The Marconiphone Model 51 (5-valve) receiver is a very finished article. It presents uncommonly acute sensitivity with tuning of utter simplicity and tone which is a marvel of realism. And it brings into being all the advantages of battery-less radio. With either A.C. or D.C. Mains it can be operated entirely from electric light supply. Publication No. 453B gives full particulars. Please send for it. If you haven't electricity, Model 51 can, of course, be operated from the ordinary battery-accumulator installation.

Their Picturesque Surroundings.

A view of Rjukan.

NOW that world radio has brought the people of all countries on speaking terms, it may be of interest to learn something of the most secluded spots from which strange voices come. The first picture is of Rjukan, from whose station, on 448 metres you can hear the Oslo programme relayed. The second is of a typical Norwegian valley, in the west, where broadcasting has come as a miraculous boon. The illustration shows clearly the isolated character of such valleys. A sparse population, consisting almost entirely of small farmers, who are also independent landowners, secure a living from the soil in the brief summer or, from the fishery in the fjord that reaches miles and miles up into the submerged part of the valley. The making of railways, where practicable, the coming of the automobile and the consequent bettering of highways, have brought these valleys more into touch. Many communities still remain, as of old, cut off from connection with the neighbouring valleys by the barrier of impassable mountains, or, where not impassable, at least so formidable as to preclude the desire for mutual intercourse.

Electricity at all events is highly developed in Norway. These homely-looking dwellings are well equipped with modern forms of electric lighting, warming, and cooking. In one or two other respects they have also developed. In some of them one can hear the sound of the band and the hum of voices from the Savoy Hotel in London, and in very many of them the home-dwellers can dance to the music of the jazz band of an Oslo hotel. The coming of radio only serves to emphasise still more the extraordinary mingling of old and new conditions to be met with in the country homes of Norway. Fancy an old woman, who has never in her life seen a railway train, chuckling at the droll sounds heard between the items on the programme of a great London hotel.

The scenery of Norway is familiar from advertising posters and from illustrated papers, but few tourists even are aware of the busy little hives of industry that lie hidden far away in certain lonely spots amongst the mountains. Seventy-five per cent. of the country is wholly uninhabitable, and one-fifth only of the area is capable of cultivation. Norway is a mass of granite, or, as the people call it, grey-stone. There are few minerals worth the working. The wealth of the country lies in its fisheries, its agriculture, and its forests. Saw-mills and paper-mills abound, and boat-building is skilfully carried on. Yet if you took the train from Skien, in the south-east, to Notodden, 423 metres (709 kc.), there will be met with the first indications of industrial energy. If the traveller proceeds farther by the electric railway he will, after his train has been transported for twenty miles by the ferry on a lake, reach Rjukan, where there is one of the largest electric power-stations in Europe. The power-station at Notodden produces 60,000 horse-power, and is used in the production of carbide, for the extraction of iron; and for the manufacture of wood pulp. But Rjukan is the place where the Norsk Hydro operates in the producing of saltpetre, the "arc process" for getting the nitrogen from the air by means of electric power. Twenty-five years ago Rjukan was the home of a few farmers. To-day it can boast of only eight or nine thousand as its population, but these are all engaged in the saltpetre enterprise, and their efforts serve to indicate the vast possibilities of the use of Norway's immense water power. The country has falls to give 10,000,000 horse-power and to supply Denmark and Holland, provided transmission were not so difficult. At present not more than one and a half million horse-power is in use.

The upper station at Rjukan produces about 130,000 h.p. The water is brought through a tunnel in the mountains, four miles long, and after being used in this station, which is seen in the photograph, it is passed down pipes to the larger station in the valley. Then the water, having been tamed and harnessed in the service of man, once more regains its freedom and, as the beautiful river Maana, bounds away down the slope to the salt fjord which is the sea. In these two stations 300,000 horse-power is produced. They cost 6 to 7 million pounds, much of it foreign capital. This last year the company paid 6 per cent., but in good years they pay up to 15 per cent. Professor Birkeland was the discoverer of the process used at Rjukan, and he hit on it by chance when attempting to invent a method of discharging cannon by electricity instead of with ammunition. The air is blown through furnaces and the nitrogen in the air oxidises so that nitrogen dioxide is formed, and, in contact with water, forms nitric acid.

This is, in short, the story of a big undertaking in the field of electricity.

A Wireless Set on the Ocean Wave.

By SEAFARER.

I CANNOT claim to have been one of the seafarers who made a hobby of listening in the early days of broadcasting. But I have had several of these enthusiasts as shipmates, men who built their own sets, sometimes with advice from the professional "Sparks" on board, more often without. Results were good, bad, indifferent, and frequently amusing, the most wonderful of all being those one heard of from men belonging to other ships, who "had regular concerts every night right across." The perfect reception, apparently in any circumstances, that they claimed and their loyal shipmates vouched for, can only be explained on the supposition that they had overcome the atmospheric nuisance in a very thorough manner.

One man I sailed with bought himself quite an expensive set in New York and never got any results at all except by a fluke. He had his aerial carried away once or twice to start with, and as he wasn't very "handy" and not too popular with the senior officers, he had to depend on juniors to rig it for him in a more or less efficient fashion. He was allowed to charge his battery from the ship's juice, but unless "Sparks" or a junior engineer was at hand to guide him, he was apt to connect it up the wrong way. It was marvellous how that battery stood up to the abuse it got first and last, but it was still smiling at the end of the six months' voyage. There was a loud-speaker connected to the set in the "old man's" room, but it had a bad effect on the skipper's temper and it was usually switched off.

But the amateur at sea generally does better than this. Marine engineers, many of whom have sets, have as a rule a good working knowledge of electricity, besides being expert with tools, and I have seen some really excellent sets built at sea, and can vouch for the results attained. When several "wireless fans" are numbered among the ship's company there is often some rivalry, and perhaps, since seamen are boyish in their ways, some jealousy in evidence. In one case where they amounted to about half the total complement, the skipper refused to allow any more aerials to be rigged, as he "didn't want the ship to look like a floating birdcage."

I had not been greatly interested in "wireless," and probably would not have had a set now but for a sequence of events started by the general strike. That upheaval prevented the ship from getting any nearer home than Dunkirk one voyage, and stopped my home leave. Wandering through the narrow, old-fashioned streets, feeling fed up with things in general, and idly scanning the shop windows, I came across a neat little four-valve set, which at the current rate of exchange (about 180 francs to the pound) was a bargain that appealed to a Scot. I bought the whole outfit, aerial wire, batteries, spare valves, 'phones and loudspeaker, and on the way to New York I rigged a fine aerial and fitted the set up in my room. The multitude of American stations that flooded the ether as we headed westward was confusing to a novice, but a little practice in tuning made all the difference. "Morse" from the ice patrol vessel was my first capture, and I got my first music from WJZ, Boston (WEEL) was second, and off the Newfoundland banks I had my first experience of "atmospherics." I remember thinking that it was like listening to a concert in a railway station where half a dozen locomotives were taking turns at blowing off and whistling.

