniel Decatur Emmet—a funnyman! Born in Mt. Vernon,

Ohio, he joined the Bryant minstrels and soon was the best endman of his day. They called them "walk-around men" in those days, for the comics would crack a few gags, sing a ditty and do a dance called the "walk-around." Incidentally the famous "Jim Crow" was a walk-around clog!

Dan Emmet had toured the South, and was back in New York rehearsing for his next season. The year was 1859. America was too busy worrying about a lanky statesman named Abe Lincoln to bother about a minstrel man named Dan Emmet. The "funnyman" was sitting one twilight with his wife in their Bowery hotel. He told her he needed a new song for his next season. Something gay, he said, something that would make folks laugh.

It was raining. A cold, dreary New York rain. The drops beat a patter on his window. The horses' hoofs beat a bass. A melancholy twilight—gloomy. Men's hearts get heavy at such times. They didn't call them the blues in those days, but that's what Dan Emmet, the Yankee minstrel, had.

He thought of the warm fields of the South—the miles of waving tobacco—the fields of cotton, green, pink and white.

"Wish I was down South," he told his wife. "Down in the land of cotton. Old times there are not forgotten—"

Suddenly, he turned and faced his wife. What was that ditty he had heard the slaves sing at their work? What was it? Something about Dixie! "Wish I wuz back on Dixie's lan'!"

GET a quill," he told his wife. "Get paper!"

"I've got it," shouted Dan Emmet, the funnyman. "A patter song! A song to make people laugh, and love!"

Rapidly he wrote. His wife made him throw away the first verse, believing it too ribald. But the second—"Way down South where I was born—early on a frosty morn, "Lookaway."

Hour after hour he wrote, there in that gloomy little room while the rain beat a patter and horses' hoofs pounded a bass. And on September 19, 1859, he sang his "Dixie" first at a performance of the Bryant Minstrel Show at 472 Broadway. That same season he sang it first in the South in New Orleans, and the crowd cheered him to an echo.

They laughed! It was a funny song—a catchy thing. Dan Emmet didn't know he had written about New York. All he knew was that he had something there—there in that gay, frothy little "walk-around" tune called "Dixie."

He clogged and he jigged. He 'coon-jined and he cake-walked. He clapped his hands and strutted. "Buckwheat cakes and Injun batter, make you fat and a little fatter—hooray!" The trap drums rattled, the flutes shrilled gayly—"I wish I wuz in Dixie—hooray!"

BUT the echo of the trap drums waned into the ominous boom-boom—boom-boom-boom of bass drums! The flutes' shrill notes were taken up by the fifes! The trumpets became bugles! There was sound of marching feet! There was war!

The South forgot the gay patter-song of "Dixie" for a while. It ceased laughing. The cake-walks, the 'coon-jines, the clogs and the jigs were stilled, and the feet that had danced them began tromping to the dreary dance of death.

The Secession convention was called. There were many speeches. The folks came from miles around to see Jefferson Davis made president of the Confederacy. They believed Dixie was the Confederacy! The crowd grew tired of speeches. Children cried. The dogs got restless. The band played the Confederacy's first anthem, "The Bonny Blue Flag," over and over, but

AMERICA, BRITAIN AGAIN VIE FOR THE WORLD'S MOST COVETED SAILING HONORS & "AMERICA'S CUP"—SATURDAY, JULY 31

BY

KEN W. PURDY

Veteran Sailor-Adventurer Cameron King—He'll assist MBS Ace Announcer David Driscoll in airing the event

IN AUGUST, 1851, when good Queen Victoria ruled Great Britain and Great Britain ruled the seas, Commodore John C. Stevens of the New York Yacht Club sailed to England in the schooner "America" to challenge the best vessels in British waters. English yachtsmen showed little interest in the offer, the reason most commonly quoted being that in a chance encounter soon after the "America's" arrival, she had run away from one of the best English boats. Stevens was determined to have a race, however, and posted a bond of $50,000 in gold to back his challenge.

Then, as now, $50,000 would buy a lot of sails, paint, and such odds and ends, and the Royal Yacht Squadron of London, arbiter of all things pertaining to sailing in England, finally took up the challenge—on the condition that the "America" race not one boat, but fourteen! On August 22, 1851, the race was run, with Victoria herself among the thousands of spectators who saw the "America" lead a procession of six schooners and eight cutters around the Isle of Wight to finish first by eighteen minutes and an embarrassing expanse of blue water.

The prize was a tall silver ewer, designed in the fantastically ornate style of the period to resemble an overgrown water-pitcher more than anything else, worth a bare $500, and regarded as just another run-of-the-mill piece of useless silverware, to be tucked away in a trophy case and forgotten.

Today, that not particularly outstanding specimen of Victorian silversmith's art is the "America's Cup," the ternational America's Cup race will be under way—with all America watching and listening!

most famous sporting-trophy in the world. Millions of dollars have been spent in contests over it, hundreds of men have fought over it, dreamed about it, and in some cases made its possession their life's ambition.

Most astonishing thing of all, the cup stands today where it has stood since 1851—in the New York Yacht Club trophy-room! Sixteen times the best of British sailors, amateur and professional alike, have brought the best sailing-craft that money could build to America in pursuit of the "old mug." Sixteen times they have sailed away without it.

On Saturday, July 31, British yachtsmen will pile an acre of snowy canvas on the slim masts of as perfect a racing sloop as centuries of boat-building has taught them to make, a cannon will boom dully on a referee's boat off Newport, R. I., and the seventeenth inof the London Times. George Hicks will man the NBC microphones, with Kenneth S. M. Davidson of the Stevens Institute of Technology at his side to be sure no point of the ancient art of sailing escapes his attention. David Driscoll, crack Mutual Broadcasting System announcer, will cover for that network, and Driscoll, too, will be assisted by an expert observer: Cameron King, Inspector of Registry for Lloyd's of London and devotee of a sport that might be called the sport of kings—except that few kings can afford it!

Years ago, perhaps before yacht owners had discovered the device of incorporating a private vessel to cut expenses, an American multi-millionaire was asked how much it cost to maintain an ocean-going steam pleasure boat.

"My dear fellow," was the bleak and cheerless answer, "if you have to wonder how much it will cost you—you can't afford it!"

Much the same story might be built around international racing of the big Class J boats that make up America's Cup challengers and defenders. The two biggest names in racing today are Harold S. Vanderbilt and T. O. M. Sopwith. To an American, "Vanderbilt" and "millions" mean the same thing. Sopwith is not as old a name in England's golden hierarchy, but if you're up on aviation history, you've heard of the Sopwith Camel, the famous English fighting-plane of World War days, and you know what the name Sopwith has meant in the world of English finance since.

Still, the parallel is not perhaps exact. A sea-going yacht, capable of carrying a crew of fifteen men and a houseful of passengers half-way around the world, can cost $500,000—and up. But once it's built and in the water, it's good for years and years of service. Of course, it may cost you $100,000 a year for maintenance, what

With the highest-priced naval architects in the world burning the midnight oil over their drafting-boards, with every known refinement of the ship-builder's art constantly being brought into play, improvements are inevitably numerous. A slight change in sail rig, a minute alteration in hull contour, a slightly shifted center of gravity—any of these things may make the difference between defeat and victory. Last year's best boat may not be good enough to get into the preliminary trials this year—and there's nothing to do about it except build a new one. And you won't do that, if you're wise, unless you have about $250,000 you don't know what else to do with. And even he came closest. He won the first two races, and the world thought the old mug was going to be lifted at last.

But he lost the last three, and that was that. Sir Thomas sailed away, saying he'd be back again. And he was, of course, in 1930. But "Shamrock V" lost to "Enterprise," and not long afterward Sir Thomas Lipton was dead. Strangely enough, Lipton was not a sailor when he first challenged at the turn of the century. He did like yacht racing, but only as a diversion. Strangest of all, the man who put up the most determined fight for the America's Cup, who gave to it more money, more time, and more effort than anyone else in the history of the

The English boat, "Cambria," skippered by James Ashbury, was asked to race the entire New York Yacht Club fleet—or go home without a race. The bitter complaints of the British sailors were answered with Yankee terseness. Hadn't the old "America" sailed a fleet of fourteen boats out of sight? Very well, then, let "Cambria" do it. But "Cambria" didn't. The race was won by the American "Magic."

There was some improvement later. The next challenger, "Livonia," was faced by only four boats! The Americans had decided that it was possible to provide for all contingencies by picking the two best light-weather boats and the two best in heavy going, selecting one to pit against the lonely challenger according to the weather. The cup stayed in America. It wasn't until 1885 that we sailed a single boat against the invaders.

What is there in the sight of two big sailboats rolling around a measured course at perhaps 10 or 12 miles per hour that periodically arouses two na-with fuel and food, taxes, master's and crew's salaries, depreciation and one thing and another, but ten years from the day it slides down the ways it will still command respect in the ports of the world, from Shanghai to London.

NOT so a racing-sloop. It's perfectly possible—and indeed, no rarity—to spend a year or more, a fortune that would keep you in luxury for the rest of your life, and enough worry to knock ten years off that life, on an America's Cup challenger or defender that will sail in international competition—and never enter the race again! Worse than that, you may be defeated in the trials, and never sail at all.

Reason for the painfully short international careers of America's Cup racers lies in the intense competition that has flourished between England and America for nearly a century now.

then you won't, if you follow the example of men like Harold Vanderbilt and T. O. M. Sopwith. Their boats—"Ranger" and "Endeavour II"—represent not their personal fortunes alone, but the pooled resources of American and British syndicates.

