Editorially Speaking . . .

A PRESS release from the Advisory Commission to the Council of National Defense has just reached this desk. In essence, the announcement states that a Radio Division of the Office of Facts and Figures has been created under Archibald MacLeish, director of the Office, with William B. Lewis as coordinator.

At first glance this is just another board, another agency in the maze of many created by the necessity of national defense. But let's go a bit farther. For instance, who is William B. Lewis?

William B. Lewis' name is not as well known as Gene Autry's or Edward G. Robinson's, both famous stars on Columbia Broadcasting System. But William B. Lewis is a former vice president of CBS in charge of programs, who resigned to take over this Government post. Lewis' entire job is Assistant Director of the Office of Facts and Figures, in charge of its bureau of operations, which includes the radio division. Assisting him in the radio division is Douglas Meservey, formerly assistant to the vice president in charge of programs for NBC.

These two men are typical of the type of executives who are being brought to Washington to aid in all phases of our all-out defense effort. No one can deny that, although mistakes may be made, from such a concentration of brains and ability the best must come.

As an example, and what is true of this bureau is true of others, the bureau of operations of the Office of Facts and Figures has several other offshoots in charge of famous men. Martin Sommers, formerly an associate editor of the "Saturday Evening Post," heads the bureau of production. Staff members of the Office of Facts and Figures include Allen Grover, former vice president of Time, Inc.; Henry Pringle, Pulitzer prize biographer of William Howard Taft; Malcolm Cowley, formerly an editor of "New Republic," and Charles Poore, for many years a literary editor of the New York "Times," to name a few.

This organization of departments within departments may seem confusing. Perhaps it is. But this publication is not so much concerned with who does what as the fact that the personnel selected and working for the good of radio and the press in all bureaus are famous, experienced, level-headed patriots, men under whose guidance all of us may expect the greatest leeway and the greatest freedom in our listening and reading habits.

CONTEST

The Movie-Radio Guide "Buy a Bond or Defense Stamp Slogan Contest" proceeds apace, and what an avalanche of mail! The tremendous response has made it necessary to postpone announcement of the first winners until the issue of Feb. 21-27. Judges have been working overtime to be certain no gem is missed, that the finest, most timely and sales-impelling slogans win the awards each week. First winners, together with prize-winning slogans, will be announced next week.—The Editors.

"Sergeant York" FIDDLES AS AWARDS ROLL IN

STARDOM, picture-making, microphones, even honors—Gary Cooper takes them all in his long, lanky stride. Typical is this photograph of him with Walter Brennan (left) and Joan Leslie, his co-stars in Warner Bros.' "Sergeant York." Occasion was rehearsal for the CBS "Screen Guild Theater" broadcast Sunday, January 18, when the three stars presented a radio version of "Sergeant York," and when their picture was given the annual award of a national monthly magazine. Cooper, far from being flustered over the award ceremony, began "playing" the violin of one of the orchestra members. Simple, unassuming, modest, this tall Montana gentleman took the honor with simple dignity. Likewise the Movie-Radio Guide Elmer award to "Sergeant York" as the outstanding all-around motion picture of 1941. (See February 7-13 issue.) Cooper recognizes how much Walter Brennan, Joan Leslie and other members of the cast had to do with "Sergeant York's" dramatic worth. He also recognizes how much director Jesse Lasky had to do with making "Sergeant York" a fine, inspirational story. Above all, he recognizes what a grand person the real Sergeant York is—used every ounce of his very considerable acting genius to measure up to the original. What everybody else recognizes is that "Sergeant York" in a very real sense is a personal triumph for Gary Cooper. As a result 1942 is going to be a Gary Cooper year!

Carole Lombard Exits Smiling in "To Be or Not to Be" with Jack Benny

CAROLE LOMBARD didn't know early in January when she left Hollywood that she was to become America's No. 1 war heroine. She simply went east on a patriotic mission to launch a Defense Bond rally in the capital, Indianapolis, of her native state, Indiana. Yet she gave her life January 16 for her country just as much as any soldier or sailor on the front lines.

Miss Lombard, with her dynamic personality, her real, solid glamour, sold over two million dollars' worth of Defense Bonds in one hour in Indianapolis. And everywhere that she went on the trip, even when visiting the blasé Chicago newspapers, all people found her a grand person, the top of the cream.

But when the time came—when her number came up in the crash of the plane that was bearing her and her mother home—there can be little doubt that she exited smiling. Carole was that kind of happy, vitally living person. She didn't want her bad luck to dampen anyone else's fun. Whenever she was sick, she masked it. She did many stunts and posed for many pictures for newspapermen when she didn't feel like it, just because she was a good sport and she knew that they had assignments to get stories and pictures of her, and that it was their daily bread.

For Carole, despite all her fame and money, was considered by everyone in Hollywood to be the cinema capital's No. 1 glamour girl and regular fellow.

Carole Lombard would not have wanted tears to be shed over her bier. All Hollywood knows that. And so, in two or three weeks, her last picture, "To Be or Not to Be," with Jack Benny, a Korda-United Artists release, will be shown on the nation's screens, just as she would have wished it to be. —E. P.

1. LOVELY LEADING LADY of a troupe of actors playing "Hamlet" in Warsaw is Maria Tura (Carole Lombard). Jack Benny, as Hamlet, is her co-star and also her husband. The story opens shortly before Nazis' conquest of Poland

2. WITH CAROLE playing the hapless Ophelia (right) to Jack Benny's Hamlet, Shakespeare's tragic opus gets a hilarious working-over with liberal doses of "ham." Carole and Jack are Poland's greatest Thespians, the toast of Warsaw

3. DECLAIMING THE FAMED lines "To be or not to be" is duck soup for actor Benny until Adolf Hitler's legions arrive in Warsaw. Then he and fellow actors turn art to more serious purpose

4. WHEN POLAND IS INVADED actors don costumes from the anti-Nazi play they have been rehearsing, step into real-life roles and play an exciting game of counter-espionage with Nazi officials

5. BENNY WEARS NAZI general's uniform, with Tom Dugan, his associate at the Teatr Polski, as Hitler. Meanwhile, a young Nazi flyer is paying too much attention to Carole

6. CRITICAL MOMENT comes as Gestapo agent Professor Siletzky (Stanley Ridges) discovers that the Polish matinee idol gotten up as a general has duped him, Benny and his troupe, disguised as Nazis, were about to steal some important documents. Now the professor confronts him with gun

7. IT MIGHT BE PROFESSOR SILETZKY scrutinizing what's left of "General" Benny, but it isn't. This is "General" Benny disguised as the professor—and in another tight squeeze, with Gestapo men flanking him on both sides. Cause of his embarrassment is the real Prof. Siletzky, hidden in the chair

8. STILL DISGUISED as Siletzky, Jack bids cryptic good-by to wife Carole, with Gestapo agent ominously close. Carole recognized her husband, but wonders what's in store for him. Remember, this is only farce

Week End IN PALM SPRINGS

FOR a few breathless days after Pearl Harbor there wasn't much room in any American's mind for anything except war. There wasn't much thought of playing. Gradually the country drew its breath and settled back to a more nearly normal life. And though these are still very sober times, people are realizing that they need relaxation—need it more than ever. Take California's Palm Springs, where movie stars play, for instance. The Palm Springs hotels admit that business isn't what it was before the outbreak of war. But trade is picking up, because the Hollywood stars, like other people, are realizing that all work and worry and no play isn't good for private and public morale. And with many celebrities still making the Springs their sun haven for the winter, other tourists are flocking back, now that the initial war shock is over, knowing that there is still fun to be found at the resort, that there are still famous personalities to see and autographs to be sought. One particular week-end at Palm Springs recently found, among others, this gala array of celebrities: Jim and Marian Jordan (Fibber McGee and Molly), Irene Rich (of the "Dear John" sketch), songstress Shirley Ross of "Three Ring Time"; Frances Scully, Coast fashion expert and air columnist; Jack Benny and Mary Livingstone and the Benny writers; Sybil Chism, theme organist for "Lum and Abner"; and Kathleen Wilson (Claudia of "One Man's Family"). They were all making the most of the few hours of relaxation from work and partial escape from worry which the war has brought to millions of Americans.

PRETTIEST AND MOST PROMISING

EVERY so often editors get an unexpected tip-off on what really interests the movie-going public. For example, MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE's recent poll asking readers to "Help Name the Prettiest and Most Promising Starlet of 1941." Snowed under in the race to tell all concerning big-name, box-office personalities, editors too often forget what enormous interest there is in the newer stars. They know, certainly. But every one of the ballots—which poured in by the bundle—was a reminder in capital letters. Looking at the poll results, most significant is the coincidence of Laraine Day being voted both "Prettiest" and "Most Promising." Proving perhaps that movie-goers wisely demand both glamour and dramatic ability in an actress. Assuredly, Miss Day has both. Having shown feminine beauty and appeal in the "Dr. Kildare" pictures, Miss Day first showed her real acting strength in "My Son, My Son." Two starlets to watch are the runners-up. Gene Tierney ("Most Promising") scored in "Sundown," now appears in "Son of Fury." Janet Blair ("Prettiest") is the former Hal Kemp singer who will soon be seen with Pat O'Brien in "Trinidad."

THIS FOURSOME seemed like an ideal team when "Three Ring Time" was introduced to listeners a few months ago. Charles Laughton (extreme right), distinguished exponent of serious drama, and Milton Berle (left), equally distinguished exponent of funny gags, were to form a brace of wits, a new and different comedy team. Bob Crosby and Shirley Ross, between the comedians, were to supply music. But something went wrong; Laughton left the show

BOB CROSBY is the maestro of "Three Ring Time." Bob's appearance on the show marked his return to radio after taking time out to do some movie-making in Hollywood

INSIDE STORY OF THE "Three Ring Time" TROUBLES

LAST fall, teaming ponderous Charles Laughton with puckish Milton Berle, "Three Ring Time" made its debut as Mutual's first big West Coast show. It was to be Mutual's fair-haired child. But what has happened to "Three Ring Time" since then shouldn't have happened to a dog. Everything has gone wrong. In December the show switched to NBC and quite possibly may have been one of the factors in a bitter inter-network squabble which has now reached the courts in the form of a $10,000,000 suit. In January it was involved in the painful surgical operation of lopping off NBC's Blue Network.