When it's Friday in Florida . . .

In port I had little time for listening in, but before we left the coast I was familiar with a lot of American stations and their "slogans," the "World's Play Ground" being much in evidence as we moved south. On the subsequent trip to Australia, via the Panama Canal, I had some interesting results. The Florida stations were the last I heard before passing through the canal, and in the Pacific I early made the acquaintance of Los Angeles (KFI). He was quite an old friend before I lost him, our last communication by loud speaker being at a distance of 2,700 miles, while we were still on speaking terms by 'phone at 4,800 miles in spite of the frequent electrical storms of the tropics, which can make a racket that puts anything met with in temperate zones quite in the shade.

Before I lost KFI I had got hold of Brisbane (4QG). For several evenings I had been searching for an Australian station, and I was investigating Brisbane's wavelength when he came, the first item being an old Scotch song I hadn't heard since I was a boy at school. Clear and loud came the words, "Last night there were four Marys, This night there'll be but three," and a homely sound they had to a wandering Scot away in mid-Pacific. The same evening I picked up Auckland (IYA), and when both concerts ended with "God Save the King" I felt that I was among my ain folk again, and had a foretaste in imagination of the genial welcome that I have always met with in Australia and New Zealand. It was a novel experience to listen to the Friday night programme from Los Angeles, and, by merely altering the tuning, to change over to the Saturday night concert in Brisbane, but the difference of time enabled me to perform this "black magic."

The Australian Stations.

Sydney, Melbourne, and Adelaide came in that order, and supplied me with regular entertainment on the Australian coast, one interesting item being a commentary on Cobham's arrival at Sydney. I lost them all comparatively early on the homeward voyage via Suez. Perth, though a powerful station, was a disappointment. Off the Leeuwin I could get better reception from Brisbane. Shortly after we had crossed the line I was having my usual experimental combing of the ether after dinner when I raised some queer squeaks and moans. It sounded as though I was just "on the edge" of some instrumental music, but all my tricks of tuning made no difference. I had decided that something was wrong with the set and started to look for slack terminals, when it occurred to me that it might be an Eastern station broadcasting native music. It turned out to be one of the Indian stations, and my set was giving its normal truthful reproduction. I fear I have no ear for music—of that kind anyway.

Red Sea Interference.

Before we passed Cape Guardafui I was in touch with one or two European stations, but all the way up the Red Sea there was a lot of interference, both atmospheric and morse from shipping, and it was impossible to recognise them. After leaving Port Said I had the pick of a lot. Eiffel Tower and Daventry soon made themselves heard. I got 2LO first just off Malta, and a day or two more brought me into range of other home stations. The programmes from these compare favourably with the average American or foreign broadcasting.

In the round-the-world voyage I have outlined one thing left a lasting impression on my mind—the extent and majesty of the British Empire. During by far the greater part of the time it took I was within reach of stations which concluded their programmes with "God Save the King." Listening to that majestic measure in mid-ocean, thousands of miles from the homeland, gave me always a thrill of pride in the race to which I belong, for—

"You may take hold of the wings of the morning,
And flop round the earth till you're dead;
But you'll never get away from the tune that they play
To the blooming old rag overhead."

Broadcasting in Shanghai.

WHEN radio was first introduced to China is difficult to trace and still remains a matter of conjecture. In all likelihood it was brought in by foreign steamers calling at Chinese ports around 1899. Soon afterwards Chinese vessels began to be equipped with radio sets. This new invention, however, was not commercialised until recent years. In the spring of 1924 the Kellogg Switchboard and Supply Co., of Shanghai, started to broadcast a daily regular programme and has continued to do so. With the development of broadcasting, Chinese and foreign residents in the International Settlement and the French Concession have shown a growing interest in radio, and an increasing number of radio sets is being installed in their homes. Broadcasting and receiving in Chinese territories are not permitted on account of Government restrictions. It was the Kellogg Company's station, which was instrumental in saving the lives of many missionaries and others during the recent outbreak of civil war (as reported in World-Radio of August 19 last).

The number of radio users in Shanghai is unknown, but is estimated to be in the neighbourhood of 10,000. The number of radio importers is placed at 15 and that of dealers at 25.

Radio sets are either imported ready made or are made locally of parts imported. The prices of radio sets range from 8s. to £150. Shanghai has three broadcasting stations—namely, the Kellogg Switchboard and Supply Co., the Kobe Electric Works, and the Shanghai Mainichi Shim-bunsha, 2, Thorne Road. The Kellogg broadcasting station claims to have a wavelength of 342 metres and power of 250 watts, and a similar wavelength and power are claimed by the other two stations. While broadcasting is mainly for the purpose of entertainment, it is not infrequently employed as an advertising medium, though no fixed rates are charged for this service. At times broadcasting is also used for educational campaigns. Music is usually furnished by foreign or Chinese associations or by means of phonograph records, or by hotel orchestras. The close co-operation of phonograph dealers and broadcasting stations seems to indicate the business potentialities of Shanghai for both.

Practical Searching Hints.

Improving the Selectivity of the Receiver.

Not a few long-distance enthusiasts find a certain difficulty now in obtaining good reception from stations such as Langenberg, Lyons Doua, Witzleben, Brussels, and Vienna, owing to the wipe-out effect experienced from 5GB. In some cases this can be very greatly diminished by placing a small fixed condenser of first-rate quality between the aerial lead-in and the aerial terminal of the receiving set. The capacity of the average amateur receiving aerial lies between about .0002 and .0003 microfarad. By making use of a small series condenser the capacity can be very greatly reduced, with beneficial effects upon the selectivity. As a general rule a suitable capacity for the series condenser is .0001 microfarad; this, however, may effect a noticeable diminution in signal strength. It is a good plan to use a condenser of the "clip-in" type, in which case various values such as .0001, .00015, .0002, .00025, and .0003 microfarad can be tried and use made of that which gives the most desirable combination of signal strength and selectivity. Another method is to use a .0003 variable condenser instead of one of the fixed variety. This enables the optimum capacity in series with the aerial to be found very easily.

GERMAN TALK.—V.

(To be broadcast through Daventry from the London Station by Mr. F. Norman, on Monday, November 28, at 7.25 p.m.)

DER ZERBROCHENE KRUG.

Die Blumen.

Aber während dieses Vierteljahrs hatte Mariette wohl noch andere Geschäfte. Der Krug machte ihr viel Verdross und Mühe; und ausserdem wohl sonst noch etwas.