When they heel into the breezes on Saturday, their names, and the names of their owners, may be on everyone's lips, but it's a safe bet there'll be another name in their hearts—the name of Sir Thomas Lipton, and his "Shamrocks." Sir Thomas was the most persistent, the most sporting and the best-loved yachtsman ever to enter the race. He offered the tenth challenge for the cup, in 1899, with "Shamrock I" and he sailed for the last time, in 1930, with "Shamrock V." He lost every time. In 1920, with probably more Americans pulling for him than for the American defender, "Resolute," race, was never a member of the top yachting organization of Great Britain, the Royal Yacht Squadron. The reason? Well, you may recall that Lipton started life a considerable distance behind scratch; and you know he made his fortune out of tea. English aristocracy could never quite get over the barrier of the word "tradesman."

WHETHER he was entitled to fly the pennant of the Royal Yacht Squadron from his challengers or not, Sir Thomas Lipton brought a high sense of sportsmanship to a contest that has sometimes stood in need of it. The elaborate courtesies and traditional etiquette that mark the race today were not always so much in evidence.

In 1870, for instance, when the first English challenger came over to pick up the silver ewer, the ancient code of the eye for the eye was in vogue.

tions to fever heat? If you don't know, you will when you hear the first broadcasts on Saturday. The thing to remember is that men have sailed since the first savage rigged a piece of bark on a raft, and that here are the two finest sailing-vessels in the whole wide world, struggling not only for supremacy, but for a tradition, and for a trophy that any yachtsman would cheerfully give his soul to possess. And incidentally, you'll have a better view of the races from an easy chair beside your radio set than you would have if you were actually on the water, for to a yachtsman, a race is ideally patrolled only when spectator-boats are kept so far away they're practically out of sight on the horizon!

America's Cup Race will be heard Saturday, July 31. Please refer to our Saturday programs on pages 42 and 43

HELEN MENKEN — SWEET

THE red-headed tornado in the rehearsal broadcasting-room was furious. She was telling the other actors in the room exactly what she thought of radio scripts and script-writers. One of them nudged her and whispered, "The mike is turned on. They can hear every word you're saying in the control-room."

Her voice rose. "Is that so?" she said. "I'm glad of it. I want them to hear what I'm saying. I wouldn't say anything behind anyone's back that I wouldn't say to his face."

That story gives you the underlying key-notes of Helen Menken's character: honesty and a good, hot Irish temper. On Broadway, Helen Menken, who has been bringing her enchantingly husky voice and superb mike technique to the radio serial, "Her Second Husband," is considered one of the greatest of stars, for she made a hit in such plays as "The Captive," "The Old Maid," "Mary of Scotland," and "Seventh Heaven."

Even if Helen Menken were not a Broadway star, even if she were not a radio star, she would still be a great personality, and I would be trying to find some excuse for writing about her. For she is the most feminine, the most inconsistent, the most maddening, the most exasperating and the most fascinating personality I've met in ages. In that case I'd simply call my story "Portrait of a Human Being," and present her exactly as she is. Which is what I'm going to do, anyway. I want you to know her in all her bigness and in all her pettiness, to know her as a human being.

IN ONE breath she'll tell you "Temperament is old-fashioned. It's not sane, and it's ninety percent temper. Artists and actors have no more right to temperament than ribbon-clerks. How do you suppose a ribbon-clerk feels when, after she has carefully cut a few yards of pink ribbon for Madame, Madame says, 'What did you mean by cutting pink ribbon? It was blue ribbon I wanted!' The clerk knows perfectly well that Madame asked for pink ribbon, but she dares not remind Madame of that. Don't you suppose that ribbon-clerk would like to say what she really thinks? If she can control her temper, why can't actresses do the same thing?"

This is the same Helen Menken who, when she was appearing in the Pulitzer play, "The Old Maid," on Broadway, sent at the end of the second act for the manager, the assistant manager and everyone else connected with the supervision of the play.

"The theater is very cold," she told them, "and I'm wearing a thin gown. Unless you heat the stage immediately I won't go on with the next act."

BUT, Miss Menken," they protested, "it's impossible to heat the stage in the few minutes that will elapse before your next cue. We'll heat it as soon as possible."

"Then I don't go on," Helen Menken said.

When the curtain rose for the next act, the manager and the assistant manager were still uncertain as to what was going to happen, and were debating as to whether they should make an announcement that Helen Menken was ill and couldn't go on with her performance. It was manifestly impossible to inform the audience that their star had waxed temperamental and that they would have to take time out for heating the stage before going on with the play.

But back in her dressing-room Helen Menken had had a change of heart. She realized that she had asked for the impossible, and when her cue came she went on the stage.

"It got very lonely in my dressing-room," she told me, winking one dark-brown eye. I knew at that moment that no one can kid Helen Menken, not even Helen Menken herself.

Helen Menken was born Helen Meinken, the daughter of an Irish mother and a father in whose veins runs the blood of both French and German ancestors. Judith Anderson, the stage actress who appeared with her in "The Old Maid," used to call her "The Irish Menk" because of her Irish temper. However, she always gets over her temper quickly and she never harbors a grievance or holds a grudge or plays the role of the silent martyr.

As a child she was one of the worst spitfires who ever appeared on the stage, and because of her extreme impulsiveness, she was a disturbing force in every theater in which she appeared, from the time when, at the age of four, she went on the stage in "Midsummer Night's Dream."

AT SIX she almost broke Ned Wayburn's heart by breaking up one of his most spectacular numbers. She was playing a sea-shell coming out of the sea, and with a group of other children she was supposed to march up a ladder onto the stage. As the smallest of the children, Helen was to walk up the ladder first, with another girl on the step just below her. Everything had been carefully rehearsed, so that every movement of the children made was perfectly timed.

As she walked up to the topmost step of the ladder, Helen caught sight of her mother and father in the balcony and suddenly and unexpectedly she took a bow. As she bowed, her back hit the face of the little girl behind her; the other child faltered and toppled slightly backwards; and like a row of wooden soldiers, all the children toppled back.

When Helen walked onto the stage and looked around for the other children, she found that she was the only sea-shell there. By her impulsive bow she had ruined the whole number.

Back in the dressing-room, Ned Wayburn, furious, faced the group.

"Who did that?" he yelled. "Who spoiled that number?"

At first no one answered, but Helen felt the eyes of the other children boring into her, so she admitted she was to blame. She was fired immediately.

A few years later, when she was playing Pete, a boy, in "Shepherd of the Hills," the director said disdainfully: "For a boy, you've got the fattest legs I've ever known. We'll have to do something to shadow your legs down."

With the help of greasepaint, he began to paint perpendicular stripes running all the way down her legs. In a fury she turned on him. "Don't dare touch my legs," she screamed. "Why can't you leave them alone? Don't you know that boys sometimes have fat legs?"

"Yours are too fat," he persisted. And in spite of the fact that she called him every name she could think of, he stood firm. When she appeared on the stage, her legs were more striped than the body of a zebra.

At the age of twelve, in a vaudeville act with her brother-in-law, Wilfred Clarke, she played a forty-five-year-old woman. They quarreled continually, and one day as punishment for her rebelliousness he made her walk five miles to a shrine outside of San Antonio, Texas, while the rest of the company rode there on a sightseeing trip.

Helen Menken was furious, but the final straw came when he violated her sense of artistic integrity and disagreed with her about a scene involving the locking of a door. He wanted her to take the key out of the door, hold it up to the audience, and then put it into her glove.

"I'll take the key out of the door," she told him, "and put it into my glove, but under no circumstances will I hold it up to the audience. I wouldn't dream of going through such an obvious bit of business."

Annoyed at the presumption of this twelve-year-old child, Clarke said threateningly, "You'll do as I say if you want to hold your job."

THE money meant a great deal to Helen, but doing things her way meant more.

"You can keep your job," she told him, and marched out.

Fortunately, she succeeded in getting a job with a stock company that was passing through Dallas, Texas, at the time.

She is not afraid to admit these things or anything else about herself. She is disturbingly honest about everything—even about her age, saying frankly that she is thirty-four. "Why shouldn't I admit it?" she told me. "I've been on the stage thirty years, and anyone who wants to could look up the records."

Like the heroine of her radio script,

Helen Menken has been married twice. Her first marriage to Humphrey Bogart, the actor, ended in divorce, and she's now married to Dr. Henry Templeton Smith, an eye doctor.

Asked about her second marriage, she says defiantly: "I haven't met anybody who has not been married twice. All my friends have been married twice. I always say, 'The first time, if your marriage fails, not your fault. The second time, your fault!'"

She takes a tremendous interest in her husband's work. Noticing that I wore glasses, she said, "You're myopic, aren't you?" And took all sting out of the word by adding, "Isn't it strange; people who are near-sighted have the most beautiful eyes?"

Although on the stage she gives the illusion of beauty, she is not really beautiful, for her face is covered with freckles. Though her mouth is gay, her eyes are sad. She wears gaiety as other women wear a silken garment, and yet underneath the gaiety there is a muted note of sadness. Somewhere at some time something hit her very hard, but she got over it, and nothing again will ever have the power to strike her down.

Her amazing honesty was shown when against the advice of those who said that the play might exert a harmful influence on young, emotional girls, Helen Menken made up her mind to play Irene in "The Captive," a powerful story about a woman who falls under the spell of an older woman of strange, unnatural charm.

FROM the beginning, it seemed impossible that Deanna Durbin should escape. It always happened in Hollywood. It always happened when the glorious luck of teen-age fame touched a Hollywood child.

And now it has happened. Deanna Durbin's Cinderella days are over and the magic hour of midnight is past. Now she must fight, or have her parents fight for her, to escape the legal red tape which threatens to ensnare the child singer.