Most serious trouble of all was revealed unexpectedly on Friday, Jan. 30, when "Three Ring Time" went out on its new Blue Network airplanes with Milton Berle, Edna May Oliver, Shirley Ross, Bob Crosby and his music—but without Charles Laughton. Laughton was not on the show. He won't be on it again, except perhaps as a guest.

What happened?

Why, as was learned later, did Laughton ask for the cancelation of his contract and why was it granted by the program's sponsor?

The snap answer would be: "Incompatibility." Cooperation is the first requirement for success in a comedy team, and it's only seldom that rugged individualists of the show world have been able to cooperate effectively. In the few instances where they have, there has usually been mutual confidence, some similarity of background, a meeting of minds. Certainly it is not surprising that two such widely different men as actor Laughton and clown Berle found the going tough.

Laughton was unhappy; Berle was unhappy. Laughton was irked when trouper Berle tried to show him how to fire comedy lines, how to get the most laughs out of them. Berle was irked because Laughton "stepped on" (came in too soon after) Berle's lines. Laughton wanted to shelve the tough, hard-bitten character he has made famous on the screen, also in numerous sorties on the air with Charlie McCarthy. He wanted to be a TROUBLE AROSE when Berle and Laughton got in each others' hair over their comedy lines. Laughton, with Shirley Ross, above, was irked when Berle tried to coach him.

Berle, taking his turn with the charming singer, above, thought Laughton was inexperienced at the gag game. Innocent bystander was announcer Bill Goodwin (right)

Photos by Blue Network

This Program Debuted as Mutual's Fair-Haired Child with Charles Laughton and Milton Berle as an Unusual Comedy Team. Then Hard Luck and Headaches Began to Harass It sort of lovable, good-natured and funny old duck, while the whole troupe, the producer and the sponsor counted on his doing a Captain Bligh every week on the broadcast. Result: Unhappiness all around.

So the Laughton-Berle combination didn't jell, and Laughton has gracefully asked to be released from his contract. Now "Three Ring Time" will continue with one comedy star, Milton Berle; one singing star, Shirley Ross; a series of comedian-guests of which Miss Oliver was the first.

TROUBLED as it has been with internal difficulties, "Three Ring Time" from the beginning has been an uncommonly good show. In Shirley Ross, Bob Crosby, Laughton, Berle and announcer Bill Goodwin, it had five versatile entertainment experts.

Miss Ross, who rose to fame with Bob Hope on the strains of "Thanks for the Memory," knows all the tricks of combining comedy and music. Bob Crosby, younger brother of Bing, is famed for his special brand of Dixieland music previously showcased on his own broadcast. Bill Goodwin needs no introduction as one of radio's super-super-announcers.

Many listeners undoubtedly will regret the departure of Charles Laughton, but this loss may be relieved by the added variety of having new guest stars each week. More important, Milton Berle will have a freer rein at fun-making in his own style. Berle has spent all but seven of his thirty-three years in show business. He made his stage debut in New York as a seven-year-old imitator of Charlie Chaplin, has since bobbed about the entertainment world, successfully clowning through vaudeville, legitimate theater, motion pictures and radio. His "Berle-ing Point" column in Variety rates him as one of the sharpest wits of the times. Milton Berle is a smart operator. In the driver's seat of "Three Ring Time" he'll have an opportunity to pull out all the stops of his own humor potentialities.

That's why "Three Ring Time" is looking ahead to happier days.

EDNA MAY OLIVER stepped in as guest star to fill the breach when Laughton suddenly left the show. Miss Oliver will be followed by a series of guests mostly on the comedy side

The Movie Front

Deanna Durbin Kisses and Makes Up With Universal Studio; Lew Ayres Checks in for the U. S. Army; Lupe Velez Tells What Creates Hollywood Romances

By EVANS PLUMMER

CONSIDERABLE to-do about Jane Withers being "dropped" from the 20th Century-Fox contract list. Matter of fact, Jane was offered a $750-a-week raise and a new long-term contract, but she and her mother thumbed it down. It would mean her making another batch of low-budget pictures (which, of course, is what she has been doing for seven years so successfully) and that Jane didn't want. Jane and Mrs. Withers feel that by free-lancing from here in, Jane will make more money, select what pictures she will or won't make, and get farther in the long run. Well, she may get more big-town screen play dates, but she'll never be more famous in the little places . . .

Other important contract news is that of Deanna Durbin's kissing and making up with the Universal Studio bosses. Their feud is all over now but the shouting and Deanna has promised to be a good little girl and come back to work. She lost her battle, but Universal may give in a bit, as a bonus, and let her do one outside picture now and then. That is up to Universal Studios. The same lot, too, makes the headlines by signing Charles Boyer as both producer and star. Boyer will pick his own stories, cast them, supervise the making of the screen plays, their cutting, budgets, etc. Quite a deal, yes? . . .

Travelogs, which have been so much dead fish up to now on account of the double and triple feature bills, are coming back. That is, James A. FitzPatrick's are. The M-G-M globetrotter has started a tour of Central America to record scenes in Mexico, Costa Rica, Guatemala, Honduras, Panama, San Salvador and Nicaragua—following the Pan-American Highway through Mexico to Panama with his camera. Two months will be required for the journey, and the travel expert is making the tour in cooperation with the Motion Picture Society for the Americas. Jock Whitney, coordinator, to develop a better understanding of Latin America by the United States public and the better relations which must follow . . .

Lew Ayres, ex of Ginger Rogers who is better known as the young Dr. Kildare to millions, has been checked in as of okay health for the United States Army and expects shortly to be classified. Whatever Uncle Sam decides he can do best to win the war, he'll be glad to do—even if it means serving in the Medical Corps! Seriously, however, Ayres would like the Medical Corps. Meantime, he will be permitted to finish his currently shooting Kildare picture for M-G-M . . .

The night-club situation is improving somewhat now that the war is in its third month. Even Ciro's has found a way to reopen Thursday nights—for charity. The spot has been taken over by the ladies behind the Bundles for Bluejackets outfit on the cook's night off, and all proceeds go to the B. F. B. Stars and studio biggies congregate for dinner and fun afterward which is directed into a sort of literary round table and highbrow quiz (Mr. Fadiman, please note the choice of the word) by Robert Arden, who has the help of such braintrusts as Lewis Allen Browne, Emil Ludwig and Walter Duranty . . .

—Walt Davis

TARZAN likes creamed chicken. Johnny Weissmuller stows it away at Nancy Kelly party

This is to serve notice once again that Gary Cooper has been chosen by the Sam Goldwyn Studios to portray Lou Gehrig on the screen in "The Pride of the Yankees," and to repeat that Gary Cooper also won the MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE poll which was conducted some three months ago. The editors of MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE want me to tell you this once more, because some readers who must save their copies for months before cutting out such things as voting coupons are STILL sending in the Gehrig ballot . . . It is too late now, readers . . . In fact, even Mrs. Gehrig is set, too. She'll be played by Teresa Wright. Gehrig as a boy may be enacted by Pat McCall, who was featured in "How Hollywood Safeguards Its Children," which appeared in the first 1942 issue of MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE. Incidentally, that's where the Goldwyn casting director first saw Pat! . . .

Where they are and what goes: Cary Grant, Ronald Colman and Jean Arthur are the high-powered trio assembled at Columbia Studios and making a film titled "The Gentlemen Misbehave." And Colman is wearing a spade beard! Joan Crawford will be on the Columbia lot, too, to make the picture ("He Kissed the Bride") Carole Lombard was to have done this spring. Big-hearted Joan has earmarked her total salary ($112,500) to various charities and war benefits. Vic Mature is still making money for 20th Century-Fox, which studio has offered a jackpot to RKO-Radio Pictures to relinquish their claim to Vic for a 1942 picture. Wonder baby Corey, age one year, seen with Marlene Dietrich in "The Lady Is Willing" (but the story wasn't), has been offered a twenty-one-year contract by Columbia Pictures! Joan Davis, in solid with Rudy Vallee on the air, has taken the place of Betty Kean in Republic's "Yokel Boy"; just when Betty had her big chance, she had to injure her ankle. Burgess Meredith and Claire Trevor are making the Woolrich novel thriller, "The Black Curtain," at Paramount. Fay Bainter is playing "Mrs. Wiggs" in Paramount's 1942 cabbage patch. She has a swell bunch of star kid supporters, including Carolyn Lee, Betty Brewer, Mary Thomas, Billy Lee and Alfalfa Carl Switzer. Arline Judge just signed a three-year deal with the Pine-Thomas Paramount unit. Ann Sothorn and Judy Garland are among the Metro pretties lined up for "Six Girls in Uniform," a story based on the Women's Unit of the Auxiliary Corps. Foil picked by Greg LaCava for Irene Dunne in "Sheltered Lady" is Patric Knowles. George Montgomery gets quite a plum in the lead to 20th Century-Fox' "Down to the Sea in Ships." Barbara Stanwyck and Nancy Coleman have been joined by Geraldine Fitzgerald to comprise Warners' "The Gay Sisters" . . .

REGGIE GARDINER, once the beau of Hedy Lamarr, pulls gag that slays his new girl friend, starlet Gayle Melott, at Mocambo

Movie acting is no sinecure, and the heavy work schedule and emotional strains required are often bad business for a man or woman over fifty years of age, especially if one has a weak heart. Legion are the good character actors who met their Maker last year while on the job. But good old character actor Harry Davenport, who became seventy-six years of age last week, took time out of his birthday only long enough to eat a huge slice of the birthday cake presented to him by Rita Hayworth on the "Tales of Manhattan" set at 20th Century-Fox. The role he is now playing is his 165th on the screen, if he recalls correctly. He began acting at the age of five; played Damon's son in "Damon and Pythias" and earned $6.96. Damon was played by Harry's father, E. L. Davenport . . .