Vierzehn Tage lang sprach man in La Napoule von nichts anderm, als dem Krug. Und jedermann sagte, es sei ein Geschenk des Richters und die Hochzeit schon verabredet. Als aber Mariette feierlich allen ihren Gespielinnen erklärt hatte, sie wolle ihren Leib lieber dem Abgrunde des Meeres als dem Richter vermählen, fuhren die Mädchen nur ärger fort, sie zu necken, sprechend: „Ach, wie selig muss es sich ruhen im Schatten seiner Nase.“ — Dies war der erste Verdross.

Dann hatte Mutter Manon den grausamen Grundsatz, dass sie Marietten zwang, den Krug alle Morgen beim Brunnen am Felsen zu schwenken und mit frischen Blumen zu füllen. Dadurch hoffte sie Marietten an den Krug und an das Herz des Gebers zu gewöhnen. Aber sie fuhr fort, Gabe und Geber zu hassen, und die Arbeit am Brunnen ward eine wahre Strafe für sie. Zweiter Verdross.

Dann, wenn sie morgens zum Brunnen kam, lagen zweimal in der Woche auf dem Felsstück daneben immerdar einige der schönsten Blumen, schön geordnet, recht für die Pracht des Kruges geschaffen. Und um die Blumenstengel war immer ein Papierstreif geschlungen, und darauf geschrieben: „Liebe Mariette!“ — Nun musste man der kleinen Mariette doch nicht weismachen wollen, als wenn es in der Welt noch Zauberer und Feen gäbe. Folglich kamen die Blumen und die süsse Anrede derselben von Herrn Hautmartin. Mariette mochte nur nicht daran riechen, bloss weil der lebendige Atem aus des Richters Nase sie umsäuselt hatte. Inzwischen nahm sie die Blumen, weil sie besser waren als Feldblumen, und zerriss die Papierstreifen in tausend Stücke und streute sie auf die Stelle, wo die Blumen zu liegen pflegten. Aber das ärgerte den Richter Hautmartin gar nicht, dessen Liebe unvergleichlich gross war in ihrer Art, wie seine Nase in ihrer Art. Dritter Verdross.

Endlich aber entdeckte es sich im Gespräch mit Herrn Hautmartin, dass er gar nicht der Geber der Blumen wäre. Wer sollte es nun sein? — Mariette war über die unverhoffte Entdeckung sehr erstaunt. Sie nahm von der Zeit an zwar die Blumen lieber vom Felsen, roch auch daran, aber — wer legte sie dahin? Mariette war, was die Mädchen sonst gar nicht zu sein pflegen, sehr neugierig. Sie riet auf diesen und jenen Jüngling von La Napoule. Doch erraten liess sich das nicht. Sie lauschte und lauerte spät hinein in die Nacht; sie stand früher auf. Aber sie erlauschte und erlauerte nichts. Und doch zweimal in der Woche des Morgens lagen immer die Wunderblumen auf dem Felsen, und auf dem darum gewundenen Papierstreifen las sie immer den stillen Seufzer an sich: „Liebe Mariette!“ — So etwas muss doch auch den Gleichgültigsten neugierig machen. Aber Neugier macht zuletzt brennende Pein. Vierter Verdross.

Bosheit über Bosheit.

Nun hatte am Sonntag Pater Jerome wieder über den Satz gepredigt: „Des Himmels Fügungen sind wunderbar.“ Und die kleine Mariette dachte: „So wird er's auch fügen, dass ich den unsichtbaren Blumenspender endlich entdecke.“ Pater Jerome hatte nie unrecht.

In einer Sommernacht, da es auch allzuwarm gewesen, war Mariette früh erwacht, und konnte nicht wieder einschlafen. Drum sprang sie freudig vom Lager, als das erste Morgenrot über die Meereswellen und über die lerinischen Inseln her gegen das Fenster des Kämmerleins blitzte. Sie kleidete sich und ging hinaus, Antlitz, Brust und Arme am kühlen Brunnen zu waschen; den Hut nahm sie mit, am Meer ein Stündchen zu lustwandeln. Sie kannte da eine heimliche Stelle zum Baden.

Um aber zu der heimlichen Stelle zu kommen, musste man über die Felsen hinter dem Hause gehen, und von da wieder abwärts, neben Granatbüschen vorbei und Palmen. Diesmal konnte Mariette nicht vorbei. Denn unter der jüngsten und schlankesten der Palmen lag im süssen Schlaf ein junger, schlanker Mann — neben ihm ein Strauss der allerschönsten Blumen. Auch sah man wohl ein weisses Papier daran, auf welchem vermutlich wieder ein Seufzer redete. — Wie konnte Mariette da vorbei kommen?

N.B.—Listeners are advised to provide themselves beforehand with paper and pencil, as a short dictation test in German will be given at the end of the talk.
The text of the dictated matter will appear in the next issue of "World-Radio."

SPANISH.

Aids and Hints for Students.—IV.

By W. F. BLETCHER.

Reverting to the first paragraph of my last article, I wish to call the attention of students to the peculiar way in which sentences like the following are rendered in Spanish:—

It is I who did it.—Yo soy quién (or el que) lo hice (or hizo).

It was they who complained.—Ellos fueron quienes (or los que) se quejaron.

It is we who are to blame.—Nosotros somos quienes (or los que) tenemos (or tienen) la culpa.

It would be quite wrong to translate literally and say: Es yo que; fué ellos que; es nosotros que; etc.

Notice that the verb following I who and we who may be used in either the first or third person in Spanish.

A question which is very often put to me by students is: When is as translated como and when pues?

The answer is that pues can only be used to translate as when the meaning is because; i.e., to express the reason for something which goes before. Thus:—

Sólo podemos entregar la mitad de su pedido, pues la otra mitad se ha echado a perder en el tinte. (We can only deliver half your order as the other half has been spoilt in the dyeing.)

Here pues means as or because. But if you invert the order and place the second clause first, you get:—

Como la mitad de su pedido se ha echado a perder en el tinte, sólo podemos entregar la otra mitad. (As half your order has been spoilt in the dyeing, we can only deliver the other half.)

Here as, meaning in view of the fact that, is translated como (or comoquiera que) and not pues. In short, como is used at the beginning of the first clause, and pues is used when as, meaning because, commences the second clause. Further examples are:—

Como no tenemos dinero, no podemos comprarlo. No podemos comprarlo, pues (porque) no tenemos dinero.

I always find considerable difficulty in explaining to students the exact difference between en caso que and por si, both of which are rendered in English by in case. The following examples will, I hope, make this perfectly clear:—

Agradeceremos a Vds. nos manden una copia por otro correo por si se extravía el original. (We shall be glad (grateful) if you will send us a copy by another mail in case the original should go astray.)