For this blue-eyed, sweet-singing child has become as valuable as vaults packed with gold; and as always happens, men are willing to go to battle for gold.

So Deanna isn't singing any more, not this summer, at any rate. Perhaps the legal actions may have something to do with it, perhaps not. On the other hand . . .

"DEANNA DURBIN ADOPTED BY HER OWN PARENTS"

That is the newspaper headline which recently screamed at California readers. Let's see what it means. By this legal maneuver, Deanna's mother becomes, with the complete approval of the law, her social guardian; and

"Sorry. You're a nice kid, but not the type for show business."

It was then that Agent Jack Sherrill took Deanna in hand. He took her to beauty shops patronized by the stars. He took her to dress shops that specialized in smart clothes for children. He made her into the sort of girl who would fit into "show business."

Then came the audition for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

That audition is a part of the quarrel now in the papers filed in Los Angeles courts by the agents—each of whom says, "I arranged it."

To those of us to whom life is a simple matter of going about routine chores, the importance of an audition is hard to understand. To the actor or actress, it is a key to the gates of paradise. So, by custom, the person who arranges for an important man to listen to an ambitious but unimportant singer is entitled to a part of the salary the person who is auditioning may receive as a result.

Mr. Marchetti says he arranged that audition and asks half the agent's commission—a verbal contract made in the presence of witnesses, he alleges, by Mr. Sherrill. Mr. Sherrill denies that

Why Deanna Durbin Quit Singing

STARDOM MADE HER RICH—BUT IT ALSO MADE HER PREY TO AGENTS' LAWSUITS!

Deanna's father becomes her business guardian.

Actually, such action in behalf of a minor is a customary legal action in Hollywood. But there are those who say such a step would not have been taken were it not for the unhappy probability that Deanna herself might be haled into court.

What is the nature of the thing which threatens the peace of mind of the child singer who has been acclaimed as the greatest musical prodigy since Patti? Specifically, it is a complaint common in only two places in America: Broadway and Hollywood. It is a complaint common wherever actors can be bought for buttons in one instant and demand the gold out of your teeth the next. And where men called agents handle the business affairs of actors and peddle their clients' box-office personalities exactly as other business men peddle pigs or potatoes.

Like those other brokers, Hollywood's peddlers have disputes and arguments, and as often as not the innocent cause of their fury is the person most damaged. Look at the bitter legal battle which must have left its mark on Freddy Bartholomew. Shirley Temple's career has precipitated at least one major court battle.

IN DEANNA'S case, two agents present rival claims. It is as simple as that. Agent Jack Sherrill is Deanna's old friend and Hollywood gives him credit for putting her where she is. But Agent Milo Marchetti has filed court papers claiming half the fee paid Agent Sherrill.

The case isn't new. Filed last year, it was docketed and postponed several times. As this is written, it has not been terminated. Until it is, the future that is Miss Durbin's must rest under its cloud.

That future looks bright today, beckoning with generous fingers to the little lady whose voice has been called so remarkable. Yet, hardly more than yesterday, it was far different.

When movie executives gave Deanna a car, Rufus LeMaire (left), producer, and Jack Sherrill congratulated her. Sherrill gets a fee as Deanna's agent—but Milo Marchetti wants a part of it!

Her father, if you do not remember the story, was in poor health and unable to work. The little Durbin family eked out its existence on the slender salary of Deanna's schoolteacher sister. Much of that salary went toward paying for Deanna's voice lessons.

Frequently, the youngster protested that it "wasn't fair" for the others to give up and do without things, but the invariable answer to her plaint was, "When you are famous, you can make it up to us."

When she was famous . . . She dreamed of that day, painting her bright thoughts of triumphant sallies into a hospitable world with the gaudy colors of a child's imagination. Then, when an opportunity came one night to sing at the famous Trocadero restaurant, she knew that at last her day was dawning.

Undoubtedly, she went into her song that night with too great a load on her shoulders. The memory of her father's thin face and the knowledge of his ebbing health may have caused her voice to falter, her throat to tighten. Or possibly the sight of so many great movie faces before her gave a very young girl a very bad case of stage fright. It all came to a climax at the evening's end when she heard the bitter and disheartening words:

"the plaintiff did anything whatsoever or rendered any service which resulted in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer employing Edna Mae Durbin."

If the audition had failed, there would have been no suit. But it succeeded, and Deanna found herself employed at a comfortable salary.

SOON, though, she learned what everyone who seeks to get into the movies must learn: that a contract does not mean success or even security. For months passed, and still more months, and she was given nothing to do. Finally, they put her in one unimportant short subject. But her contract expired before the subject was released. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer let her go.

Jack Sherrill says that breaking the news of her release to Deanna was the hardest thing, in a hard business, that he ever had to do.

"I didn't know how to go about it," he confesses. "I just didn't know what to say. She was so proud of that contract, so happy at being able to repay her family for what they had done. The whole thing meant so much to her . . . too much for anything to mean to a kid just entering her teens."

"I called for her that day and took her up to my office. She was happy and chatting away about her lesson, and then, all of a sudden, I guess her kid intuition told her something was haywire. She looked at me with those big eyes of hers and said: 'There isn't anything the matter, is there, Mr. Sherrill? I haven't said anything I shouldn't have?'"

"I'd have traded places with my barber that minute. I just couldn't come out cold and break it to her. I began to talk to her about show business. I told her it was the most thrilling business in the world . . . but the most heartbreaking. I pointed out how some of the big fellows of today had struggled for their success, and how anyone who wanted to stay in the show world had to learn to take it on

Big-name batoneers conduct series of concerts for MBS. Tommy Dorsey (above) will be aired Coast to Coast July 24-25. Others: Dick Humber, Shep Fields, Russ Morgan, Abe Lyman

"Bottle" (Harry McNaughton)—He will return to Harry Von Zell's CBS summer show—July 25—as guest comedian

Gish and Harold Vermilyea—and taken them away from Dolores Gillen and Olan Soule. In addition, May Robson, one of the screen's most beloved old ladies, has been signed to star in "A Lady of Millions," a daytime serial to start in Chicago in October. Her part will be that of the owner of a circus of sorts . . . Just after the last issue went to press, Amos 'n' Andy signed their new soap contract, and now they will have nothing to worry about for three more years except how to spend their increased salaries . . . The Jack Bennys, on their return from their European jaunt, are planning to stop off at Evanston's famous foundling home, The Cradle, and adopt a little boy so that their foster daughter Naomi may have a playmate.

Live news of Gertrude (Molly Goldberg) Berg! Miss Berg is auditioning a new show at NBC's Hollywood studios—and the star of the piece is Bobby Breen!

Two weeks ago I told you about Hal Style's "Help Thy Neighbor" program at KHJ—the program that has taken several hundred people off relief and found jobs for over a thousand. Now there are rumors that the A&A toothpaste sponsor is interested in making the show national. . . . Another tricky show that deserves watching is being aired from Beverly Hills, Calif. Each Sunday, a microphone is taken into the home of a different movie star and an informal program results.

Italian doctors are greatly interested in an ultra-short-wave therapeutic device recently shown them by Guglielmo Marconi, "father" of wireless telegraph. Indications are that the machine will prove useful in the treatment of sleeping sickness.

Super-salesman Don Wilson, with the big red letters on him, has been having a heck of a time disposing of two and a half tons of choice ripe apricots that his orchard in San Fernando Valley grew. Using the best of his Sunday-evening adjectives to describe its lusciousness, Don has been attempting to give the fruit to those of his friends who would come out and pick it. But no luck. He couldn't even give it away. However, the other day a mysterious gent phoned Wilson and asked if he owned the orchard. To Don's affirmative reply, the man said he'd buy the apricot crop for $25 . . . Salesman Wilson's apricots had sold themselves!

NBC has a new invention. It's a square, miniature fence resembling a baby's play-yard, and it is thrown around the base of a microphone to be used by a large dramatic cast. Idea is to give room for all and keep their voices level.

W. C. Fields, whose radio listening had as much as anything to do with his health recovery, now has a receiver in every room, including the kitchen, at his beautiful Bel-Air home . . . Beauteous Benay Venuta, the MBS warbler, is in Hollywood talking contracts . . . Jerry Cooper, still on the sick list, is gaining rapidly . . . Bing Crosby's Del Mar track is such a financial success that you can't buy a share of its stock . . . Bob Burns and wife are crazy about their new home . . . Parkyakarkus will join Joe Penner in making the picture, "An Apple a Day." The assignment means Parky will have to delay again his European honeymoon with his bride, Thelma Leeds . . . Abner (of "Lum and —") has just bought another animal, this time a riding-horse for his wife. The Abner menagerie now boasts two horses, a cow and calf, and four dogs . . . Republic Pictures has bought film rights to "The Lone Ranger" serial, which will also be serialized on the celluloid.

Ben Bernie's Boswell claims that the Ol' Maestro is now receiving fan mail lauding his clever commercial credits—which makes a few winning plugs at last for avid horse-wagerer Ben.

Rubinoff will be spending lots of time in Chicago in August. He'll lead the Chicago Philharmonic ork in a Grant Park concert August 6—and for the week August 23-29, Dave and his friend Rudy Vallee will conduct large orchestras in connection with the Windy City's Charter Jubilee . . . One of the fastest jumps ever from Coast to Coast is being made this week by Ferde Grote, who on Thursday conducts at the Hollywood Bowl—and the next night is due back in New York for his regular Friday night radio concert . . . Phil Harris and band are set for a movie short, "Harris in the Spring" . . . Now comes the secret of fighter Joe Louis' "swing." A sparring mate reports the Brown Bomber trained to music from the latest records of Cab Calloway! . . . Sock! Sock! "Hi de hi!"