What creates Hollywood romances? Ask Lupe Velez, who has no inhibitions, and she will tell you. She told us why she went after and swiped writer Eric Remarque away from Marlene Dietrich. It wasn't, isn't love. Explains Lupe. "'E looked so sad like. Lupe decide she make 'eem happy.'" Evidently Lupe succeeded, for Eric is smiling and sometimes downright laughing these days as he escorts Lupe about the night-clubs . . .

Report from the department of vital statistics:

Births and stork rumors: Actress Anna Lee, wife of writer Bob Stevenson, is proud mother of six-and-one-half-pound Caroline, so named in honor of Anna's first American picture, "My Life With Caroline." She's their second daughter. Rumor is that Bette Davis will adopt, and that the Oscar Levants are expecting the long-legged bird, like Marjita Scott, any minute.

Don Barry and Peggy Stewart will file for divorce any second, and Mrs. William Hawks (nee actress Virginia Walker) and the RKO producer have admitted separation, but with possible reconciliation.

IT'S A REAL brawl between Ginger Rogers and Lynne Overman, and it's typical of the rip-roaring crime picture, "Roxie Hart"

MOVIE REVIEW

"Roxie Hart"

Cast: Ginger Rogers, Adolphe Menjou, George Montgomery, Lynne Overman, Nigel Bruce, Phil Silvers, Sara Allgood, William Frawley, Spring Byington, Ted North, Helene Reynolds and others. A 20th Century-Fox picture; produced and written for the screen by Nunnally Johnson and directed by William Wellman; based on the play "Chicago" by Maurine Watkins.

Type of Picture: A melodramatic comedy. If there is something about "Roxie Hart" which stands out above all else, it is that Ginger Rogers is a really great actress. While watching her in this rather unsympathetic role of Roxie, one couldn't help but think back to her many other and varied roles, one of which was "Kitty Foyle," that garnered her an Academy Award. Any girl who can act like this one is great.

This is the story: "Roxie Hart" is the talking version of the old silent "Chicago." Having waited fourteen years to do the show again, producers have given it more comedy and more satire than the original. It's the story of the torrid twenties. Particularly of Chicago where there never was a jury so ignoble as to "swing" a woman for any crime. It was the day of Clara Bow, Ruth Snyder, Aimée Semple McPherson and a host of other fabulous names. It was the era of big things and the case of "Roxie Hart" was one of the biggest. One of Roxie's friends is murdered in her apartment. She is influenced by a story-seeking reporter to admit the crime so that she will get nation-wide publicity and a vaudeville contract after she is acquitted. She goes for it. Becomes Chicago's most glamorous murderess. Capone is riding high, but so is Roxie. In jail Ginger dances, brawls with other feminine jail-belles and runs the emotional gamut while interviewing reporters and later at the trial. The courtroom scene which takes up a large part of the picture is a marvelous, satirical travesty on the justice in Cook County in those days.

Verdict: The entire cast is hand in glove with their roles. It's an uproariously good show. Real entertainment. But above it all there's Ginger Rogers, who is rapidly getting into a class all by herself as Hollywood's finest actress. Adult appeal.

Hollywood Goes to Washington for President's Birthday; Lucy Monroe Gives Up Show to Sell Bonds; Costello a "Sick Boy," Abbott Carries On

WASHINGTON

By MAJOR CURTIS MITCHELL

This town, already a Mecca for tourists and sightseers, hummed like a beehive last week with a pack of the widest-eyed fans ever to step onto Pennsylvania Avenue. For one single luncheon they were all together and then they were turned loose on the town. Their hostess was Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and the guy they came to see was F. D. R. himself.

The 1942 President's Birthday Celebration is history now but the things that happened are still whispered in lobbies. It started with the luncheon at the White House. Imagine a guest list like this:

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Arnold, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Autry, Rosalind Russell and husband Frederick Brisson, Miss Carol Bruce, Mr. Jackie Cooper, Mr. and Mrs. Meyer Davis, Lt. and Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Miss Betty Grable, Miss Bonita Granville, Mr. and Mrs. Jean Hersholt, Mr. and Mrs. William Holden, Miss Ruth Hussey, Miss Dorothy Lamour, Miss Lucy Monroe, Lt. Robert Montgomery, Miss Michele Morgan, Miss Patricia Morrison, Ensign Wayne Morris, Mr. Pat O'Brien, Mr. John Payne, Mr. Gene Raymond, Mr. Mickey Rooney, Lt. James Stewart, Mr. Conrad Thibault, Miss Dinah Shore.

And others. Whew!

Having been on the fringe of star-spangled street quite a few years, I thought I knew pretty well the tribulations of being a top-flight celebrity. But I didn't really know the work that was involved; just the work of visiting a President of the United States, for instance.

The President's birthday is celebrated in Washington with a half-dozen different balls and birthday parties. The buildings in which those balls are given are all over town. An eleven-stop itinerary was followed by all the stars, each in a limousine escorted by special motorcycle police. This sequence happens to be that followed by Edward Arnold. He started at the Hotel Willard, went from there to Uline's Arena (in which Mrs. Roosevelt cut a 650-pound birthday cake), then to the White House. Thence to the Shoreham Hotel, the Mayflower Hotel, Uline's, and the Wardman Park Hotel. At the hotels so many people crowded the lobbies the stars had to use kitchen entrances. Next to the Howard Theater, the Hamilton Hotel, the Earle Theater and the Capitol Theater.

At three o'clock they were through. Each star had been paraded before every audience in town, had sung or danced or smiled prettily. Edward Arnold had acted as master of ceremonies at three different places.

There had been one significant oasis of quiet and solemnity during the previous six hectic hours. That was when they gathered at the White House in

"Voice of Experience" Dies

A VETERAN radio voice was stilled Sunday, February 1. The voice was widely known and faithfully followed as the "Voice of Experience," radio counselor on domestic affairs. Its owner's actual name was M. Sayle Taylor, who died on a Hollywood street of a heart attack at the age of fifty-three. Taylor was born in Louisville, Ky., the son of a Baptist minister. He had been in radio since 1927, had written books on human relations.

the Oval Room to hear the birthday broadcast. After it was over, the President asked Lt. Robert Montgomery, of the U. S. Navy, to introduce his Hollywood visitors. Mrs. Roosevelt stood beside the President. Then those party-weary fans from California had their big thrill when the President shook their hands and thanked them for making his birthday a success . . .

At 3:30 a.m. most of the stars were in Child's eating ham and eggs. Pat O'Brien, weary and hungry, was just about to cut into his own victuals when a Senator's wife, overcome with hero worship, sat down next to him and said, "Tell me all about you. I'll do the eating." And she did . . .

Dorothy Lamour was escorted by Greg Bautzer, whom she introduced as "my ex-boy friend." Dorothy's new heart-interest is a millionaire—and throughout her Washington visit she wore a ring he gave her . . .

Solemn, church-going Lord Halifax, British ambassador, and his lady grinned delightedly at Edward Arnold's stories. To the lord and lady, Arnold seemed like "Diamond Jim" come back to life . . .

Dinah Shore, sensationally popular everywhere, proved a great favorite here. She had promised her doctor to sing only once, but she sang a dozen times. It was that sort of night . . .

Two young lieutenants from Fort Myer will not forget the evening before the birthday celebration. It was after dark when they stopped with Dorothy Lamour at the Lincoln Memorial on the east bank of the Potomac. Soft lights within the brooding memorial structure played over the outlines of the classic figure slumped in its giant chair. The sarong girl looked long into the stone face of another President who had fought to save his nation, bowed her head for a long, quiet moment, and then tiptoed away to where the bustling world claimed her. Not many young men have seen our glamour girls in moments like that.

A radio reporter's routine coverage of the four major broadcasting studios never fails to bring forth interesting information. For instance, up at Radio City, just off Fifth Avenue, are housed the NBC Red and the Blue Network. Our first stop is the newsroom, where a battery of teletype machines unceasingly brings in the latest news bulletins from all over the world. Here we learn that commentator H. V. Kaltenborn's news broadcast of Sunday, January 25, in which he discussed the Roberts report on Pearl Harbor, kept the place busy handling a record flock of telegrams and congratulatory phone calls. And that his remarks were read permanently into the Congressional Record the following day. Here also we learn that ex-NBC commentator Alex Dresler, hale and hearty despite harrowing experiences, has just returned from Berlin, where he reports that, though the Germans are indifferent to the point of being apathetic about the war, they are by no means cracking. And Fred Bate, recently returned from London, reports that the Britons are cheered by Russian victories and America's formal entry into the conflict . . .

Lucy Monroe, the "Star-Spangled Banner" Girl, who has sung the national anthem on innumerable occasions all over the country, recently asked her sponsors for a year's leave of absence. Under auspices of the Treasury Department, she is planning to devote the next twelve months to a personal-appearance tour to help sell defense bonds. Her last appearance on her program, "Manhattan Merry-Go-Round," was on January 25. Miss Monroe is the first radio performer to ask for a leave of absence from an important radio job in order to do governmental work . . .

Dropping in at the Blue Network, we learn that Dinah Shore, young blues singer, started her first hotel or night-club engagement on February 12, when she opened at New York City's swanky Waldorf-Astoria. Another star of the New York stage, Lenore Ulric, started a series of appearances on the "Inner Sanctum Mystery" programs on February 8 . . .

It is expected that frequent visitors to the studios will soon have to carry similar passes. CBS has added classes for the sixty-odd fire wardens of their New York building to its courses for employees . . .

New Yorkers were slightly startled recently when they read the following ad in the classified columns of the newspapers: "Wanted—Talking dog—must have vocabulary of ten words or more—preferably no accent. Hobby Lobby." Dave Elman, emcee of the program, inserted the ad, said that he has received about ten replies, but claims that none of the canines' vocabularies was sufficient. (Or maybe the hounds had an accent!) He also received numerous phone calls, among them one from a man who said "woof" fifteen times till Dave hung up, thoroughly disgusted . . .