Now here por si, though I have translated it in case, would really be better rendered by lest. If we said en caso que, the meaning would be quite altered. This will be clearly seen if en caso que is placed at the beginning of the sentence: “En caso que se extravie el original, sirvanse Vds. mandarnos una copia.”

In other words, en caso que makes the sending of the copy dependent on the original going astray, whereas por si calls for the copy in any case as a safeguard against possible loss.

You will often hear in Spanish the expression por si acaso used like this:—

Yo no creo que él se olvide del arreglo, pero mándele Vd. un recado por si acaso (lest perchance). (I don't think he will forget the arrangement, but send him word—a message—in case he should.)

Alguien ha dejado este paraguas; lo dejaré aquí por si acaso su dueño viene a buscarlo. (Someone has left this umbrella; I will leave it here in case the owner should come for it.)

In both these sentences en caso que would be quite wrong.

And now a short story in Spanish:—

Una señora entró en una tienda de modas acompañada de una amiga. Después de probarse casi todos los sombreros que había en la tienda, se lanzó (she pounced) con alegría sobre uno que estaba sobre el mostrador (counter).

—¿Qué tal me va éste?—preguntó a su amiga, poniéndoselo (putting it on).

—A mí me parece muy ordinario (common, dowdy)—contestó la amiga. La otra se lo colocó a otro ángulo antes de decidirse.

—Sí que es ordinario (it is common);—dijo—no lo tomaré después de todo. En esto (at this point) una señora que detrás de ellas esperaba con paciencia dijo amargamente:

—Cuando Vds. hayan acabado de probarse (finished trying on) mi sombrero, me lo pondré yo (I will put it on myself).

FRENCH TALK.

Text of the dictation to be given at the end of the French Talk on Monday, November 21.

Ce qu'on trouve chez La Fontaine ce n'est pas la morale du catéchisme c'est la morale de l'expérience.

Elle peut paraître mesquine aux grandes âmes, qui aiment la vertu pour elle-même: mais est-ce une raison pour la proscrire? Est-il donc mauvais d'éclairer notre ignorance et de désabuser notre orgueil?

Sentences for translation:—

(1) Let him go and have this letter translated; Qu'il aille faire traduire cette lettre.

(2) I cannot refrain from shuddering when I think of it: Je ne puis (or peux) m'empêcher de frissonner quand j'y pense.

“Viâ Ether”

FRANKFURT-ON-MAIN is a station of which the transmissions, in most parts of the United Kingdom, can be heard very clearly; if, however, any readers should encounter any difficulties in picking the n up, they would do well to try to-night (Friday, November 25) for Koenigs-wusterhausen, at 7.15 p.m., as the high-power transmitter will devote the whole evening to “Frankfurt-am-Main und Cassel,” taking from the former a programme of sonatas with Walter Caspar as solo violinist, and later at 8.18 p.m. a Chinese hour to be broadcast by the relay station. Leipzig and Stuttgart, at 7 p.m., will give us solos and duets from operatic works of German origin.

To-morrow (November 26) Kiel, at 3.15 p.m., gives us liberal excerpts of d'Albert's opera Tiefland. At 7.15 p.m. we are given the choice of two good entertainments by turning to either Frankfurt or Breslau. By the former we shall be conveyed to Mayence for a gala choral concert, given by local societies assisted by the Municipal Orchestra, and greatly strengthened by soloists from Berlin and Darmstadt; from the “oder” station you should hear a cabaret programme followed by The Flower of Hawaii, a one-act operetta with music by Walter Kollo, one of Berlin's pet composers. Of the Italian stations at respectively 8 p.m. and 8.30 p.m., both Rome and Naples visit their favourite theatres; Milan, at 8 p.m., again broadcasts Puccini's sentimental one-act Sister Angelica: it is a score entirely written for female voices. If towards 9.15 p.m. from an apparently unknown source you should hear English syncopated songs, bear in mind that the Oslo studio at that time will present to its listeners The Three Black Cat Singers.

I hear that the new Polish transmitter at Kattowitz has been testing nightly on 422 metres, and that it is to be officially opened on November 27. For an ordinary broadcasting station the power is a fairly high one—namely, some 5 kilowatts, and, with some patience, I fancy, it should be possible to tune in to its transmissions. Seeing that Posen, a weaker relative, is fairly regularly received at good strength in many parts of the United Kingdom, I shall devote some little time to a search in the region of Frankfurt-on-Main, but somewhat lower in wavelength, of course, on and after next Monday night. By the way, on Tuesday, November 29, at 6.20 p.m., the Posen studio will give a performance of Mozart's opera Il Seraglio (The Elopement from the Seraglio), a beautiful score possessing a wealth of rich melodies. Warsaw, at 7.30 p.m. on the following evening, gives us a radio version of Kalmann's operetta The Bayadere.

Again, on Tuesday, November 29, we can pay a second visit to the Liceo Theatre of Barcelona at 10 p.m., from which EAJ1 is effecting a relay of The May Night, one of the many rarely produced Rimsky-Korsakov operas. Leipzig, at 7.15 p.m., will present Shakepeare's The Tempest with incidental music by Humperdinck.

Next Sunday (November 27) will provide us, as usual, with a great variety of entertainments. Kalundborg, at 7 p.m., relaying from the Royal Theatre, Copenhagen, a programme composed of music, songs, and dances of the Faroe Islands, should prove of fascinating interest. Barcelona (EAJ1), on one of its regular visits to the Liceo Theatre, will favour us with Acts 3 and 4 of Rigoletto. As the relay is timed to start at 5.30 p.m., I presume that it is an afternoon performance, and probably an early “matinée” for Spain. At Munich, at 7.15 p.m., we find a revival of Don Quixote, an operatic tragi-comedy in seven scenes based on the well-known Spanish classic, but with music by Anton Beer-Walbrunn; Fatmé, a two-act opera by Flotow, and featuring a humorous story from the reign of the Caliph Haroun al Raschid, forms the main portion of the Leipzig programme. Langenberg at the same time broadcasts a studio performance of The Waltz Dream.

Leo Slezak, who in the early days of last month gave a song recital in London, is now back in Vienna for the opera season. If you care to tune in to the Rosenhügel transmitter on Monday, November 28, you will hear him in the title rôle of Meyerbeer's opera Le Prophète, a very theatrical score based on a libretto by the French playwright Eugène Scribe. Although my advance notes do not specify the time at which the curtain rises, you may take it as being about 6.30 p.m. G.M.T., the hour at which most performances begin in the Austrian capital, Copenhagen, on the same evening at 8 p.m., will return to the Odd Fellows' Hall for the first season's concert of the Cecilia Association. The main work on the programme is Les Béatitudes, by César Franck, and for this performance the principal soloists will hail from the Danish Royal Opera House.