Here's one Ripley would like: Last week Ed Prentiss, actor in a half-dozen serial dramas out of Chicago, received a request for a photograph—from a blind man!

Ina Claire, of Broadway fame, will do three plays for NBC Sunday evenings starting July 25. First will be Sardou's "Madame Sans Gene" with Osgood Perkins supporting . . . You'll be missing Sade from "Vic and Sade" for a few weeks. She is expecting her first child.

And this is the fiftieth and last column of "Plums and Prunes" for its fifth year's series. The highways are calling—and I'll be seeing for you next in Hollywood. Pinch-hitting for the next two weeks: Ben Byers.

CLOSE upon the heels of the successful launching last week at Hollywood of the recaulked Show Boat, comes the announcement that Lanny Ross, its ex-m.c., has been signed to headline Fred Astaire's former auto hour beginning September 7. The probable line-up will include Comedian Charles Butterworth, who last season was Fred's foil, and Johnny Green's music. The Ross contract seems to indicate that Astaire will not—as he had threatened—continue radio work while the pictures are demanding so much from him.

As for the new ship Show Boat, I have heard countless favorable reports from satisfied passengers. There's no doubt that Captain Henry (Charles Winninger) is a perfect pilot—and the only adverse criticism, if you may call it that, is that the program has too much entertainment within its hour.

Those of you who were confused by my two scoops announcing that both Tony Wons and Jeanette MacDonald had signed for the same sponsor for the fall need not be. Here's the explanation: Tony will be heard either two or three times a week with his Scrapbook feature, starting about October 4. He will broadcast from New York. Miss MacDonald will offer a concert of last year's "Open House" type from Hollywood. Her starting time probably will be October 3. Wons at present is recuperating nicely from a long seige of illness. This summer you'll find him fishing off Oak Island, Minn., in the Lake of the Woods area.

A new dramatic serial, "The Hand of Man," by Irna Phillips, well-known for her successful "Today's Children" perennial, will be aired from New York beginning late in August by an unnamed sponsor. Its plot will center around "James Brent, M. D."

Daytime serials, by the way, will be freshened up a bit with name stars as bait if the lead of "The Couple Next Door" is followed. The later opus, now carried only by WGN and WLW but soon to have an extended network, has given its leading roles to Dorothy

Marc Antony will bury Claude Rains—in the role of Caesar—July 26, on the CBS Shakespeare cycle

SOME weeks before Fred Allen left the Town Hall show, reports were making the rounds that the comedian would not return to this program next fall. Now comes the announcement that Fred has signed a two-year contract and will definitely be back on the same show. It seems Allen was getting fed up with the worry and work of writing for a one-hour show and preferred to go on for just a half-hour weekly. However, he has changed his mind and maybe his salary increase was responsible for it. Fred is now vacationing in Maine with his frau, Portland "Tally-Ho" Hoffa. Later in the summer they will go to Hollywood where Fred is scheduled to make a picture for Twentieth Century-Fox before returning to the air.

Allen Prescott, better known to most loudspeaker eavesdroppers as the "Wife Saver," signed to do a series of broadcasts for a chain of five- and ten-cent stores, which will begin early in August. Besides his broadcasting duties, Prescott will make a personal appearance tour of stores located in the larger cities, so that their customers can also see him.

When Myrt and Marge started on the air, they were heard for several years in the spot opposite Amos 'n' Andy. It was for some time, and is at present, heard in the afternoon, but starting August 2, their programs will be heard in the mornings. The program remains the same and evidently commands a big listening audience no matter what time it is aired.

Again this year, as in the past, NBC is going to broadcast the 1937 All-American Soap Box Derby, the annual coasting race for speed demons in their teens. Graham McNamee, who was knocked cold a couple of years ago while describing this race, will again be at the mike, as will Tom Manning. August 15 is the date.

Still more high-hat radio drama will be presented to the radio audience. Last week we told you about a series of four plays by Eugene O'Neill to be broadcast. Now comes word that George Bernard Shaw has adapted for radio his monumental five-play cycle, "Back to Methuselah," and it will be presented over NBC on August 30 in a seventy-five minute radio version.

Conrad Thibault leaves the "Cavalcade of Music" program after next Wednesday night's broadcast. His team-mate on the Fred Astaire show, Miss Francia White, will be heard for the four weeks following. She will be replaced on September 1 by another singer, as yet un-announced.

The cigarette sponsors of the show presenting the music of Tommy Dorsey with the singing of Morton Bowe and Edythe Wright are so pleased with the musical presentation that they may decide not to bring Jack Pearl back to the program in the fall.

Because of the illness of Lionel Barrymore, CBS has postponed the presentation of "King Lear," which was to be heard next Monday night (26) until August 9. "Julius Caesar" is to be presented in its place. "The Taming of the Shrew," with Edward G. Robinson, will be heard on August 2; "As You Like It," with Frank Morgan, is scheduled for August 16; "Henry IV," with an all-star cast headed by Walter Huston, Humphrey Bogart, Brian Aherne and Walter Connolly, will be heard on August 23; the following week, "Twelfth Night," will be presented, with Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Tallulah Bankhead, Orson Welles, Helen Menken and Estelle Winwood.

Quite a few weeks ago, we told you that Tyrone Power would head a new dramatic series in the fall. October 3 has been set as the starting date and the program boss is the same one that pays for the "Rippling Rhythm" show, which may or may not mean that the Shep Fields-Bob Hope airing will go off entirely. This has not been decided upon as yet.

Kilocycle Chatter:—"Broadway Varieties," heard on Friday nights, featuring Oscar Shaw and Carmela Ponselle, has been on the air for almost three years, but fades from the air-planes after the next program. . . . The "Hammerstein Music Hall," now heard on Tuesday nights, moves to the spot vacated by "Broadway Varieties" . . . Before Ben Bernie goes to Hollywood, he will return the compliment and make an appearance on Milton Berle's show . . . The Vass Family will continue to be heard permanently on the Bernie show . . . Phil Baker will do his first few broadcasts from the Coast when he returns to the air in the fall. His picture work will not be finished in time for him to trek east . . . Gogo De Lys will occupy the spot on Wednesday nights vacated by Babe Ruth. Freddie Rich will supply the music. When she isn't singing, Miss De Lys can be found on some part of Long Island either golfing, swimming or playing tennis. She really goes in for sports in a big way.

Ted Hammerstein's show replaces "Broadway Varieties" when it closes—July 30. Ted is N. Y.'s youngest producer

Bandnotes: —The Ferde Grofe show fades on August 6, with the maestro considering two offers for new programs, one being a full-hour show of semi-classical music . . . Carl Hoff may stay in Hollywood when the Al Pearce show comes east. Hoff is to supply the music for Walt Disney's full-length feature . . . Horace Heidt leaves the Biltmore this week and goes on tour, winding up in the Windy City . . . While in the studio, I noticed that Rex Chandler does not conduct the orchestra as announced on the program. Larry Marsh swings the baton while Chandler is away on sick-leave.

Alice Brady of Broadway and cinema fame emotes to M. C. Don Ameche of the Sunday coffee hour, July 25. Her recent film hits: "My Man Godfrey," "Go West Young Man," and "Three Smart Girls"

There was a time when an orchestra leader had nothing else to do on a program but direct the music. Now it seems that more and more of them are turning out to be comedians. Ray Noble stooges for Burns and Allen, Phil Harris turned comic on the Jack Benny show, Oscar Bradley reads funny lines on his Sunday night program, and now Walter O'Keefe announces he is going to write his scripts so that Peter Van Steeden will have some comedy lines on the show.

Airave:—Benny Goodman's Swing School, aired over CBS on Tuesday nights, is nothing short of a swingsation. During his first program of the new series the visible audience actually got up and started dancing in the aisles, and when they played and sang "It's a Long Way to Tipperary" in swing tempo on their second show, tired as I happened to be, I got up and started to dance with the frau.

An ice-cream parlor in Brooklyn, New York, proudly displays a sign in the window, reading, "Home of Rippling Rhythm." A little more than a year ago, Mrs. Shep Fields was having a chocolate ice-cream soda through the straw which gave her husband the idea for "Rippling Rhythm."

At the end of Elaine Barrie Barrymore's enactment, with Hubby John Barrymore, of Shakespeare's "The Tempest" the other night, she found a deputy sheriff waiting for her with a summons in which the Bank of America charged that she owed them several thousands of dollars in a real-estate deal. The incident would have been funnier had John and Elaine just finished doing "Shylock."

It may have been a publicity gag, and then again it may not have been, but Shirley Temple and Freddie Bartholomew were invited to the Show Boat opening and did not show up.

Ina Claire In NBC Series Debut

Ina Claire, America's brilliant Broadway and screen comedienne, will present a series of three dramatic broadcasts over NBC, Sunday evenings beginning July 25. Miss Claire will be assisted by Osgood Perkins of stage and radio ("Flying Red Horse Tavern") fame. In the opening comedy, Miss Claire will play the title role of "Madame Sans Gene," Victorian Sardou's delightful drama of the Napoleon epoch.

A native of Washington, Miss Claire was an immediate success in vaudeville in her teens. Her talents were recognized by the critics and she made her debut on the legitimate stage in New York in 1911, appearing as Molly Pebbleford in "Jumping Jupiter." Among her many successes are "The Girl from Utah," "The Gold Diggers," which ran for two years on Broadway, "The Last of Mrs. Cheney," in which she also played in New York and on tour for two years; and "The Greeks Had a Word for It." She appeared in motion pictures in 1929.