Last stop is the Mutual Broadcasting System, on Broadway, a block away from famous Times Square. At Mutual we're told that Clifton Fadiman, suave master of ceremonies of "Keep 'Em Rolling," made his last appearance on that show on February 1. At this writing, his successor has not as yet been announced.

We were watching Hollywood's most famous photographers, including our own celebrated Jack Albin, make portraits of Amos 'n' Andy on Saturday morning, January 31, and it was easily noticeable that A. & A. were nervous. Amos (Freeman Gosden) explained, "We've had a wire that Niles Trammell (the head of NBC, who sold them on their first commercial program) is in the hospital and this morning the crisis—whether he will live or die—is coming." In a few minutes, their efficient secretary of many years, Louise Summa, phoned. She had news from the East; Niles' crisis had come and gone, his fever was receding. He would live.

Making pictures of A. & A. in black-face is a rarity. It takes so much time to put on a believable make-up and assemble all the many props that they don't do it very often. But watch for a wave of A. & A. photographs—all blacked out for an air-raid. Good

On Tuesday, December 9, two days after Pearl Harbor, Alan Scott, young Chicago commentator, talked to listeners about radio's part in the war effort, and he suggested that it would take only an official tap on the arm to enlist his full-time services in this connection. One of the listeners to Scott's regular broadcast was Mayor Edward J. Kelly. Next morning Scott got a phone call from Mayor Kelly, who, as Coordinator for Civilian Defense in the Chicago metropolitan area, gave Scott that official tap on the arm. Now Scott spends six or seven days a week in a makeshift office with a little plaster and a lot of radio-in-war problems in his hair. Alan says every station in Chicago is cooperating fully. One of Scott's original ideas now in operation involves the playing on all the stations of daily one-minute transcriptions on which Mayor-Coordinator Kelly delivers the Civilian Defense Message of the Day—instructions, interpretations and suggestions to citizens regarding the relation of the war to private living.

Calling All Music-Lovers! Here Is News, Background and Color, Interpretation, Complete Program Service Planned to Increase Your Listening Pleasure

By ROBERT BAGAR

New York World-Telegram Music Expert and Associate Program Annotator for New York Philharmonic Society

THE revival of George Gershwin's folk-opera, "Porgy and Bess," in New York has been a long time coming. When the Theater Guild produced the work some years ago there were those who saw in it lasting qualities, qualities that differed materially from the usual Broadway musical Gershwin had penned to order for years. Attractive as most of his tunes had been for these countless works, few had more than a passing appeal, few penetrated deeper than the surface of a giddy, synthetic world, a purely make-believe world.

"Porgy and Bess," however, served to launch the late lamented composer into a realm he had never before visited or, perhaps, known about. With his music for this work he disclosed not only a maturer stage talent and a more developed technic but also a keen insight into human values, the emotions, the spiritual implications involved in phases of living. He was given a story and libretto that went beyond the merely synthetic, and now he was faced with something closer to reality. Hence he created a more serious music, for all its stylistic kinship to his previous output.

It is interesting to compare the reactions of two eminent critics on the occasion of the "Porgy and Bess" premiere:

"Mr. Gershwin is still easiest in mind when he is writing songs with choruses," said Brooks Atkinson, drama critic of the New York Times. "He and his present reviewer are on familiar ground when he is writing a droll tune like 'A Woman Is a Sometime Thing,' or a lazy ducky solo like 'I Got Plenty o' Nuttin',' or made-to-order spirituals like 'Oh, de Lawd Shakes de Heaven,' or Sportin' Life's (one of the characters) hot-time number entitled 'There's a Boat That's Leavin' Soon for New York.' If Mr. Gershwin does not enjoy his task most in moments like this, his audience does. In sheer quality of character they are worth an hour of formal music transitions."

The late Lawrence Gilman, who was then music critic of the New York Herald-Tribune, said:

"Perhaps it is needlessly Draconian to begrudge Mr. Gershwin the song-hits which he has scattered through his score and which will doubtless enhance his fame and popularity. Yet they mar it. They are its cardinal weakness. They are a blemish upon its musical integrity . . . it is not Gershwin, the apt and accommodating lyricist, who is most conspicuously present in 'Porgy and Bess,' but Gershwin the musical dramatist, who has, in certain fortunate moments of this score, been moved to compassionate and valid utterance by the wildness and the pathos and the tragic fervor that can so strangely agitate the souls of men. These pages will abide, and honor the composer, long after the musical-comedy treacle which drips from the other pages has ceased to gladden even those whose favor is scarcely worth the price."

These observers took opposite views. Mr. Atkinson liked the set numbers, the songs, that is, above all; Mr. Gilman, on the other hand, brushed those aside and saw a contribution of worth in the strictly operatic part of the score, the in-between music, let's say. Of course, time alone will tell whether audiences will go to hear the songs or to hear an absorbing essay in the field of opera by an extremely talented American. This writer feels that Gershwin has created more than songs. They, the past seven years have proved, are works of art in a sense, they have lived this long, they are still fresh. But, as Mr. Gilman pointed out, the rest of the score has its merits too. Then there is the matter of a very compelling libretto. It is my guess that Gershwin has written an enduring work, because he has adhered to an intensely interesting subject with the enthusiasm and the seriousness of purpose of the true opera composer. We must remember, too, that this was his first attempt in the form. There is no telling how far he may have travelled along these paths, had he been vouchsafed a normal span of life.

A Musical Biographer

Jaromir Weinberger, whose "Lincoln Symphony" is played by the Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra at its Sunday broadcast, has already learned the meaning of success. An opera of his, "Schwanda, the Bagpipe Player," was first given in Prague in 1927, where it enjoyed a cool reception, so to speak. The following year, however, a German translation of the piece was presented at Breslau and the opera whirlwinded its way around the world after an enormous triumph in that city. Up to now well over one thousand performances have been given it, which is a fabulous thing in these times.

Weinberger, a native of Bohemia, has enjoyed success also as an orchestral composer. One of his fairly recent works, "Under a Spreading Chestnut Tree," written in 1939, and dedicated to the Philharmonic-Symphony Society and its conductor, John Barbirolli, has made the rounds of the symphony orchestras in this country. Of this score the composer has written:

"A newsreel was my inspiration. The summer of 1938 I spent at Juan les Pins on the French Riviera, the Cote d'Azur. One evening I went to see a movie in the open air. In the newsreels nowadays you usually see dictators and very few honest people, so I was surprised to see something agreeable. I saw a boys' camp in England, many young people, and among them in democratic simplicity, His Majesty the King. He was dressed in the same sweater as his young subjects and he joined them in the singing and laughing. They sang a wonderful old folk-tune. The song had not only very thrilling words but an amazingly wonderful tune; it is called a gesture song.

"At several points the music suddenly stopped, and his British Majesty with his loyal subjects started to clap their hands, jump to their feet and start a pantomime—finally joining again in singing the tune to its end.

THE GREAT DANE, Wagnerian tenor Lauritz Melchior, sings lead in "Tannhaeuser" on the Metropolitan Opera broadcast Saturday

I liked this whole scene very much and I said to myself: 'This is the theme for which you, Jaromir, shall write variations and a fugue.'

The "democratic simplicity" of a powerful monarch was enough to inspire a clever and engaging orchestral composition. We shall see what Weinberger's musical thoughts have been in his consideration of another simple democrat, the Great Liberator.

"Tannhaeuser" at the Met

Religion, history and legend are conveniently drawn upon by Wagner for his libretto of "Tannhaeuser." What's more, he applies his borrowings to high-flown, moralistic purposes. "Tannhaeuser" is no more than a treatise on sacred and profane love, with a lesson to be learned into the bargain.

Wagner, a pretty important personage in Dresden at about the time of the work's world premiere, could call into service skilled painters from Paris for the scenery—money no object. But there had been a bit of a controversy over the setting for the Hall of Song in Act II. Luetichau, the intendant of the Dresden Opera, had suggested that no new scenery need be painted for this, since a holdover from a previous "Oberon," a setting for the grand hall of the Emperor Charlemagne, could be utilized. Wagner stuck to his guns, nevertheless, and, as usual, Wagner won. But because of delay in the arrival of the set from Paris, the production of "Tannhaeuser" in Dresden on October 19, 1845, was scenically according to Wagnerian specifications in every detail, save that of the Great Hall. You've guessed it, the one used was the Charlemagne set. The opera's lukewarm reception was attributed in part to the appearance of this old familiar.

Some sixteen years later the opera was produced in Paris, thanks to its championship by the Princess Metternich, wife of the Austrian ambassador to France. Wagner lengthened his first scene to include a Bacchanale. The Princess set forth the causes of the work's failure in the French capital. She says:

"The day of the performance drew nigh and in most circles little goodwill was confessed. It was stated generally that a protest should be made against the abominable futurist music, and it was rumored that stormy scenes might be expected at the Opera. In the clubs the men were annoyed because Wagner would not have a regular ballet, but only a few poses of the ballerinas in the Venusberg. The club subscribers to the Opera expected a ballet at nine-thirty sharp, no matter what the opera. This, at least, was the custom of the time. No one who knew anything of art could conceive where a ballet could be introduced into the midst of 'Tannhaeuser.' Wagner declared that he would not accede to the silly wishes of the subscribers, because he could not. And he was perfectly right, but his refusal was to be paid for dearly."