Almost every night during the coming week, Radio Paris, for its evening programme, provides both comedy and opera. On Monday (November 28) we are to hear Donizetti's The Daughter of the Regiment, a true French opéra comique, replete with military rhythms; on the following evening the studio gives us a mixed programme, with a Reynaldo Hann Festival, to include excerpts from his modern operatic works, including Nausicaa, produced at Monte Carlo in 1919. This is to be followed by a short sketch by the well-known French humorist, Georges Courteline, and the evening ends with a request performance of Offenbach's Les Deux Pêcheurs, but recently broadcast from the same station.

For Thursday, December 1, we are promised a classical hour at 4.45 p.m., consisting of a dip into Molière. Le Dépit Amoureux will be interpreted by Dorival and some of his fellow artists from the Comédie Française; at 8.30 p.m. excerpts from La Gloire by Gabriele d'Annunzio and selections from Mozart's Magic Flute. Again, on Friday evening (December 2) Radio Paris ensures a good performance of Molière's L'Avare by calling on M. Denis d'Ines of the Comédie Française to assume the rôle of the Miser Harpagon. With its usual liberality the studio adds to this entertainment a shortened version of Cimarosa's Secret Marriage (Il Matrimonio Segreto) which, similar to Pergolesi's La Serva Padrone, can be considered opera-buffa par excellence.

During this week listeners to Munich from their arm-chairs will be given an opportunity of doing the grand tour; on Wednesday, November 30, at 9.20 p.m., the station will pick up for their benefit whatever may be of interest in the ether, and on Saturday (December 3), from 9.15 p.m. to 11 p.m., through the medium of Daventry 5XX, they will dance to the strains of the Savoy Bands.

Finally, on Saturday, December 3, at 6.30 p.m., we must do our best to capture and hold Vienna, for a transmission of Die Königin (The Queen), an operetta by Oscar Strauss, which I believe is not known to us on this side of the Channel.

Both the new PTT transmitters Lille and Rennes in the north of France appear to be heard at good strength in the Southern counties of England. Lille, now on 287 metres, apart from taking its news bulletins and special entertainments from the Ecole supérieure, Paris, also broadcasts its own programmes, and recently has relayed concerts from both Roubaix and Tourcoing, two French cities to which its service is destined. Up to the advent of this 700 watt transmitter, French radio fans could only turn to Belgium or to Great Britain for their wireless concerts, and the installation of this small station has aroused considerable enthusiasm amongst the population of the three towns. I hear that at Fives the local barber now treats his customers to headphones, whilst they await their turn; and in the rue de Paris at Lille, a famous purveyor of pommes-frites, has installed a loud speaker in his window. From all accounts, the rush on “crystals” in the district has been unprecedented in France. There is a possibility that with a view to increasing its utility, the power of the station may be raised, and it is thought that the broadcasts would cover a wider area if the transmitter were transferred to the neighbourhood of Armentières, a district possessing a number of suitable sites. What an opportunity to make “Mam'selle” a lady announcer!

PTT Rennes, now operating on 294 metres, which either relays Lille or Paris, for the present only broadcasts on five nights of the week; the station is silent on Mondays and Fridays in order to allow its habitual listeners to pick up foreign transmissions.

With such opportunities for the use of electric energy, it is not surprising that Norwegian engineers and Norwegian chemists are well-practised men. Familiarity with the domestic uses of electricity will explain how it is that the homely peasant is less surprised at what a little crystal set can do for him than he would be at the sight of a performing animal. The hold that broadcasting has taken in these valleys is extraordinary, and the demand for more and more relay stations in these regions of dominating mountains that frown down on innumerable little scattered communities. They have come to rely on broadcasting to an extent that can scarcely be realised unless you are fully acquainted with the nature of the country. News, weather forecasts, market reports, all take on a curiously intimate association in the daily life, and even when the emigrant to America leaves his native shore, the departure of the large Norsk-America steamers is always accompanied by the sending of farewells in hundreds of short messages, broadcast to valleys such as those in the picture.

Then follows a lecture on the Faroese folk song dances and a number of Faroese songs. In addition, there will be a joint performance by the Faroese Islanders and the Danish ballet.

The New Copenhagen Station.

The new broadcasting station is expected to begin testing in the course of the next ten days. The wavelength will be the same as at present and the power about 2 kw.

The Danish broadcasting authorities have arranged some important concerts for this season, under the direction of famous European conductors and composers. The first of these took place on November 22. It comprised Czechoslovak music conducted by Oscar Nedbal, leader of the Slovakian national theatre in Bratislava. The next concert takes place on Wednesday, January 25, and will comprise Swedish music conducted by the composer Armas Järnefelt.

"Pasdeloup" Concerts from Paris.

It is interesting to note that for the present the Ecole Supérieure de PTT broadcasting station (458 metres) will relay twice weekly the famous "Pasdeloup" concerts from the Théâtre Mogador in Paris. These concerts, which take place every Saturday and Sunday from about 5.15 p.m.—7.30 p.m. (G.M.T.)—were founded as popular concerts by Jules Etienne Pasdeloup, the famous French pianist and conductor, in 1861, and since then have been given regularly. They are among the most excellent and interesting of the regular Continental concert events.

The Bergen station will, it is expected, shortly transmit its normal programmes on a wavelength of about 30 metres in addition to its medium wavelength of 370.4. The new transmission should be working early in December.

AUSTRALIA

(From a Special Correspondent.)

Radio has proved a good fairy to a Scottish woman who recently came out to Australia. Though she has been out for several months, she was finding a difficulty in accustoming herself to Australian ways. Everything was so different, so strange. She felt homesick. There is a four-valve set in the house where the Scottish woman is living. She is very fond of radio and never misses the children's session. One night recently at the conclusion of the bedtime stories she suddenly heard herself called. "Hello! Is Mrs. Blank from Greenock, Scotland, listening?" The woman nearly jumped off the chair with surprise as the familiar voice of Uncle Bass from station 2BL filled the room. "I want to give Mrs. Blank a very warm welcome to Australia," he continued. "She has come to a very fine country with six million people in it, and every one of them is her friend. I am sure I am speaking for them all when I tell you we are glad you have made Australia your home. You'll find conditions a little different at first, but you'll soon learn to know our ways, and become as good an Australian as any of us. Goodbye, Mrs. Blank; good luck." Quite a simple message, but it did much to cheer the lonely woman, who wrote expressing her deep appreciation.

CANADA

(From our Montreal Correspondent.)

Microphone Publicity.

In publicity and advertising campaigns radio is playing an increasingly important part in Canada. One of the latest demonstrations of its value to those who would reach the housewife was the broadcasting from the Montreal Household Show of a varied programme which was transmitted simultaneously from Montreal, Quebec, and Ottawa, through station CNRM.