Osgood Perkins began his career with the Film Guild at the end of the war and played the part of Homer Cady in "Beggar on Horseback." He established himself at the peak by his portrayal of Walter Burns in "Front Page."

Sunday, July 25—NBC
8 p.m. EDT (7 EST; 6 CST)

'Hotel' Presents Bobby Breen in Film Preview

Bobby Breen, sensational nine-year-old protege of Eddie Cantor, will preview his latest film, "Make a Wish," on "Hollywood Hotel" on Friday, July 30. Featured with him will be Marion Claire and Basil Rathbone, screen actors.

Bobby first won fame on Cantor's broadcast and shattered records in his first movies, "Let's Sing Again" and "Rainbow on the River."

The story of "Make a Wish" is about a composer who vacations at a summer camp. There he hears Bobby Breen sing about the campfire. Rathbone, as the composer, then originates an operetta centered about the boys in camp. Marion Claire supplies the love interest and the stumbling-block in the plot.

Friday, July 30—CBS
9 p.m. EDT (8 EST; 7 CST)

NBC Shakespeare Ends July 26

As the third in the comedy half of the "Streamlined Shakespeare" series on NBC, "The Taming of the Shrew" will be presented by John Barrymore and his talented wife, Elaine Barrie Barrymore, July 26. This closes the series of six plays. Barrymore will be supported by a stellar cast, which has marked the plays at their inception. Will Prior will conduct the musical interludes for the program.

Monday, July 26—NBC
9:30 p.m. EDT (8:30 EST; 7:30 CST)

'Julius Caesar' Cast Headed By Rains

Claude Rains, distinguished British character actor, will play the title role in "Julius Caesar," third presentation in the CBS Shakespeare cycle, on Monday, July 26.

The "Julius Caesar" broadcast replaces Lionel Barrymore's scheduled characterization of "King Lear," which was postponed because of Barrymore's illness. According to present plans, Barrymore will be heard in his only CBS broadcast in this series on August 9.

Rains was selected for the exacting title role by Brewster Morgan, director of the cycle, after consideration of his wide experience. Rains, a native of London, has appeared in many American screen successes, including "Anthony Adverse," "Stolen Holiday," and "They Won't Forget," in addition to extensive work on both the American and British legitimate stages.

The CBS cycle is heard each Monday at the hour formerly held by the Hollywood Radio Theater on the largest network ever linked for a sustaining feature.

Monday, July 26—CBS
9 p.m. EDT (8 EST; 7 CST)

Goodman Features

Lionel Stander

Lionel Stander, movie player, will be the guest star on the Benny Goodman Swing School on CBS, Tuesday, July 27. Stander, who is famous for his rasping voice, will exchange quips with the swingmaster and give his views on the current swing craze.

Standar is a native New Yorker, attended the University of South Carolina. His first professional stage engagement was with the Provincetown Players. Later he served with the Theater Guild, and then was featured in the films. His radio experience came as one of Fred Allen's Mighty Allen Art Players group.

Also featured on the program will be the swing tune of the week picked by Goodman from his fan letters.

Tuesday, July 27—CBS
9:30 p.m. EDT (8:30 EST; 7:30 CST)

Shawneetown Migration Aired

Officials and citizens of the oldest city in Illinois, Shawneetown, will go on the air Sunday, July 25, to tell the world how they plan to move their city—the county seat of Gallatin County—to higher ground about three miles west of the present site in order to escape another major flood such as ravaged the city early in 1937.

The broadcast will start from the First National Bank, and a mobile unit will tour the town, dotted with tents and overturned houses, wrecked streets and buildings. Plans will be discussed for a model city to be erected at the new site, the moving and building of which will take about two years.

Sunday, July 25—NBC
5:30 p.m. EDT (4:30 EST; 3:30 CST)

MUSIC of the MASTERS

BY CARLETON SMITH

SALZBURG is a genuine festival town. Its streets, its buildings, its people lend themselves to a festive occasion. The little town is at the crossroads of European travel routes. It has always been a natural meeting-place for differing cultures. Under its sky they have blended, leaving a rich and colorful architecture and a richer tradition. The music of Mozart is, in a sense, a blend of pure Latin form and the Teutonic spirit that came together in his birthplace.

The well-known Salzburg Festival, which begins this week, attracts the world's great every August. Max Reinhardt and a few colleagues produced plays on the Cathedral steps. Music was added, and it was thought fitting to give the operas of Mozart, the town's greatest citizen. Bruno Walter finally came and was the Muse's guiding spirit. Then Toscanini came. In the last years he has refused to conduct in any country with a dictator and has declined to re-visit Bayreuth. Salzburg has been the only place in the world where the greatest maestro conducted opera. That has made it the mecca of every musician.

Festivals are nothing new to Salzburg. Already in Mozart's time, its archbishops invited their friends from the South and the West to partake of gracious hospitality and to hear their musicians. During the century before, miracle plays and church festivals had attracted visitors from far and wide.

BUT Salzburg is really more itself when there is no great Festival. You can really see the place then. And folks who wear the native costumes really belong in it.

About the only original ones you see now are on the townfolk who exercise their prerogative to line up before the Festpielhaus and render judgment on the costumes of those who come. Fashion-plates from New York, Paris, and Buenos Aires pass their scrutiny. They check off the foreign licenses—and it is no exaggeration to say that cabriolets and limousines from every country that has licenses drive up to the Festpielhaus door—note the gowns they like best, and doubtless spend the winter discussing them.

The Salzburgers themselves never hope to be on the inside of their festival. They know it is not for them. Often, they stand in line the better part of 24 hours to have a standing-room ticket; but it is for a visitor, not for them. They re-sell it, sometimes making one thousand percent profit. They consider all visitors to Salzburg to be millionaires.

One absolute barometer of the popularity of a performance is the hour when the standing-room line forms. For some operas it is the day before; for others it forms only five or six hours.

The Performances

SALZBURG performances vary considerably in quality. Best of all of them, and to my mind the finest operatic performance to be heard in the world today is Verdi's Falstaff. That ripe commentary on the weakness of the male requires a performance such as only a Toscanini could give it. He has rehearsed the most of the principals off and on for the past twenty years. Not satisfied with that, he rehearses them incessantly before each performance and during the intermissions. He insists that each note be letter-perfect. And it is.

Every detail of the action is fitted exactly to the music. It all resembles a finely wrought mosaic-piece. And precisely because Maestro Toscanini supervises each detail and because he has a cast that is capable of satisfying his demands, Falstaff is an experience not to be duplicated in the opera houses of the world today.

Unfortunately, Beethoven's Fidelio, with which this year's Festival opens and which will be broadcast (July 24), does not come off so well as the Falstaff. The fault is not, of course, with the conductor. It is rather with the singers who cannot negotiate the requirements of their roles. Beethoven demanded superlative singing from the human voice, and great feeling as well. The artists who can furnish the one have not always the other.

LAST year when Lotte Lehmann sang the title role, her chief aria, "Abscheulicher, Wo Eilst Du Hin?", had to be transposed down. In a changed key, it lacked the brilliant, hopeful character which Beethoven intended. Other singers were not first-class. And the orchestral horns did not always sound as they should. It was a superlative performance of Fidelio, one that, once heard, could never be forgotten. But it was far from ideal.

In Wagner's Die Meistersinger, the orchestra did its best, and a noble best it was. No one but Toscanini could draw from a body of men such a sonorous, well-proportioned, and spirited playing of this music. He sang his way through the healthy chords of the Prelude, as we have heard him do many times on Sunday afternoons from Carnegie Hall, and until the same mighty cadences came again in the closing scene, not one nuance in the mighty fabric of sound was lost.

One often wished that there had been no singers to mar this glorious and transfiguring tapestry of sound. Unfortunately, not one of them could measure up to the demands of his role.

It is for this reason that there is much skepticism concerning Mozart's Magic Flute, which Mr. Toscanini performs for the first time at Salzburg this month and which will be broadcast. Wiseacres are shaking their heads and predicting that he probably will not go through with it.

WAGNER and Beethoven and Verdi may be faked," they say. "But Mozart, impossible! That is like singing naked. Every note has to be emitted perfectly, else the defect shows through the transparent orchestration and the whole world knows it."

To cast the Magic Flute, Mr. Toscanini has heard singers from all over Europe. He has not been satisfied entirely with those chosen, but he will give them a thorough trial in rehearsals. There the sparks will fly . . . and you and I will hear the result.

The remaining operas in Salzburg will be conducted by Mr. Bruno Walter, who has charge of Mozart's Don Giovanni and Figaro, and von Weber's Euryanthe; and Mr. Hans Knappertsbusch, who conducts the operas of Strauss. These men, regrettably, do not obtain the response from either vocalists or instrumentalists that Toscanini does.

Some listeners travel half way around the globe, pay ten dollars a seat for some of the Salzburg Festival evenings. Many do it every year—and the entertainment they hear is priceless.

But it isn't necessary to make such a pilgrimage to hear this famous music. This year the Salzburg audience will include millions of radio listeners all over the world. This year you will be able to sit in your own home and listen to some of the finest music in the world, to be present in Salzburg—through radio—in spirit and in fact!

HELEN MENKEN—SWEET SPITFIRE

She believed then as she believes now that dragging such a story into the light would act as a deterrent to anyone who might not realize the dangers of such a relationship.

To be sure that she would be able to play the girl correctly, she visited the Jefferson Market jail to meet two women who were in different cells. One was a woman of powerful magnetic charm; the other a young, weak woman whom she had fascinated.