There is a plot, of course, to "Tannhaeuser," but it by no means assumes the importance usually attached to the average opera story. Briefly, Tannhaeuser, a young knight of the thirteenth century, has fled his life of minstrelsy and repaired to the retreat of the goddess Venus, whose lover he has become. Venus, naturally, is the embodiment of profane love. Elisabeth, niece of the Landgrave of Thuringia, represents sacred love. She, too, is enamored of him, and he finally breaks away from the goddess to return to his friends. But in the midst of a song, which is delivered in the Great Hall of the Landgrave's castle, he mentions his irreverent passion for Venus. The gathered knights are about to slay him on the spot, but Elisabeth intercedes for him. The Landgrave commands him to join a group of pilgrims who are soon to set out for Rome and there to seek absolution from the Pope. He returns from an unsuccessful mission. He has been refused absolution. Elisabeth dies and Tannhaeuser, who, at last, hears from messengers absolution has finally been granted, falls dead beside her coffin.

Some New Recordings

Chopin, one of the world's greatest composers for the piano, is again given homage by Victor, this time with two albums of waltzes (Volumes I and II). They are played attractively by Alexander Brailowsky. Another Victor album of quality is Miliza Korjus' singing of several items, accompanied by an orchestra. Such pieces as the Benedict Carnival of Venice, Taubert's Der Vogel im Wald, the Shadow Song from Meyerbeer's "Dinorah" and others comprise the set. And for the lovers of Verdi's "Otello" there is a new Victor album offering excerpts from that opera. Tiana Lemnitz, soprano, and Torsten Ralf, tenor, sing capably the Love Duet from Act I. Then Miss Lemnitz delivers the Willow Song and the Ave Maria in beautiful style. Bruno Seidler-Winkler and the Berlin State Opera Orchestra supply accompaniments.

BEATRICE KAY, of CBS' "Gay Nineties Revue," will charge defense-stamp admission fees to visit her unique Gay Nineties Museum

POPULAR MUSIC

More Musical Patriots

Beatrice Kay, singing comedienne and star of the CBS "Gay Nineties Revue," is applying half her salary to the purchase of defense bonds. And when her "Gay Nineties Museum," which she plans to establish in a wing of her 250-year-old Closter, N. J., home, is completed she will charge a fee of a ten-cent defense stamp for admission. The "Museum" will be filled with interesting Americana, such as letters from Eva Tanguay and Trixie Friganza, together with the original copies of songs they made famous and which both artists forwarded to her. Also on exhibition may be found hundreds of "period" mustache cups, fans, shoe-buckles, costumes, hats, hat-pins, theater programs, porcelain and glass ware, linens, ruffled "Gay Nineties" corsets and too much other material to mention.

The Lombardos, all six of them—Guy, Carmen, Lebert, Victor and Rose Marie—are not going to be outdone by anybody in Americanism. Each week Guy collects from his kin, as well as every other member of the band, enough to buy each at least one defense bond. And that isn't all, for any Lombardo fan who sends in a twenty-five-cent defense stamp will receive in return not only his stamp but also an autographed picture of the Lombardo band in full regalia.

The Better Pop Records

You might have expected Harry James to come through with a swell performance of "Blues in the Night." Here it is on Columbia 36500, coupled with "All for Love." Benny Goodman and his orchestra give us the very soul of jazz—much maligned word—in their account of "Somebody Nobody Loves" and "Let's Give Love a Chance" (Okeh 6562). Another Okeh item of worth is Count Basie's record offering "Harvard Blues"—very, very blues—and "Ball of Fire" (6563). And one more Columbia disk that should be given due consideration is Eddy Duchin's rendering—piano featured, of course—of "How About You?" and "Sometimes" (36501).

Nazis Attempt Mischief

THE Nazis are trying to make mischief between the Allies in a desperate attempt to scare away some of their own nightmares. To encourage the Italians, the Nazi radio tells them that the British Empire is crumbling, that it will never regain its present size or its prestige on the Continent. It tells Australia that its politicians are to blame because they won't stay out of war. It tells Britain that it is at the mercy of the Wall Street shylocks. It tells America that it is linked with the most corrupt empire in the world, that the British are gradually taking over the United States as a compensation for the loss of their own empire. Two men are blamed for the present state of affairs. They are, according to Berlin, Churchill, the grave-digger of the empire, and Emperor Butinsky Roosevelt. One thing that Goebbels can't seem to get through his head is that Churchill and Roosevelt are at the head of their respective countries because the people put them there. They stay in office because they have our confidence and support. We are free to criticize them, even replace them if necessary. In Nazi Germany no one can criticize Lord Hitler. In Nazi Germany if Hitler makes a mistake it is not Hitler that must go. It is one of his generals that must go or die of a "heart attack."

The Nazi radio launched a vigorous attack on the British Admiralty for withholding information for about eight weeks concerning the sinking by the Germans of a 24,000-ton battleship, and yet the Nazi home radio is consistent in its failure to tell its own people about the true state of affairs in Russia. The story to them is always that the winter line is holding. The loss of no Russian towns since Rostov has been admitted.

Hear Radio Alger

If the mere mention of the name Alger conjures up the mental image for you that it does for me; if you too see narrow, cobbled streets, swarthy Arabs leading heavily laden camels, shifting Sahara sands, marching Foreign Legionnaires, then you too will get a great kick out of tuning in "Radio Alger" (pronounced Radio Alzhay). Reception from Radio Alger is usually poor and irregular, but of late listeners have been reporting tremendous signals from this exotic city. TPZ (12.12) and TPZ2 (8.96) broadcast each day from 2:30 to 4:15 p.m. and from 5:00 to 7:00 p.m. EST. The first transmission is best heard over TPZ (12.12), the latter transmission over TPZ2 (8.96). News in French is broadcast at 4:00 and 5:30 p.m. EST. Although Radio Alger does not identify in English, it can be easily recognized by frequent loud "bongs" on a huge gong which separate various program items. The second transmission starting at 5:00 p.m. is ushered in with a few minutes of weird Arabic music reminiscent of the Casbah (the Arabic section of Alger. Remember the motion picture "Algiers"). Often very good symphonic and very up-to-the-minute popular music is featured over Radio Alger.

Hitler-Napoleon Parallel

"London Calling" points out that the Nazis do not like comparisons with 1812. This is evident from their broadcasts; both Berlin and the subservient Rome station have frequently denied similarity between Hitler's Russian campaign and Napoleon's. Yet month

MEET Edward Nordhoff Beck, brand-new member of the Foreign-Language Staff of WGEO-WGEA, Schenectady, who each day writes and broadcasts messages of hope for his old friends in France. (See item on this page) by month the parallel grows more obvious. Hitler began his invasion on June 22. Napoleon on June 24, but the latter only began his Russian campaign as late as mid-summer because his original intention was to spread it over two years, whereas Hitler made it quite clear that he intended to annihilate the Russian armies in a single campaign. Napoleon entered Moscow on September 15. Hitler didn't get there at all. Napoleon (and this is an important point) had the sense to begin his retreat on October 15. Hitler was foolish enough to postpone his until nearly Christmas. Both, having failed at invasion, have tried—and failed—to conquer England from Russia.

Edward Nordhoff Beck

Edward Nordhoff Beck, who recently joined the foreign-language staff of WGEO-WGEA, Schenectady, to write and broadcast news in French, delivers his daily talks to old friends. Young Beck spent several years in France, experienced the invasion and fall of the country and escaped to America only a few months ago.

Beck went to Paris in 1938 to study it had come to the point where if crowds shouted 'Vive de Gaulle' or 'Vive l'Angleterre' there would be no more meat to be had in the city for four weeks."

Hearing over a forbidden radio set the voice of President Roosevelt proclaiming a state of national emergency, Beck resolved to escape from France and return to America to see if he couldn't be of some use. And he did have luck. Kind friends in the provinces, where he had once stayed, told him how to contact residents on the border between occupied and unoccupied France. These kindly people gave him a bicycle, showed him a lane wandering off into a meadow. And at 7:30 in the evening—when the Germans wouldn't think of leaving their supper—in a dark, driving rainstorm, he reentered the civilized world, while his benefactors called to him, "Two hundred meters and you'll be in France. God go with you."

Beck's French broadcasts at WGEO and WGEA go out daily to Europe, over both stations, a total of ten fifteen-minute periods daily except Sundays, sending to France factual news of the world, and of the United States' part in the war, and messages of hope to democratic people now under the Nazi rule.

News About the Stations

THE PACIFIC WAR AREA—Robert Skyten of East Brookfield, Mass., writes that a new Singapore station on 11.93 megs is being heard weakly from 7:20 to 8:30 p.m. EST. News in Chinese is broadcast at 7:45 p.m.; in English at 8:00 p.m. EST. The English identification is "Singapore calling on the 41-, 31- and 25-meter bands." I only hope this station will still be on the air and in the hands of the British when you read this . . . XGRS, the Nazi-controlled station at Shanghai, China, has shifted to 11.68 megs, where it is heard evenings from approximately 7:00 to 9:00 p.m. EST with fair signal strength. Setting-up exercises are broadcast at 7:15 p.m.; news in English at 7:45 p.m. EST . . . Melbourne, Australia's, nightly program to western North America is now being broadcast from 1:55 to 2:40 a.m. EST over VLQ (9.615) and VLG (9.58), the latter replacing VLG3 . . . Bangkok, Thailand, is now being heard daily to 11:00 a.m. EST on the West Coast on a new frequency of 6.06 megs. Before signing off, a signal consisting of four chimes repeated three times is given.

BROADCASTING IN EUROPE-AFRICA—Finnish short-wave stations OFE (11.785), OFD (9.495) and OIE (15.19) are broadcasting the following news periods daily: 12:45 p.m., English; 1:00 p.m., French; 1:15 p.m., Hungarian; 1:30 p.m., Italian, and 1:45 p.m., German . . . "European Revolutionary," and undercover anti-Nazi station on 9.64 megs, may be heard throughout the afternoon (EST) on the hour . . . Roger Legge of Binghamton, New York, advises me that YUC (9.505), Belgrade, after being absent from the air for a long time, may once more be heard with programs in German near 4:00 p.m. EST.

Frequency Modulation

Foundation Facts and Latest Developments About Radio's Youngest and Fastest Growing Offspring. Join the Parade of FM Listeners!

By DICK DORRANCE

General Manager of FM Broadcasters, Inc.