Musical Education.

How much radio is doing in the way of educating the populace of Canada musically can be gathered from the excellent and varied programmes broadcast. One of the latest received here was composed entirely of music of composers of the pre-Mozart era.

Farmer "Fans."

From local radio dealers I learn that the farmers of this and the western provinces are taking more enthusiastically to radio, the improved sets enabling them to tune in many programmes which could not be heard in level outlying districts until the modern sets arrived. The farmers have made a lot of money this year, and are investing a great deal of it in automobiles and expensive radio sets.

Women Announcers.

BOMBAY, November 4

Progress is evident both in Bombay and Calcutta by the number of acrias on buildings, and shortly we hope that on arrival at either city the first thing people will notice will be a forest of acrias, as in London. Each station has now appointed a woman assistant station director, who shares in the announcing work of the European programmes.

Short Wave Transmissions.

Experiments are shortly being started on short-wave transmissions, and if these prove successful, it is intended to duplicate the transmissions of both stations on long and short waves, in order to give listeners who live beyond the normal range of the present 3 kw. transmitters a chance of listening on smaller and cheaper sets than is at present possible; the present transmissions touch only the fringe of the country for the listener of average means. If, as is hoped, this brings a substantial increase of revenue to the company, funds will then be available for the erection of further normal wavelength stations to serve the more intimate local needs of different provinces, where the difference of language makes anything but local stations useless for anything in the nature of educational work. Topical talks are becoming a popular feature of programmes, and during the last fortnight that Wireless Picture Transmission: British System.

Captain Otho Fulton has succeeded in transmitting pictures simultaneously with his Fultograph to four points ranging from five to fifty miles from Vienna, where he has a 2 kw. station of his own in his laboratory. He has made a demonstration at the British Legation in Vienna by invitation of the British Minister. He is to demonstrate his invention at Geneva in December, in the Palace of the League of Nations, where pictures will be received from the Geneva station of the Swiss Broadcasting Company, in the presence of the official League delegates. Ravag is determined to have the honour of being the first broadcasting company to distribute pictures by wireless to subscribers by means of this British invention.

Pictures by Wire: German Method.

On December 1 the postal and telegraph administrations of Berlin and Vienna will begin transmitting facsimile telegrams over telegraph wires by means of the Carolus system, and it is expected that soon after that date the public will be able to send telegrams in this way between the two capitals.

BULGARIA

(From our Vienna Correspondent.)

To Broadcast Next Year.

Though Bulgaria has as yet no broadcasting station, the most Balkan of the Balkan countries—for the Balkan Mountains themselves are in Bulgaria—is thinking very seriously about erecting one, and a start will probably be made early in the New Year. Quite a number of amateurs are now licensed to use their apparatus, which mostly comes from Vienna, all amateur transmitting being unauthorised until quite recently. The radio station, under State control, is near the city of Sofia, but is not itself powerful enough to carry messages far. A much more powerful station is soon to be erected. At the principal Sofia hotel radio music, received from all parts of Europe, alternates during the evening with that of a small orchestra, and a map of Europe, with coloured discs indicating the principal stations, which are illuminated as those stations are being received, is conspicuous on the wall of the dining-room. Sofia is two hours ahead of London time. I heard London, Munich, Vienna, Berlin, Zurich, and Budapest quite well while dining there a few days ago. Amateurs complain bitterly of atmospheric conditions at Sofia, and also of the constant morsing signals of the official station. There is a dearth of skilled radio mechanics in Bulgaria, and the cost of material is very high. But radio is beginning to "boom" in Bulgaria, where it is badly needed, as evenings are apt to be dull.

Faroe Islanders to Broadcast.

COPENHAGEN, November 18.

On Sunday, November 27, fifty visitors from the Faroe Islands will arrive in Copenhagen for a series of festivals. The first of these takes place at the Royal Theatre, and from there will be relayed to all the Danish broadcasting stations. The chief appeal lies in the old popular songs and dances which the Islanders will render in the original form in which the Danes of the Middle Ages performed them. These old airs and dances were last transported from Iceland, but live still in their original form on the Faroe Islands. The programme Presidential Address from the Air.

VIENNA, November 18.

Dr. Michael Hainisch, President of Austria, has created a new record by addressing the nation on the day following the eighth anniversary of the Revolution from an aeroplane which flew above and around Vienna for an hour. The wavelength used was 900, and the message was received in the station on the flying ground at Aspern, relayed to Rosenhügel, and thence to Graz, Klagenfurt, and Innsbruck. It was heard all over Austria with perfect clearness, and far beyond its borders also. The aeroplane carried, besides the President, seven other passengers and the pilot.

XXXIII.—Low Frequency Amplification.

AND now we come to the third alternative method of low frequency amplification. Last week we discussed the choke-coupled amplifier and found that a higher degree of amplification could be obtained with it than with the resistance method, but that it was more liable to introduce distortion. Now supposing we took a choke coil wound on an iron core, such as we considered in the last instalment, and instead of passing on the amplified voltage variations through a condenser to the grid of the next valve, we wound another coil on top of the choke and connected one end of it to the grid of the next valve and the other to the filament, we should have something of the same piece of apparatus as we used in a transformer-coupled high frequency amplifier, except that now the transformer has an iron core which is common to both primary and secondary winding. A transformer coupled amplifier has one great advantage over the other two kinds—namely that much higher amplification may be obtained per stage. On the other hand, it has all the disadvantages of the choke but in greater degree, since both primary and secondary are open to all the difficulties of design and tendencies to distortion, and in addition there are some difficulties to be overcome which are peculiar to the transformer alone.

Construction of Transformers.

The usual method of constructing transformers is to wind the primary and the secondary each in several sections. The same type of core as was illustrated in Fig. 35 of last week's instalment is in general use for transformers. The sections of the primary and secondary are placed on the core alternately, first a primary section then a secondary section, and so on. It is of the utmost importance that each primary section should be insulated from each secondary. A thin layer of waxed paper is often used. After assembly the primary sections are connected together in series and the secondary sections likewise. The transformer amplifier can give higher amplification per stage because the voltage variations across the primary will produce greater voltage variations in the secondary if the latter is wound with a greater number of turns of wire. Say that the secondary coil has four times more turns than the primary, we should obtain voltage variations four times as great. Thus if the primary gives an amplification of a value ten, the total amplification impressed on the grid of the next valve would have a value 40. This assumes no losses in the transformer, a condition which is unfortunately seldom achieved even with the most careful design. We must remember that the losses in the core are now twofold, effecting both primary and secondary, and that there are now two inductances both having self capacity and consequently in both there is a resonant frequency at which a greater reactance is afforded to the voltage variations than at any other frequency. The two resonant frequencies are different because the inductance of both coils is different unless the transformer is wound with a 1 to 1 turns ratio which in practice is seldom the case. The core, although of similar type to that which we considered in connection with the choke coil requires to be of specially careful design. Fig. 36 shows a typical transformer coupled amplifier. It is not normally practicable to use more than two stages of amplification. T1 and T2 are the coupling transformers. It is, of course, still necessary to apply a negative bias to the grids of the valves in order that they may be operated on the most effective part of their characteristic curves. C1 is a by-pass condenser. If there is difficulty in avoiding distortion due to the resonant frequency of the primary or secondary of the transformer this may be overcome by shunting the secondary with the resistance R1, although some reduction in the strength of signal will result.