When certain people criticized "The Captive," Helen Menken defended the play. "Curiosity never led a normal person into hell yet," she said. "I believe 'The Captive' is the greatest moral lesson Broadway has seen in many years."

"I am told Mme. Slyvie, who created a sensation in France in this same role, resembled a collection of all the sins, whereas I concentrate upon only one."

Yet in the end, those who claimed the play was harmful had their way, and Helen Menken was dragged down to the Jefferson Market jail with the rest of the cast, and freed only after she had promised not to appear in "The Captive" again.

However, she would like to do that particular play all over again if she could. She would also like to do "Mecropolis Street" again, the story of a woman over 300 years old who had discovered the secret of eternal youth. She feels that at the time she played it she was so young she couldn't do it justice; but that now, with a little more experience, she could interpret it better.

She says frankly that she has appeared in a few plays in which she didn't believe. "It would be fine," she told me, laughing, "if I could always sit and wait for a play in which I believed to come along, but if I had done that I wouldn't have been able to eat unless I lived off relief."

"And were any of the plays in which you didn't believe successes?" I asked her.

"Never," she told me. "The fact that I didn't believe in them must have shown in my acting."

SHE is a perfect worrier. She gnaws at a worry like a dog at a bone, only the more she gnaws the bigger it gets.

When she is in a hit, she is distracted; she says, "All right, this may be a hit, but what will I do next?"

When she is in a flop, she is still more distracted. She feels like running into a hole, and wishes she could pull the hole after her. And she wails, "What will I do next?"

Yet she is generally very gay. Everything she does is done in a spirit of gaiety. She even puts on her stockings gaily.

Exasperated with her, her sister Grace Menken once exclaimed, "You are the biggest person I know in the big things and the littlest about the little things."

It's true. Without the blink of an eyelash she will lend five thousand dollars to a friend and never dream of mentioning it, but if she lends someone a nickel, the next time she sees him, she will ask, "Where is that nickel I loaned you yesterday?"

On the surface, Helen Menken may seem more eccentric, more paradoxical and more maddening than all the Hepburns and Margaret Sullavans of Hollywood, but underneath the surface there is a reason for her being one of the most paradoxical women in radio. That reason lies in the unusual life she has led. Early in her childhood she knew the sting of poverty and what it could do to you. She and her mother traveled from town to town, stopping at cheap boarding-houses, with badly cracked walls and cold, dreary bedrooms.

The strange existence she led made her resourceful and cunning. Though she was generous and honest by nature, poverty made her petty and dishonest about small sums. The most vivid memory of her childhood is of the way in which she avoided the payment of carfares. Wishing to make her daughter self-reliant, her mother would let her travel alone to the theater while she was still very young, and looked even younger. She would give Helen ten cents a day for carfare, but Helen would walk along the street till she saw some woman who seemed to be waiting for a trolley car; then she would walk beside her, and when a car came along, she went with this strange woman.

When the conductor came to collect his carfare, she would nod toward the woman and lip, "I'm with her." Since she looked under age, she would never have to pay. Strangely enough, none of the women ever protested!

WHEN later in life she became successful and large sums of money no longer meant very much to her, the habit of looking upon a nickel as something very precious was so ingrained in her character that she has never overcome it.

In spite of the idiosyncrasies of her disposition and the perplexities of her personality, in spite of the fact that she is neither very young nor astonishingly good-looking, she is the most glamorous personality I have met in radio. The best description of Helen Menken I've ever read was written by a woman who probably never saw her, Lois Montross, author of a novelette called "Splendor in the Grass" in Pictorial Review for June. Trying to describe her heroine, she writes: "Glamor is indefinable. It is connotative rather than qualitative. It suggests russet-purple hills in autumn, the smoky fragrance of burning leaves, the perfect grace of a deer in a birch forest. It suggests the whisper of silken petticoats, the gesture of a beautiful hand, delicate script on parchment, the call of a whippoorwill at twilight, the iridescence in motion which is a humming-bird, and the flawless mystery of stars." And then she adds, naming her heroine, "Darien Tennant is glamor."

But if she had met Helen Menken I'm sure she'd say instead, "Helen Menken is glamor."

Helen Menken may be heard Wednesdays in "Her Second Husband" over an NBC network at:

Solution to Puzzle Given Last Week

THE COVER PORTRAIT

DOROTHY LAMOUR, glamorous songstress, whose picture appears on the cover this week, is one of radio's most beautiful women. She is singing currently on the weekly coffee-sponsored Sunday evening hour with Don Ameche. She won the award of Miss New Orleans in the International Beauty Pageant and her greatest ambition is to rise to the top in every phase of show business—a wish that seems to be rapidly coming true.

Miss Lamour made her singing debut at the Club Forrest in New Orleans and later came to New York for an audition with NBC. She had her own program on which she was the sultry "Dreamer of Songs." However, it wasn't until after she gained fame as an actress that she received greatest acclaim. Listeners to the coffee hour recognized her as an actress rather than as a former radio personality.

Miss Lamour's time is mainly devoted to the making of motion pictures, and her current picture is "Last Train from Madrid," in which she plays the role of a Spanish noblewoman. "Hurricane" will be her next release.

VITAL STATISTICS: Miss Lamour was born in New Orleans in 1915 . . . is single . . . is five feet five inches tall . . . has a beautiful dark complexion. She captained her basket-ball team in high school, likes to swim, doesn't like bridge. Her greatest extravagance is clothes, otherwise banks her money. She collects pennies . . . has fifteen thousand of them. On her first job, she was a stenographer in a real-estate office. She likes to cook, likes to dance and listen to the radio, and wants to go to Europe on a vacation. She retires at 2 a.m. and rises at 11 a.m., and is addicted to reading in bed.

WHY DEANNA DURBIN QUIT SINGING

the chin. That's as far as I got. She looked up at me in a scared sort of way and asked, 'Are you trying to tell me . . . that my option isn't being taken up?'

"I said yes, that was what I was telling her; she was through with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

"She looked at me a minute as if she couldn't quite believe it. And then it hit her, and she started to cry. 'It isn't me I'm crying about,' she sobbed. 'Maybe I'm no good. Bud Daddy! He'll have to go back to work now and maybe . . . it'll be too much for him!'

"Then she added, quietly, 'Do you really think I'll ever amount to something in show business, Mr. Sherrill?'

"That kid, with that God-given voice, broken up like that, because of a studio mix-up! Say, it wouldn't have taken much more to have had two of us crying up there that day!"

Jack Sherrill, according to his own story, then got Deanna a contract at the Universal studios. But it was a quieter, a rather doubtful Deanna who went out to Universal City. And even as the publicity about her contract was being sent out, a quiet battle started on the Universal lot. An executive, whom it would be kinder not to name, threatened resignation if Deanna were cast in "Three Smart Girls." She was inexperienced, he protested. And again her career trembled in the balance.

WHAT happened next must all be attributed to radio.

She sang on a program honoring Lily Pons. Her performance was hardly over before Eddie Cantor had offered her a feature spot on his program.

There were no delays, no conferences, no discussions. She was just signed. Eddie Cantor, showman supreme, had recognized her amazing talent. Deanna loved radio from the moment she stepped before the microphone. Here was an opportunity to sing without the distraction of lights and cameras and heavy make-up. Radio restored her confidence in herself. Like all children, she needed approval and sympathy. And out at Universal, executives who had been oblivious of Deanna Durbin's existence before her radio appearance were receiving a flood of letters demanding to see her as well as hear her.

So, a radiant little girl was put into the cast of "Three Smart Girls." And, as everyone knows, when that picture was released, Deanna Durbin made history again—this time in movieland.

Deanna is established. She is a star. She has well-wishers by the millions. More than half of them, almost certainly, have been gained through the songs she sang on Eddie Cantor's program.

It is they who have the most to lose if Deanna Durbin does not soon return to the broadcasting studios. It is they who will suffer greatest if lawsuits or other unpleasant incidents mar the perfection of what should be nearly complete happiness.

For actresses learn to hide their worries and their inner misgivings and disturbances. Movie audiences can be fooled. But not those who only listen and see nothing. The voice that sings "Ave Maria" or "Only a Rose" cannot hide an aching heart from those who listen.

As this is being written, word comes that the case which now shadows Deanna Durbin's future may never come to trial. In short, it appears that a peaceful solution is probable. Such a settlement is both good sense and good business. For Deanna Durbin, still a child but no longer unimportant, has established a significant place for herself in broadcasting. She should be allowed to fill it.

LETTERS ON THE AIR

BY JOHN MORTON

AN ENTIRELY new form of radio script-show has been introduced by WTMJ, the Milwaukee Journal station, in the unique presentation of the "Letters of the Cartwright Family." Heard three times weekly, the show deals with the family life of the Cartwrights, but contrary to the prescribed form in radio dramas, the action is conveyed to the listener through the letters which the four members of the family address to each other.

While letters as a vehicle for storytelling have been used with success by authors, this marks the first attempt to adapt this form to the requirements of radio.

The story itself is woven around John Cartwright, middle-class businessman, his devoted wife, and two children. Tom Cartwright, the son, is away at the state university for the first time. His sister, Marjorie, several years older than Tom, is a teacher in the grade school in the city in which the Cartwrights reside. Much of the correspondence is between father and son, in which a simple, straightforward philosophy is manifested in the father's letters. The letters from the son to his father show an eagerness of youth, and a desire to share his problems with his father. The letters written by Mrs. Cartwright reflect the sincerity and affection of a mother for her family. The daughter's letters furnish both romance and an understanding of the problems of her younger brother.