ONE of the more unusual facts about FM which many people—even right in the radio industry itself—do not yet grasp is that a high-power transmitter is not always necessary for a wide range of FM reception. Some FM stations with 50,000 watts don't cover as much territory as others with only 5,000. FM stations are licensed on the basis of the area they serve as measured in square miles. This is quite different from procedure with regular (AM) broadcast stations, licensed solely on the basis of their power in watts.

With FM, you see, it is possible to cover a large swath of countryside using moderately low power, providing the transmitting antenna is placed high enough. If another FM transmitter wants to serve the same area equally well, but can't get its antenna up so high, then it must compensate for lack of elevation by an increase of power. Hilltops and tall buildings are much in demand for FM installations.

Even before a single wire is soldered in constructing a new FM station, engineers can figure almost exactly how much power, in combination with a certain height of antenna, will be needed to serve an area of a given size. Most FM stations, therefore, operate at odd output powers like 13,300 watts, or 9,850 watts, or 2,105 watts. Furthermore, they are aided by extremely efficient FM antennas. One of the New York City FM outlets is planning a special antenna atop a skyscraper that will take 10,000 watts and make it do the work of 48,000 watts.

An important point from the listeners' standpoint, however, is that the Federal Communications Commission insists all FM stations serving the same city must be heard by the radio audience with equal signal strength. In other words, as you tune across your FM dial, all the FM stations in your city—when they completely fulfill the terms of their construction permits—will come in with approximately the same degree of volume.

Who Can Hear FM?

The FCC has established definite "service areas" for all important cities. (Outlets in such cities are known as "Class B" stations.) New York FM transmitters, for example, are required to cover 8,500 square miles; Chicago, 10,800; Philadelphia, 9,300, and so on. These areas are determined by reference to many maps and surveys, and conform to what economists call "basic trading areas"—meaning the territory whose business and cultural life radiates from the city in question. The United States has about 625 of these so-called "basic trading areas."

But you mustn't get the impression that FM is designed to serve just city dwellers. There are two other important types of FM stations. The first of these, called "Class A" transmitters, is for small towns of less than 25,000 population with limited local coverage. And the second—"Class C" type—is usually built on high mountain tops, serving more than 15,000 square miles, and intended to service rural communities and small towns not within the sphere of big cities.

Those Strange Call Letters

One of the first things you notice about an FM station is that its call letters are not at all like those assigned to regular (AM) broadcast stations. There are several reasons.

To begin with, the FCC frankly admits there aren't enough three- and four-letter combinations to go around. Ships and shore radio-telegraphy stations also use these combinations, and the available supply is running seriously low. Originally the FM broadcasters asked for call signs exactly like those used by ordinary stations.

However, the FCC, when it gave FM a go-ahead in 1940, found it advisable to work out a new system of call-letter assignments that would be both different and useful. The result was an arrangement, adapted from a system employed by Chile, which instantly tells the listener where to tune on the dial when he wants to hear any particular station.

The prefix—as with ordinary stations—is either "W" or "K." The former is assigned east of the Mississippi; the latter, west. Next come two numerals. These are derived from the frequency or channel assigned to the station.

All FM broadcasting takes place between 42 and 50 megacycles in the ultrahigh-frequency part of the radio spectrum—way down beyond the short-wave bands. (A "megacycle," if you don't know, means a thousand kilocycles. In other words, 42 megacycles is the same thing as 42,000 kilocycles. There's nothing mysterious about "frequency"—it's just like a street address which lets you know where to find a desired station in the radio frequency spectrum.)

FM stations are allowed to use channels spaced every 200 kilocycles on the FM band—42.1, 42.3, 42.5, 42.7 and so on right up to 49.9 megacycles. All these, as you will note, start with the figure "4." So just throw this away and the decimal point with it. That leaves a double numeral—21, 23, 25, 27 and so on right up to—you guessed it—99. FM receiver dials are therefore being calibrated in that fashion on the newer sets, and the double numeral is made an integral part of a commercial FM station's call letters. On the end is appended one or two letters indicative of the city in which the station is located, such as "NY" for New York.

The System in Practise

Let's take a typical FM call assignment—like "W43B"—and dissect it. The "W" means it's east of the Mississippi. The "43" means you can find it at 43 on the dial, and that it operates on 44.3 megacycles (44,300 kilocycles). And because this particular station happens to be in Boston, you have reason enough for the "B."

Incidentally, all this explanation on the why of FM call letters applies only to commercial stations. You may be confused to find in the MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE FM program listings a few stations having call letters like "W2XMN" or "W2XOY." These are still experimental outlets, using experimental designations, but soon they will change over to the regular commercial call letters. "Experimental" does not imply they are still perfecting FM—it's just that these transmitters have not yet been revamped to meet all the FCC specifications outlined in the commercial construction permits which most hold.

Facts About Coverage

FM, like anything else that's new, has its own peculiar crop of pseudo-experts who'll tell you any and everything about it with blithe disregard for whether or not they know the actual facts. It took the pseudo-experts to spread a stubborn rumor that FM stations can't be heard over thirty or, at the most, forty miles away from the transmitter.

It's interesting to note that, of all the frequency modulation stations thus far authorized by the FCC, only three or four have been assigned service ranges less than fifty miles—and these are in smaller cities with limited trading areas. Reception up to one hundred miles is not uncommon, and some of the mountain-top ("Class C") transmitters under construction will be heard consistently at 250 miles.

This weekly column of FM news and discussion has been inaugurated to serve the swiftly growing FM audience. There is much about FM which bears further explanation, there are mistaken notions that should be corrected, and a continual progress which must be reported. Letters from readers are always welcome. We shall be glad to answer your questions, and if you do not yet have FM service in your locality, advise you whether any is in prospect.

Radio Contests

You Can Win! This Department Will Help You Get More Fun and More Money Out of Contesting. Look Here for Ideas, Tips, News, Winners!

By LORRAINE THOMAS

LAST week, when this department made its bow, three objectives were announced. 1. To give contestants full information about contests. 2. To help contestants win with suggestions and tips. 3. To encourage contestants with stories of winners. These are the sights we're shooting at. We can't guarantee you a winner, but we can point the way to plenty of fun with a pleasant dose of self-education for good measure.

For a Radio Drama—$2,000!

If you're one of the thousands who have dreamed of being a writer, here is the opportunity of the year. Radio's first prize offer for radio drama writing has been announced by Jean Hersholt, star of CBS' "Dr. Christian." Open to amateurs as well as professionals, it will be called the "Dr. Christian Award," and under its terms the author of the best radio script submitted to a board of judges between February 1 and May 1 will receive a prize of $2,000.

This will be the first award ever given for radio drama. There have been song-writing contests. There have been awards for novels, non-fiction and other literary works. Now radio offers opportunity. The winning script will be selected by judges who are authorities in the theatrical, radio and literary world and will be broadcast early in June when the award is made. In addition—and this is most important to amateur writers—scripts which do not win but which can be used on the "Dr. Christian" broadcasts will be purchased at current rates, which may vary from fifty to three hundred dollars.

EXPLANATION: Most radio contests are managed in such a manner as to require that the contestant listen to the program in order to get full information. Therefore, except in extraordinary instances, details given in this department must be supplemented by announcements—which may change from week to week—on the broadcast itself.

—THE EDITORS.

7. Any resident over 18 years of age of the United States, Hawaii or Canada may compete except employes of Procter & Gamble, their advertising agencies and their families. Contests subject to all Federal, state and Dominion regulations.

Wylie. Reading such a book will help you to avoid many of the pitfalls waiting for new radio writers. It will give you authentic information on the mechanics of scripting.

Building an Entry

How are you progressing on the Procter and Gamble "I like Velvet-Suds Ivory Soap because . . ." contest? If you've been struggling to make your entries sparkle in the first two contests (there are six of them) and seem to be running out of ideas, perhaps you need a pep talk on how to build an entry. Always remember that a contest entry must be carefully built. That takes work.

Knowledge of the product is the keystone to success. It's your job to learn everything you can about it. First use the product yourself. Also use three or four competing brands and make comparisons. Collect all the advertising matter you can find about the product and about its competitors. Go to the library; consult encyclopedias. In a word, become an authority on the product.

Then, when you sit down to write your entry, don't try to do it in twenty-five words. Write a hundred, five hundred or a thousand words. Out of it all, choose what you think is best. This is work, but maybe it's work worth doing when the prize is $20,000.

NAME THE SONG you like best to hear Marion Claire (above) sing on "Chicago Theater of the Air" (Sat.). You can win up to $300

Send in a Slogan

While you're diving for bigger pearls don't forget Movie-RADIO Guide's own Defense Bond and Stamp Slogan Contest. Your bond slogan may win a $25 defense bond. Your stamp slogan may win a $1 defense stamp. Make them twenty-five words or less—and send them in!

Listen to "Dr. Christian"

There is no short cut to winning a prize like the "Dr. Christian Award." Nor can this department undertake to give prospective contestants a course in script-writing. Two suggestions can be made.

First, listen to Jean Hersholt's broadcast on Wednesday night over your CBS station. Study actor Hersholt as he interprets his role. Study the kind of story "Dr. Christian" presents. Try to plan your entry to harmonize with the general character of the broadcast, but don't imitate. What's wanted is something new and fresh.

Second, get a good book on radio writing from your public library. For example, "Radio Writing," by Columbia Broadcasting's brilliant Max

PORTIA FACES LIFE

Movie-Radio Guide Fictionization: Follow the Thrilling Adventures of Woman Attorney Portia Blake on These Pages (Part III)

This is the third instalment of Wiley Maloney's fictionization of the radio program "Portia Faces Life," heard Monday through Friday over NBC (5:15 p.m. EST) under the sponsorship of Post's Bran Flakes.