General Remarks.

Although we are dealing with low frequencies we must not neglect to take some precaution against spurious coupling between the components of the amplifier which may give rise to low frequency oscillation. It is not necessary to space the wiring and the components with such care as in a high frequency amplifier, but some precautions are essential; for instance, it is bad practice to place two transformers very close together with the turns of wire composing the coils parallel to one another. Do not forget to pick the right type of valve and to arrange the circuit so that it is operated on the proper part of its characteristic curves. A valve in the last stage of an amplifier will require more negative grid bias than the others because it will have greater voltage variations to deal with. If a loud speaker is to be operated the last valve will have to provide quite considerable power quite apart from the process of amplification. We must pick a valve with a long straight portion to the left of the zero grid volts line and ensure that the maximum negative potential which the grid receives from the incoming alternations does not, when added to the auxiliary negative potential, produce a value which will work the valve on the flat or horizontal part of the bottom bend allowing rectification to take place. We must also ensure that the maximum positive swing of the grid does not allow grid current to flow. We must therefore use a low impedance valve having a very open mesh grid which will give a large output of power. To ensure the latter we must apply a high potential to the anode.

Finally, a correspondent has asked the writer to emphasise the superiority of the resistance coupled amplifier over the other types. This has already been indicated in an earlier instalment, but it may be stated again that for good quality reproduction there is no question but that the resistance method is the best, although for a given number of stages the total amplification obtained will be less than by either of the other two methods.

Last Week's Log.

By NORTHERNER.

THROUGHOUT the past week or ten days conditions for distant reception have definitely improved so far as signal strength has been concerned, whilst interference from static has been at a minimum, except on one or two occasions, fortunately not of long duration. This latter interference was undoubtedly caused by heavy snowclouds of which we, in this part of the country, have already had experience.

It is rather curious to have to report that with the improved reception conditions prevailing, increased Morse troubles have developed, almost certainly for this very reason, and those broadcast transmissions within the neighbourhood of 450 metres have especially suffered.

To go further into detail, I would mention an Italian station, working at about 545 or 550 metres, and which I believe to be Lugano. Very good reception is experienced, with only a small amount of fading. The transmission is frequently heterodyned, but I am not certain as to the identity of the second station. Zürich has been very disappointing of late, but Vienna (Rosenhügel) and Munich are nearly always excellent signals. There is much interference on 500 metres, which is unfortunate for Aberdeen, the third British station in my locality, considered in order of signal strength.

Lyons PTT is frequently very good to hear, but generally spoiled by distortion at short intervals, and also by bad fading. Langenberg and Frankfurt, and, I ought to add, both Hamburg and Stuttgart, are all almost always available for reception at excellent strength. I recently suggested Motala as a sure means of receiving the Swedish programmes, and this, of course, still holds good. Regarding the transmissions from Norway, however, there is no long-wave station in that country, and as Oslo is usually heterodyned, it is not easy to receive their programmes with any comfort. I find that Rjukan is very obliging, and through this station it is usually possible to receive Oslo with the minimum of interference, Morse excepted, and at very considerable volume.

Cracow appears to have changed frequency and is now quoted as being on 500 metres. On about 344.8 metres Posen comes over at good strength generally, and quality is very satisfactory. I fear that there will be some interference when this station and Barcelona are operating simultaneously, though up to the present I have not heard both at one time.

The question of relaying other programmes, viz wireless link, is becoming much more common on the Continent, and it is frequently very difficult to identify a newcomer without verifying programmes and making use of any and every small point which may be observed in the transmission, from which definite inferences may be drawn. Nothing is too small to note in this direction; personally, I once obtained the first clue to the identity of such a new station from the unequal beat of the metronome or clock used.

On the short waves, the most noticeable feature is the marked increase in the number of amateurs receiving on these frequencies, or so I judge by the extra oscillation which is to be heard.

KDKA has been heard rather weakly on 26 metres, but apparently this transmitter is also sending out at about 62 metres and also in the neighbourhood of 43 metres. On the morning of November 18 KDKA was coming over at much greater strength than either 2XAD or 2XAF, but unfortunately the quality was not good. Due to the late hour at which I located the particular transmission, I was unable to follow up the matter of wavelength, and as I was using a coil with which I was not entirely familiar, I must reserve my statement on this point. I have also noted a German-speaking station in the same vicinity, but dance music does not lend itself to easy identification.

The General Electric Co.'s 2XAD and 2XAF are up to the usual strength, and quality is remarkably good. Eindhoven still appears to be silent, whilst 5SW at Chelmsford is not often heard.

I wonder how many amateurs, after the last B.B.C. relay of 2FC Sydney through 2ME, heard the latter station switch on again after a short interval and relay back to us, and incidentally to any other part of the world, the test programme Australia was receiving from 5SW at Chelmsford.

Senatore Marconi on Short Waves.

"I am profoundly impressed with the enthusiasm of the people in the United States for radio," said Senatore Marconi, during an interview given in New York. The scientist added: "There are three things that have attracted my attention since coming to New York. First, the enthusiasm for radio; secondly, the practical purposes to which radio is put here; and, thirdly, I am surprised at the general knowledge of radio among believed the present broadcast band from 550 to 200 metres would ever be changed to short waves, necessitating the scrapping of present receivers and broadcast transmitters, Mr. Marconi replied: "I can see a big field for short waves. But they will play their most important broadcasting rôle in international exchange of programmes; that is, for long-distance broadcasting. The short waves have the ability to span world-wide distances with comparatively small power outputs. However, I believe the present waves, for example, as used in New York for broadcasting, are well adapted to the use for which they are put. I can see no benefit for New York broadcasters to shift to channels below 100 metres unless they desire to entertain Australia, Europe, or South Africa." In Mr. Marconi's opinion, fading remains the most serious obstacle to overcome, although, he said, it is worse on wavelengths between 200 and 1,000 metres than on short waves.

U.S.A. and Norway Exchange Programmes.