WHILE it might be expected that the manner of handling the presentation of the letters would involve the reading of a letter by the person receiving it, this is not true with the Cartwright Family. Instead, a novel feature has been attached to the broadcast. As the listener hears a letter, he hears the voice of the person who wrote it. In this way, the spirit and character of the writer is skilfully portrayed.

That script-shows are popular with listeners has long been known. That story- or novel-reading by a narrator has been popular has also been established. The Letters of the Cartwright Family combine these two forms, giving a variety of characters but omitting the dialog. The action moves swiftly and smoothly despite the fact that it is always in the past rather than the present. At times, however, when action is necessary, it is brought close to the present by means of an exchange of telegrams, or when possible, special delivery or air-mail letters.

Another novel feature in the presentation of the "Letters of the Cartwright Family" is the unique manner in which music is employed in the program. In addition to the usual identifying theme as used in almost all radio script-shows, the "Letters" are all presented over a subdued musical background. While there is no actual effort made to suit the mood of the music to the script, the musical background gives warmth and character to the whole show. Instead of detracting from the spoken part of the program, the music definitely punctuates the script, for each letter is separated by a momentary swell of melody. While unusual, the effect is extremely successful.

Realizing that the presentation of a series which so drastically departs from the usual formula for script-shows might prove difficult for the listener to grasp, the WTMJ program committee debated at length before the decision was made to broadcast the "Letters." Though the device of using the voice of the letter-writer in giving life to the written material of the story is unique, the presentation of the first two weeks' shows in the series has brought response from listeners which conclusively proves that the form is acceptable and highly entertaining. People have gone out of their way to express commendation for the manner of presentation. The enthusiasm which "Letters of the Cartwright Family" has generated has more than justified WTMJ's belief that this new form of radio serial, while revolutionary, is definitely adaptable to broadcast entertainment.

It is apparent that in the presentation of the "Letters of the Cartwright Family" the matter of casting was of paramount importance, because the voice must establish the character to an even greater degree than in the usual radio dramatic form. The voice further must set the pace and tempo of the show, it must, in short, carry the whole burden of unfolding the drama. In this respect, WTMJ has been fortunate.

The very human and understanding part of the father, Mr. Cartwright, is in the capable hands of Paul Norris. Equipped with a splendid voice, and fortified with years of experience both in radio and the theater, as actor and director, Mr. Norris gives sincerity and genuineness to the character of Mr. Cartwright, which is outstanding.

Mrs. Cartwright is portrayed by Marjorie Hall Petran, whose radio experience dates back to the first dramatic program ever produced at WTMJ. She played the leading role.

Young Tom Cartwright is ably played by Frank Behrens. Behrens is a graduate of the Jimmy Baxter programs which played for five consecutive years at WTMJ, and has always been capable of giving a fine performance in any part assigned to him. He is at the present also playing the leading part in the very popular WTMJ script-show, "Lefty Culpepper."

The voice of Marjorie, the lovely Cartwright daughter, is that of Jane Ann Skinner, recently of the Goodman Theater in Chicago, and now definitely establishing herself as a talented radio actress.

Because of the importance of properly casting the "Letters of the Cartwright Family," it was deemed advisable to hold several auditions prior to the first production. However, the first persons heard, those now playing the principal roles, were so successful that other auditions were unnecessary.

FROM the broadcaster's angle, the flexibility of the show is a decided advantage. Characters can definitely be limited to three players in each episode. Sound-effects are at no time needed. As a result, the cost of production of the "Letters of the Cartwright Family" is low. It is the answer to the need for a serial show without the many problems confronting the producer of an action script-show. And yet it is fully as effective as many of those programs which require elaborate sound-effects. With its soft music in the background, with its cast of anonymous voices portraying the various characters so effectively, this novel program is destined to become increasingly popular as time goes on—for it has more than mere novelty to recommend it! It has depth, and it portrays life vividly, dramatically, in a personal sort of manner.

Listeners know what appeals to them, what they like best—and whenever they hear a program that suits their fancy, an appreciable number of them invariably write in. At WTMJ after each broadcast, letters from enthusiastic listeners come in in increasing numbers.

Written and produced by WTMJ staff members, no announcement has been made of the identity of either the author or the characters. This program, "Letters of the Cartwright Family," is a WTMJ copyrighted feature.

STORIES OF THE SONGS YOU LOVE

it didn't excite the listening populace. The entire group was spiritless, restless, tired. The "Bonnie Blue Flag" did not have the power to inspire men to defend the flag. It had about the martial effect of the "Moonlight Sonata." They needed something that would stir their hearts! Something to make them want to march!

It was then the bandmaster suddenly remembered "Dixie." He told his musicians to step it up to martial tempo. The first note brought the crowd to its feet—

"Way down South where I was born—"

The children stopped crying and shouted. Men threw their hats into the air and shrieked. The excitement and thrill gripped them all. Soon they were swept into the emotion of the moment. Even the women were singing and keeping time with their feet. They laughed and cried—enthusiasm mounted—at last they had it—a battle anthem—Dixie! It would make men leave their plows in the furrows! It would make men fight—hocray!

ONE gaunt man on the fringe of the crowd forgot himself in the excitement. He hurled his hat into the air, tilted his head and screamed the blood-curdling fox-hunting yell of the South!

"The rebel yell!" someone shouted. All the men shrieked, and the eerie yell that later echoed across a hundred fields blended with the throbbing notes of Dixie!

Albert Pike, believing the gay words of Dan Emmet, the funnyman, were not martial enough, rewrote the lyrics. "Sothrons, hear your country call you.

"Up, lest worse than death befall you.

"To arms—to arms—in Dixie!"

That became the battle anthem. You may never hear it any more. For after the war, the South went back to the funnyman's words. Today, few people know the martial words. People want to laugh. It's so much better to sing about buckwheat cakes and Injun batter than to scream "To arms."

And today most men agree that the funnyman's song of "Dixie" ranks with France's anthem as the greatest battle song ever written. "Dixie" has an unforgettable rhythm. It still inspires laughter and tears. It will always excite those who hear it—Northerners or Southerners. The Mason-Dixon line is ineffective when a tune like "Dixie" is concerned. Men will still leap from their seats and shriek at the first line—"Way down South where I was born—"

Dan Emmet, the funnyman? He did not know the story of old man Dixie. He was cursed in his own land as a traitor because in writing a "walk-around" to make people laugh and love, he unknowingly created a battle-cry, wrote a song that made men kill.

Jessica Dragonette

—WHO HAD THE COURAGE TO LEAVE THE STAGE FOR RADIO —AND THEN GROW UP WITH IT!

What the well-dressed woman wears—to rehearsal! Presented here are the first informal photographs of Jessica Dragonette ever released!

Born in Calcutta, India, Jessica was placed in Georgian Court Convent, New Jersey, at 6. She won an audition, went to Broadway, starred—but turned to a new medium, radio, for her career!

Besides the stars, CBS officials, 50 people are involved in putting on the show! 40 of them are from the agency

Jessica lives in the 57th Street apartment in New York which was formerly occupied by Artist McClelland Barclay. She rehearses 3 hours on Monday, 3 hours on Wednesday, for her one-half hour "Beauty Box" program!

BOB DRAKE GOES FISHING

A RADIO STAR DROPPED
HIS AIR NAME, TOOK A VACATION—BECAME LES
TREMAYNE—FISHERMAN!

1 Les Tremayne (Bob Drake of "Betty and Bob") recently two-week-vacationed in Florida. He drove the entire distance—with the top of his new convertible coupe down, received a serious sunburn, had to remain indoors for several days. Usually he drives fast—but he took this trip leisurely. With him here is his 14-year-old sister, Stella

2 At Miami Beach, Les chartered the two-motored, 38-foot "Serenade," commanded by Capt. O. L. Schubert, set out on a salt-water fishing trip. With him were his sister Stella and his brother Wally. They dropped anchor at Whistling Buoy, off Government Cut. Soon after that, all three hooked sailfish at once—but landed only one!

4 In striking, the sailfish had missed the bait, caught the hook in his eye. The white spot at the end of the line is the bait. Les, who has been a director, stage-manager, stage-hand, scenic artist, hooper, vaudeville comedian, vocal soloist, dramatic reader, barker, jockey and magician's stooge—despite his mere 24 years—added another accomplishment to his list when he took two sailfish the first time he dipped a line in salt water!

5 Landing sailfish is strenuous work, even for those used to it—but Les proved equal to the task. Here the sailfish is brought to gaff. Les, whose mother was a famous actress, whose father and grandmother were well known on the concert stage, whose uncle is a motion-picture producer-director in England, was born in England, came to this country in 1918. But he hadn't seen the ocean since then—until he went on this fishing trip!

3 Les' hobbies are sculpturing, swimming, driving, reading—and since his vacation, fishing! Here is Les, who stands 5' 10½" and weighs 155 lbs., hooking a 7' 8" sailfish weighing 68 lbs. He landed it in 26 minutes!

6 Mouth-organ- and ukulele-playing Les Tremayne (he can't decide whether it is Shakespeare or Thorne Smith who is his favorite author)—would rather listen to a story than tell one—which accounts for his having a sworn affidavit made out, testifying to his catch! For $1,000 Les could have gone Blue Marlin fishing off Bimini in the "Serenade" for two weeks—but he had to get back to Chicago for his opening on "First Nighter"

7 Although none of the party had ever done any salt-water fishing, their beginners' luck was extraordinary. Four sailfish were taken by these three during the course of the day. Les caught two of them, Stella, one, Wally, one. Les' fish were 7' 8" and 7', weighed 68 lbs. and 48 lbs., respectively. Stella's fish—which Les helped her land—was 6' 6", weighed 38 lbs. Wally's fish was 7' 10", weighed 70 lbs. Above: They pose with the catch

A PREACHER'S SON TURNS GANG BUSTER

ADVENTURE ON LAND, ON SEA AND ON THE AIR
—PHIL LORD FOUND IT IN ALL THESE PLACES!