In last week's instalment, Portia had decided to take a new angle in her fight to free Parkerstown slum-dwellers from cruel exploitation by a corrupt political gang. With her friend Kathie she went down into the slum district, rented a room in a decrepit rooming-house on Railroad Avenue. While Portia and Kathie were in their room, the landlady, Miss Daisy, took in a man wounded in a gang shooting, and Dr. Holton, the city health department physician with whom Portia had been working, treated him for bullet-wounds. Listening through the paper-thin walls, the girls were astounded to hear Holton taking orders from Lambert, Parkerstown racketeer and chief lieutenant of Boss Connelly. Now go on with the story.—The Editors.

PORTIA'S curiosity was satisfied to some extent next morning at breakfast when Buck Weaver, one of Miss Daisy's steady boarders, came in with the morning Herald.

The story of the shooting at the White Laundry was on the front page. A blaring black headline told of another racket shooting, only this time the racketeers had done the suffering. There was a big picture of Bill White, the hero, and a statement given by him to the newspaper.

White's statement said that a racketeering protective organization had tried to get money out of him and, when he refused, it threatened to ruin his business. When they came last night, he was ready for them, and one of the men who tried to break into the laundry was shot. White's story told how he knew the man was wounded, and if the police just found him they'd have a clue to the entire organization.

Buck read the story aloud and then pointed to the box in which the Herald appealed to any doctor who had treated the man with a bullet-wound last night to come forward.

"White certainly shot off his mouth," Buck said.

"Yes," Miss Daisy agreed, "and if he's not careful his head will be shot off. Buck, I want you to get Mr. White over here right away. There isn't a minute to lose."

Buck went to the telephone and Portia asked Miss Daisy why she didn't go to the district attorney with the information about the wounded man.

Miss Daisy whirled on Portia. "I didn't ask you any questions about your affairs last night," she said, "and I don't propose to answer any of yours. Just mind your own business."

"I didn't mean any harm—honest."
"Well, you're much better out of something like this. I'm right in the middle and wish I was anywhere else but."

"Do you mean you're afraid to go to the district attorney?"

"That's it, young lady. I'm afraid and so is every person in this whole district. They're afraid—they're all afraid."

Suddenly Portia knew why the complaints that she and Walter had gathered so many weeks before had all been denied. Someone, something was terrorizing these people. But what? Or who?

Portia and Kathie excused themselves and went back to their room. Kathie had to go to the laboratory for work and advised Portia to get out of the rooming-house herself. But Portia insisted that she'd see the rest of the day through alone. Shortly after Kathie had gone, Portia almost regretted her resolve to remain. The reason for her sudden fear was a knock on her door. But she unlocked it, and there in the dim hallway stood Buck Weaver.

But he didn't stay outside. He came into the room, pushing Portia before him. He closed the door behind him and locked it. Portia stood in the middle of the room, ready to defend herself against this new menace. But Buck Weaver didn't try to harm her—he only laughed at her fears.

"You know," he said, "I thought I'd seen your face before. It just dawned on me who you are. Your Portia Blake, the woman attorney." Buck's voice took on a harsh note. "Just what in the devil are you doing snooping around here? If you think you can make trouble for Miss Daisy and the others down in this neighborhood, you've got another think coming. Miss Daisy is too decent a dame to be sold down the river."

AMONG MYSTERIES in which Portia (above) has been delving, greatest is Dr. Stanley Holton (left). Why, she wonders, has Dr. Holton, of the City Health Department, been working with gangsters?

"I'm not going to harm Miss Daisy," Portia said. "I'm not going to hurt anyone if I can help it."

BUCK grabbed Portia's arm and forced her downstairs. They stopped outside the living-room door and Portia was told, in a hoarse whisper, to listen and "see what a swell dame Miss Daisy really was." Portia could hear Miss Daisy talking to a man she called Bill. Portia guessed it was Bill White. Miss Daisy was telling him that he'd have to leave town.

"You just walked into trouble," she said. "First, by not paying up the protection money and, second, by shooting off your mouth. Don't you know you've got a wife and kids. You'll have to get them all out of town. I'll let you know when things have died down here."

"But I haven't any money," White replied. "I can't leave without money."

Portia, standing behind the green portieres, heard Miss Daisy rummaging around in the drawer of the old secretary in the room. Then Miss Daisy came back to White.

"Here," she said, "is two hundred dollars. That ought to see you through until you hear from me."

White promised he would leave and Portia was more mystified than ever. What was Miss Daisy doing? She permitted Lambert to bring one of the racketeers into her house and now

Feminine Forum

WHEN CUPID COMES

By ALBERTA NORTH

LOVE doesn't work on schedule even though long ago a special day was set aside for lovers. It may be that a messenger will come to your door this Valentine's Day bearing some lovely gift from "the one" to you. But it might just as likely be next month or next year.

Of course it is true that Cupid is sometimes awfully backward, and for that reason old St. Valentine, that martyred Roman priest who became the special patron of lovers in distress, has come in mighty handy. He has a lot of helpers this year, and more than a few feminine hearts are going to skip a beat on February 14 when they open such valentines as Richard Hudnut's R. S. V. P. perfume, reclining on a red-satin sachet heart, or Irresistible and Blue Waltz perfumes packaged in heart-shaped boxes, or an Ace of Hearts from Lightfoot Shultz (a white heart-shaped soap).

Certainly Houbigant's pastel-pink heart-shaped box, ornamented by a beribboned key which opens to reveal a generous flacon of either Quelques Fleurs or Le Parfum Ideal, would make a serious dent in any female's heart.

But as we said before, Cupid is cagey, and he's just as apt to pass your door and pop up some other day when you least expect him. So keep yourself in readiness. You never know.

Did you ever have anyone say to you, "How nice you look today"? That isn't flattering, although it's meant in all good faith. The insinuation is that you must have looked a pretty sight some other day in order to be thus complimented. It's femininely impossible to look up to the minute every hour of every day, but you can try, just the same. You can see to it that no detail of good grooming is overlooked whether you're dressing for office, party or just for home. We didn't really mean just for home. That's an easy trap to fall into. How do you know but what prankish Cupid will choose some quiet afternoon when you're not seeing anybody to walk in quite unannounced?

This doesn't mean that you have to go around without relaxing for a moment. You can go around the house in a pair of slacks or a housecoat, but you can see to it that you are just as charming in informal clothes as in your best party frock.

Joan Alexander, lovely radio actress heard on "The Story of Mary Marlin," says you should spend at least ten minutes applying your make-up carefully and skilfully. Maybe it means getting up a few minutes earlier, but it's certainly worth it to have the security of feeling that comes from looking well groomed. Miss Alexander says also, "Never go to bed until you have removed every trace of make-up, no matter how tired you are, or you'll end up with an old-looking skin."

And she's so right. You can't put beauty off—you can't say, "I'll start my exercises tomorrow," or "I'll make up by brushing my hair twice as much tomorrow." You haven't that much time. There isn't that much time in the world. And Cupid won't wait. Build up a routine and stick to it. Pretty soon you'll reach a point where if you go to bed without getting in that hundred licks to your head you'll feel you've committed a grave offense.

Cupid is partial to beauty—that's the way things are. But with beauty experts everywhere ready and willing to offer advice free of charge, with scientists perfecting new creams and lotions, and with cosmetics counters groaning under their loads of beauty aids, even a girl who wasn't born beautiful won't be able to escape that fatal dart. (Not that she wants to!)

If you're ready, Cupid will find you.

As an added service to its readers MOVIE-RADIO GUIDE recently introduced this weekly feature, "What's Cooking!" Guest cooks have been invited to give their favorite recipes and a monthly contest will be run to determine the best recipe of the month.
 See below for details.—The Editors.

VARIETY is the spice of life, they say, and it's certainly true as far as foods are concerned. Perhaps varied flavors aren't vitally important to health, not in the way that vitamin and mineral content are, but they are essential to appetite—and it's a rare individual, indeed, who can eat without appetite.

Consider Columbus if you don't think herbs and spices are important.
 He was looking for a swift route to India to bring back the spices of the Orient for the jaded palates of the Old World when he stumbled on the Western Hemisphere. Although the New World has borrowed a great deal from the Old, it has never fully accepted European cooking habits. Even the peasants of Europe and Asia usually use a much greater variety of spices than the American housewife.

Now, with the new attention being paid to health values in food, plus the stress on economy, herbs and spices are getting new recognition. A cheap cut of meat, a wholesome ordinary soup, green salads, can be turned into gourmets' dreams with the help of the right seasoning.

We wouldn't think of boiling beef without benefit of salt and pepper until it becomes like old leather (the custom among plains Indians), but how many of us enhance a stew with bay and thyme and other seasonings?
 It is true that some herbs and spices are rather expensive—more so now that the Orient, home of many of our favorites, is involved in war and shipping is precarious, but, fortunately, herb farms have been developed in this country where practically all the essential seasonings are produced.

Although the initial expense of setting up a herb cupboard may seem a little costly (ten to twenty-five cents or so for a small package), when you think how little you use and how long they last, it's a mere drop in the family budget. Thyme, that sweet-smelling herb once used by the Greeks as an incense in their temples and the source of thymol, adds zest to many dishes.
 Basil, mint, marjoram, chervil—there are endless varieties of herbs which will give new meaning to your meals and will give you a reputation as a cook of unequalled prowess. Of course, you have to take a little trouble to learn how to use them, but there are available cook-books on herbs. How much you use is a matter of individual taste.

MRS. NESBITT, housekeeper of the White House, is a herb addict. She uses them in soups, salads and stews.
 She says: "I have vinegars flavored with different herbs and find that their use gives a variety that is welcome . . . Just yesterday we had a delicious green salad to which the dash of herbs gave a distinctively different and delightful taste.

"Stews are a fine art. It takes fine cookery and a keen taste for flavor to make a really good stew, or ragout. I love them and often have them for myself. One can add so much to them and have such a variety by the use of herbs."