As a result of the belief that programmes will be interchanged regularly between England and the United States during the coming winter, Station WBAL, of Baltimore, Maryland, has begun to trade programmes with the broadcasting station of Bergen, Norway. The programmes will cross the Atlantic only in written form, however. A typical "All-American" radio entertainment has been drawn up for presentation by the Norwegian station, while WBAL will offer a characteristic Norwegian one.

A Change of Opinion.

Sir Thomas Beecham, the famous conductor, who once said that broadcasting was music's greatest enemy, will appear with his baton before the microphone of Station WOR in the New York City area. According to arrangements, he will make his début on January 10 at Carnegie Hall, in New York City, directing the New York Philharmonic Orchestra. The concert will be the first of a series, and Sir Thomas will appear as a guest conductor. Then, strangely enough, he is scheduled to conduct the Philharmonic when Station WOR broadcasts the eighth of a series of seventeen Thursday night Philharmonic concerts. That will be shortly after the younger generation. The elders are dragged into radio for entertainment, but youths are in it because they find it fascinating, and that is most fortunate. Youth has the punch and the go. That is what will send radio ahead. Radio offers many possibilities for the amateur experimenters. We have all been helped by the amateurs. It is a great asset to have such a great number of amateur experimenters interested in the science." Asked if he

he appears at Carnegie Hall. "Ever since the beginning of the present century there has been committed against the unfortunate art of music every imaginable sin of commission and omission," said Sir Thomas last year. "But all of the previous crimes and stupidities pale before the latest attack on its fair name—broadcasting it by means of wireless."

NOTE.

Readers desiring a postal reply should enclose a postal order for sixpence and a STAMPED ADDRESSED ENVELOPE in addition to the coupon. Those who wish to take advantage of our free service by means of these columns must give a NOM DE PLUME, in addition to their own name and address. PROPRIETARY TRADE NAMES MUST NOT BE USED AS NOMS DE PLUME.

WORLD-RADIO (No. 122).

For replies to questions concerning the identity of stations heard, this coupon should be cut out and forwarded, together with particulars, written on a separate sheet of paper, to Editor, World-Radio, Savoy Hill, London, W.C.

Particulars should include: Date and time, approximate frequency (or wavelength), call (if heard), fading or not, signal strength, and details of programme. N.B.—Each inquiry must be accompanied by a separate coupon.

The Alternative Postal Service.

In response to numerous requests, whilst retaining in World-Radio the usual free published service of "Which Station Was That?" we have instituted a paid postal service, which, we are confident, will enable a reply to be posted within forty-eight hours of our reception of a "Which Station Was That?" coupon.

The conditions are as follows:—

A charge of sixpence, payable by postal order or in postage stamps, will be made for each query specially answered by post; but six queries may be sent for a fee of 2s. 6d. Stamped addressed envelope must be sent, and each query should be accompanied by the coupon published in "World-Radio." All queries should be numbered, in order to facilitate reply. Letters must be addressed to the Editor, "World-Radio," Savoy Hill, London, W.C. 2. Envelopes to be marked in left-hand top corner "Postal Query Service."

If, owing to paucity of details submitted, or for any other adequate reason, the transmission cannot be identified, a further query will be answered free of charge. In this event, the answer form sent to the reader must be returned with the new application.

We are convinced that this alternative postal service will be found of considerable interest to many readers who desire an earlier reply to their enquiries than can possibly be given by publication in a weekly journal.

Note.—In the event of queries received in which readers have not complied with the conditions published, replies will not be sent by post, but will be found in these columns.

Mysterious Musical Intervals at Nürnberg.

LISTENERS when tuning in Nürnberg, the famous toy manufacturing town, will have noticed faint music, mostly singing accompanied by a large orchestra, during the intervals. This is not caused by a station on an adjacent wavelength, but is actually transmitted by Nürnberg, although quite unintentionally.

The special underground cable connecting the relay Nürnberg to the main station in Munich contains a second line used for broadcasting by "wired wireless" the performances from the Munich Opera House. Any subscriber to the ordinary telephone service can, for a small extra charge, listen regularly by means of his telephone to the excellent operas, which during ten months in the year delight the ears of the Munich audiences. This service encompasses, for the moment, the three towns owning broadcast transmitters, viz., Munich, Augsburg, and Nürnberg.

Induction effects are therefore the cause of this mysterious music, which can be heard faintly during even the slightest pause in the broadcast performance.

Germany's Campaign.

With the number of prosecutions of wireless "pirates" steadily increasing in Germany, this should be sufficient to deter any sane person from listening without a licence. The German postal authorities who are responsible for this side of broadcasting, however, do not think so, and have therefore recently raised the "recompense" paid to all furnishing information which will lead to the detection and prosecution of a wireless "pirate," from 3s. to 10s. and, as a further incentive, assure the "informants" that their name will on no account be made public.

The broadcasting companies, of course, help the authorities all they can by periodically issuing warnings to those listeners not having licences. Thus a short while ago the Bavarian stations broadcast in the middle of an interesting and highly amusing programme a "last and final" warning to pirates, and with good cause too, for the new postal campaign began on November 1. Certainly there can hardly remain any "pirates" from ignorance now, and the others well deserve what they get, even if it is a rather severe punishment or fine. Soon the picturesque name of "Schwarzhörner" (black listener) will have lost its meaning.

THE SOURCE OF POWER

There is limitless power in nature—in the vast coal beds, mighty waterfalls, great oil wells.

There is great power also in the chemical generation of energy in the Lissen New Process battery. Not only great energy, but energy which is long sustained and smooth flowing all the time you use it, never a sign of ripple in it, and never a trace of noise. That is why you get such clear reproduction when you use the Lissen New Process Battery, and that is why you find that your reproduction is as true and clear at the end of the longest programme as it was at the beginning, hours before. No other battery yields such power—no other battery in the same way yields such oxygen for your valves, because no other battery embodies the new process and chemical combination which Lissen alone uses because Lissen alone holds the secret.

Next time you want a good battery ask for Lissen New Process in a way which shows you will take no other. Ten thousand dealers sell it through the country at a price which brings it within the reach of all.

Why DX Coils XL

The unique "wound-on-air" principle of the DX coil gives it magnification properties that no other method of winding can equal. It is wound without a former. Many Radio Society members have embodied these coils in their sets, whilst the experts of "Popular Wireless" in constructing their 14 Valve set (the most powerful set yet used) selected these highly efficient coils. DX Coils are made in 16 sizes, as below:—

Valves with the Wonderful Mullard P.M. filament.

Generous valves—valves that give astounding performance, ample power and beautiful purity; valves that stand the knocks and jolts of a valve's life, because they are robust—and yet valves that are cheap in use, because they cut down current consumption and require only .075 ampere filament current—these are the valves with the wonderful Mullard P.M. Filament.

Fit them to your set, they will improve your radio reception.