2 In Meriden, the Lords lived in the parsonage of the church. Phil was brought up in the ways of the church, attended services regularly. At left: Phil when he was 2

3 Phil is a horse-lover, rides as often as he can. Above you see him, age 3, on "Jack," a horse four boys often rode! This was taken while visiting in Ellston, Me.

1 Phillips H. Lord, son of Rev. and Mrs. Albert J. Lord, was born in Hartford, Vt., July 12, 1902. Soon after that, Rev. Lord became the First Congregational Church pastor in Meriden, Conn., moved his family there. Above: 3-month-old Phil with his parents

4 Phil, a well-dressed man today, also was well dressed as a boy. His clothes were conservative, his manner, dignified. Above: Phil when he was 6 years old

5 After finishing high school in Meriden, Phil attended Phillips Andover Academy, was captain of the tennis team (above)! He also went to Bowdoin College

6 Above: The interior of the First Congregational Church, Meriden. Phil's father has been the pastor of it for the past 35 years—and he still is! He visits Phil frequently

8 The Lords are of old New England stock. Both Mrs. Maude Phillips Lord (above), Phil's mother, and Albert J. Lord (right), his father, come from early-settler families

7 At the right is the parsonage in Hartford, Vt., where Phil was born. Phil didn't live here long. As is the usual custom, the house was rent-free to the pastor

BUT FIRST HE BECOMES SETH PARKER

9 Phil's first job on leaving college was that of the Plainville (Conn.) High School principal! But he didn't like it, turned to writing radio scripts. Once, while in a barber's chair, he heard a program about New England folks, decided he could write a better one. It was then that he conceived his "Seth Parker" idea. It was based on his family background, the character (right), on his grandfather, Hosea Phillips (above)!

10 Phil was presented in Congress as "the source of more cheer and contentment and wholesale enjoyment than any person living in the United States today"! He received up to 10,000 letters a week, made a movie. Above: The cast. Lord is indicated by an arrow. On the air, Mrs. Lord played "Lizzie," asked silly questions

11 Soon becoming one of the most popular air programs, the Seth Parker series caused Jonesport, scene of the mythical gathering each week, to gain fame. Above: The town took advantage of it!

12 Many wanted to sponsor Lord's religious program, but NBC refused to "sell religion." Phil was paid by NBC. Then he conceived the "Country Doctor" (left), had it sponsored, made it pay!

13 Phil was a school principal because he wanted to be near Sophia McCormey (above) — a teacher. Married in 1925, they have two children, Jean, age 9, Patricia, age 6. Right: Phil, Jean when 4

HE SEEKS ADVENTURE

14 Phil continued his "Seth Parker" broadcasts 4½ years. Then he bought a 4-masted schooner (above), called it the "Seth Parker," got a sponsor, sailed along the East Coast, broadcasting from various ports

Wide World

Wide World

18 From the floundering, water-logged "Seth Parker," the "Australia" took nine members of the crew (above). Five others, including Captain Phillips Lord, preferred to remain aboard, await a U. S. Navy tug which was to pull the disabled ship to a harbor

19 Above: The rescued crew comes aboard the "Australia." In the meantime, the U.S.S. "Ontario" left Pango Pango, American Samoa, in one of the worst hurricanes in years to salvage the schooner. Lord, almost broke, put it up for sale, returned to America!

— HE SEEKS ADVENTURE AT HOME — AND

22 Back home, back at the bottom, Phil was on the air again within 2 months! He revived his "Seth Parker" sketch, began the "G-Man" series—which later became "Gang Busters." Below: Jane Robbins as "The Tiger Woman" on one airing

23 For his "G-Man" series, Phil got his source material from official records, had each script personally checked by J. Edgar Hoover! "Gang Busters" is also checked by authorities. Below: Phil Lord shows Gladys Thornton how to act like a frightened gun-moll

24 Up to a year and a half ago, Phil produced five air shows a week! "We, the People" was one of the best of them. For it, people having unusual stories were brought to New York, all expenses paid, put on the air to tell them—in person!

ABROAD IN A LEAKY SHIP—

Wide World

17 Running into storms in the South Seas, "Seth Parker" sent SOS! The British warship "Australia" responded, found no danger, left. A second call brought it back. This time his ship was found helpless (above)

16 Lord was feted everywhere, was the guest of senators, congressmen, even the President! But he stayed close to the Coast at all times because his sponsor would back him only on that condition. Then finally he put to sea!

Wide World

20 Aboard the British ship, those who had left the "Seth Parker" were put up in a wardroom (right). It cost the British government $2,500 to answer both SOS calls sent out by Lord's schooner!

21 Because the King's brother was aboard the "Australia," because the rescue had cost $2,500, the British government investigated for possible publicity motives (see clippings, right), found none!

BECOMES AMERICA'S NO. 1 GANG BUSTER

25 One of the most dramatic crime cases ever presented on "Gang Busters" was that of Gus C. Langley, who, condemned for murder, was granted seven stays of execution, then pardoned by the Governor of North Carolina! Below: Left to right, Langley, Stanley Waldo, Mayor of the Boys' Brotherhood of New York (its members were guests that night), and Phil Lord

26 Below: Phillips Lord, today. He is almost 6 feet tall, has a fair complexion, brown hair. He fishes, goes boating, plays golf and tennis—was once the Maine state tennis champion! Now that he's back on top, he has another boat, a new commuting cruiser, the "Venus II." Phil is even tempered, does his work quietly, efficiently. He hates to be photographed

They've Got Those BATHROOM BLUES

YOU'VE HEARD THEM ON THE AIR—NOW THEY SING FOR YOU—IN THE BATH!

1 Gall Reese (above) dotes on a full tub of soap bubbles when she bathes. You hear this 18-year-old, brown-haired warbler with Charlie Barnett's band several times weekly over NBC. At present she's being screen-tested!

3 The "Quality Twins" (above) are the former "Sisters of the Skillet." Ed East (right) and Ralph Dumke (left)—together—weigh 500 lbs.!

2 Handsome Irish Phil Regan (above) often is guest singer on various radio programs. He was a detective until John Hutchins heard him sing at a party—advised him to study voice. He did—went into radio—then landed a movie contract

4 A plaintive, husky voice has Lee Wiley (right) for which Walter Winchell often tosses her an orchid! She is dark, slender, and has hazel eyes. When not singing Lee composes music, reads and, for exercise, likes a brisk canter on her horse

5 (Above) Milton Berle has just completed the movie "New Faces of 1937." His Sunday night radio program is now known as "Summer Hotel" (formerly "Community Sing")

6 Lovely Patricia Ryan (above) on NBC three times a week with the Rhythm Rascals, is a pioneer in the broadcasting field. Only 21, she has been in radio work 14 years!

 The third of six original musical works for radio written by the six members of the Columbia's Composer's Committee will be given its premiere when a nameless work by Aaron Copland is played by Howard Barlow and the Columbia Symphony Orchestra today. Copland states that his composition has a definite program, or scenario, but that he doesn't know what it is. Listeners are invited to name it and the one who supplies the best title will receive as a prize the manuscript of the work, autographed by the composer. The program also includes music by two eighteenth century composers, the Gluck-Mottl Ballet Suite and Mozart's Symphony No. 4 in G Minor.

Miss Claire will open the series in the title role of "Madame Sans Gene," Victorian Sarlo's delightful comedy of the Napoleonic epoch. "Madame Sans Gene" is based on the life story of Marie Therese Figueur, one of the most remarkable women produced by revolutionary France. Beginning life as an humble washerwoman, she joined a cavalry regiment of Napoleon's armies and, after participating in most of the great campaigns in Germany, Italy, Spain, Austria and Russia, she was married at 39, to Marshal Lefebvre, Napoleonic Marshal and Duke of Dantzic. Instead of being dazzled by the brilliance of life at Court, she remained her old direct, coarse mannered and slangy self and won the name of "Madame Sans Gene" which can be rendered into English as Mrs. Without Care or Mrs. Doesn't Care."

★ NBC-Opera "Falstaff" by Verdi from Salzburg: WCFL WHO
Arturo Toscanini, celebrated Italian maestro, will open the third season of programs from the famous Salzburg Festival in Austria with the first act of Verdi's opera,
"Falstaff." Salzburg, a small and picturesque city high in the Alps near the German frontier, is the scene each summer of perhaps the greatest of all music festivals.
Thousands of music lovers gather for two months of magnificent performances of some of the master works of musical literature. Singers are recruited from all the great opera houses of Europe and America. The Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra will be conducted by Toscanini and Bruno Walter. In the first performance of
"Falstaff" of the Salzburg season, Mariano Stabile will be Falstaff, Franca Somigli will be Mistress Ford, Mita Vassari will be Mistress Page and Angelica Gravensio will be Dame Quickly. The action of the opera centers around the ludicrous attempts of Falstaff, a fat old rogue, to win the affections of Mistress
Ford and Mistress Page.
Other characters in the opera ensnare Falstaff in their plot and he is led to hide himself in a clothes basket, latter dumped into the Thames, and to keep a rendezvous in a haunted spot of Windsow Forest.

Night Club

Complete in every detail is the new NBC Night Club of the Air! And during a recent airing of this unique broadcasting innovation, it was guest night for radio stars! Many celebrities were there—and so was a RADIO GUIDE cameraman! The result: A portfolio of your favorites you'll not want to miss. Watch for them—