Portland Hoffa, the wife of Fred Allen, is another herb-user. Above you see her shelling peas, preparatory to making a delicious green-pea soup with mint taken from the "A. B. C. of Herb Cooking," by Mary Grosvenor
 Ellsworth. Here's the recipe:

1 quart fresh peas	1 teaspoon sugar
1 onion	4 tablespoons butter
1 large sprig mint	3/4 cup cream
1 teaspoon salt	2 egg yolks

Shell the peas and break up the pods; wash pods and boil for two hours or so in water in which other vegetables have been cooked. Strain, add the peas, onion, mint, salt and sugar and three pints of water in which pods were cooked. Cook until peas are tender, then rub through a sieve, add butter and a teaspoon of spinach juice (if you want) and bring to boiling-point. Season more if needed and just before serving add the egg yolks diluted with cream. Cook, stirring constantly for five minutes, but do not allow the liquid to boil. (You can use condensed milk mixed with milk instead of cream if desired.)

If you would like to have further information on use of herbs in cooking send a stamped, self-addressed envelope and I shall be glad to send it to you.

MAYBE Fred Allen's famous wit is due to the fact that his wife, Portland Hoffa, likes to use herbs in her cooking. The ancients gave sage its name because it was supposed to supply wit and wisdom

she was helping one of Lambert's victims. Just how did Miss Daisy fit into the picture?

The two women had a showdown that morning. Buck told Miss Daisy, after White had left, that her newest roomer was Mrs. Portia Blake. At first Miss Daisy "flew off the handle," but Portia convinced her that she meant no harm in being here; that she sincerely was trying to help all of the people in the slums. Miss Daisy, partly mollified, argued that one woman couldn't be of much help.

"You can't put out a forest fire with a teacup," Miss Daisy said.

That night Doctor Holton visited Kline again and found the patient doing very well. Portia waited until Miss Daisy and Doctor Holton left the patient's room, then she opened her own bedroom door and confronted the doctor in the hall.

"Mrs. Blake!" he cried. "What on earth are you doing here?"

"I might ask you the same, Doctor. I might also ask you why you haven't reported this man Kline's bullet-wounds."

Doctor Holton started trembling. But he didn't beg for himself. He merely asked Portia to go easy on Miss Daisy, saying something about the landlady being the salt of the earth, the only stand-by these people had down here.

"If you attempt to get any justice for Mr. White," he said, "it will just react on Miss Daisy."

"I'm not here to make trouble. Doctor. But I want the whole truth. Why are these people so frightened? Why are you so frightened? Why are you working for this bunch of racketeers?"

IT WAS then that the truth came out.

Doctor Holton explained that Connelly and Lambert had a hold on practically every person in the slums. For example, Miss Daisy had a daughter who had been raised away from the slums. This daughter, Nancy McAdams, doesn't even know, the doctor said, that Miss Daisy is her mother. But Nancy McAdams plans on getting married to young James Fitzgerald. What if Lambert, who knows the whole story, tells Nancy?

"What about yourself, Doctor?" Portia asked.

Doctor Holton rubbed his chin and ran his hand through his hair.

"Well," he said at last, "there's no sense of your going into my connection with the racketeers. I don't care any longer what happens to me and I'd rather not tell you now what Connelly has on me. I'm just warning you that you'd better not try to do something down here that you're not equipped to carry through. These men—Connelly and Lambert—play for keeps."

Portia thought that over for the rest of the day. Then she talked to Buck Weaver for about an hour in the afternoon and learned that Lambert kept the names of his racket "customers" in a "little black book." This book not only listed the various rackets but also the names, addresses and amounts of money taken.

Portia snapped her fingers. "The whole thing is simple," she said. "We've got Mr. Lambert where we want him!"

Buck looked at her as though he thought she'd suddenly taken leave of her senses. "Just how do you mean?" he asked in a puzzled voice.

"All we have to do is get that little black book. Do you know where he keeps it?"

"Sure. In his office safe."

"But you know how to crack a safe, don't you, Mr. Weaver? You told me so yourself just a little while ago. Now, would it be too hard for you to help me get that book?"

Two days later, Portia had the "little black book" in her hands. Now she knew she could go to work. At last she had a weapon to hold over Lambert's and Connelly's heads.

Portia left Miss Daisy's boarding-house and returned to her own cottage. From there she called Lambert and made an appointment to see him at the Green Mills Cafe, which he owned and operated.

As Portia entered the cafe, she noticed that the chief of police had just left. Lambert, she thought, must have been giving the chief a lecture for not finding the thief who had burglarized his safe the night before.

Lambert ushered the woman attorney into his office and bowed her into a seat.

"Now," he asked smoothly, "what can I do for you?"

Portia told him in plain words that she had his black book in which he so conveniently had listed the proceeds of his various rackets.

"It's very interesting reading," Portia said, "and I'm sure that the grand jury would like to see it. The grand jury will see it, too, if you don't lay off Bill White. And nothing more is going to be said about exposing Nancy McAdams and spoiling her society wedding. Nothing is going to be done about a lot of these people—or else."

Lambert was whipped and he knew he was whipped. He could understand the language Portia was using, particularly the "or else" part of it. He promised no harm would come to Nancy McAdams or White.

"And there's another little item," Portia said. "I want a building permit for a new tenement down on Railroad Avenue. I want that permit to be okayed by the first of the week—or else."

Portia was kept waiting for a time when she called on Boss Connelly the next evening. Then he entered the room.

"All right," he said gruffly, "let's get down to business."

Portia tried to argue Connelly around to a more liberal viewpoint concerning the slums on Railroad Avenue. But Portia couldn't bite through Connelly's tough mind. All he wanted was Lambert's "crime sheet." He offered Portia a job, said she could name her own price.

"I'm not niggardly," he said.

Portia shook her head. She refused to conciliate. The book, she told the political boss, was not for sale. Finally Connelly threatened her.

"You're playing a dangerous game, young lady. One of these days your foot will slip and you'll fall off the tight rope."

Portia came back at him hard. "I'm your only protection, Mr. Connelly.

As things stand now, all I have to do is release that little book to the press and you and your whole machine will end up in the penitentiary. I'll give you just one week to clear out of Parkerstown. I mean that . . . or else."

The next day the telephone in Portia's office rang, and Christie, her secretary, said that Doctor Holton was waiting in the outer office. Portia said to send him in. When he entered and came across the room with an outstretched hand, Portia noticed that he look worried and shaken. Was she wrong, or had he been drinking? He seemed very nervous and flustered.

"Don't you feel well, Doctor?" Portia asked.

"Mrs. Blake," he said, "you can't kill off a man like Connelly so easily. He's not going to pick up and leave without a fight. What's more, Mrs. Blake—can't I call you Portia—what's more, please don't stay at your cottage tonight. I've heard something's going to happen—I don't know just what. But take Lambert's book and Kathie and go stay with Miss Daisy."

"But—"

"But me no buts. Please, Portia, for my sake, do as I say. I hate to be so mysterious, but I think that's the place for you."

PORTIA and Kathie both were mystified, but that night they followed Doctor Holton's suggestion. With Miss Daisy, they tried to play a three-handed rummy game, but it wouldn't come off. They all felt nervous and jumpy. Why had Doctor Holton sent them here for the night? What was behind his mysterious warning? And where was the doctor?

Miss Daisy sent Buck out to find Doctor Holton and Portia tried to quiet Kathie's nerves. The house creaked and groaned in the high wind blowing outside.

When Buck came back, he told them he'd found the Doc all right, but he'd gone off on another bender—a bad one. The Doc always took to drink when things went wrong.

But what had caused Doctor Holton to fall off the wagon again? Did it have something to do with his warning to Portia?

Finally they all want to bed. Kathie couldn't sleep. She paced the floor and kept Portia awake. She insisted there really was something wrong with the house—something was hanging over it, brooding, waiting to fall.

Portia fell off into a nervous slumber, but Kathie remained awake. She tried to talk herself out of her fears, but she couldn't. Abruptly, she leaped from the bed. Was that footsteps she'd heard in the alley outside? What of it? She fell back on the pillow and dozed for a while longer. When she next awoke, she smelled smoke.

Kathie crawled from bed, went to the door, unlocked it and looked outside. Her screams brought Portia awake in startled horror.

The whole stair-well of the old house was a raging inferno of flames!

GENERAL ENTERTAINMENT

By ARTHUR MILLER

Walt Disney's animated artistry and Irving Berlin's musical mastery, enlisted by the U. S. Treasury Department to show the pride Americans should feel in being able to pay their income taxes to help the victory effort, accomplish their purposes effectively and entertainingly. Disney's Donald Duck feature, "The New Spirit," is being shown in theaters throughout the nation. Berlin's tune, entitled "I Paid My Income Tax Today," is destined for a similar reign, given impetus by radio, records and roadhouse bands . . .

Game manufacturers aren't turning out many games especially designed for use in air-raid shelters. But there is a trend in this field toward more combination sets which can be carried conveniently. One such set, which costs less than two dollars, contains chess, backgammon, checkerboard and domino facilities. This is a favorite gift for soldiers . . .

Thirteen of Norman Corwin's radio dramas have been published in book form. "Thirteen by Corwin" (Henry Holt Co., $2.75) contains such specimens of the radio writer's contributions as "The Plot to Overthrow Christmas," "They Fly Through the Air With the Greatest of Ease," "The Odyssey of Runyan Jones" and "Radio Primer." In a preface by Carl Van Doren, Corwin is described in geometric relationship to Marlowe thusly: "He is to American radio what Marlowe was to the Elizabethan stage." Corwin's dramas not only are good listening but also are fascinating reading . . .

If you keep pace with the new popular dances, you'll soon be concentrating on Arthur Murray's latest, called "The Mixed Grill." Inspired by the song "Arthur Murray Taught Me Dancing in a Hurry," which Dorothy Lamour sings in her new picture, "The Fleet's In," Mr. Murray conceived the dance which is done to the song. It really is a concoction. There's a dash of rumba, conga, Lindy Hop and Big Apple. The piece de resistance comes when the lady falls, only to be caught by the gentleman. This portion of the mixture is called "dropping anchor."
